

KENNEDY, LBJ ROW BARED IN BOOK

By TOM WICKER
New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — The "final conference" between President Kennedy and Lyndon B. Johnson the night before the President was assassinated ended in substantial disagreement over political matters, it is alleged in the first installment of William Manchester's "Death of a President."

The installment, recounting the events of Nov. 21, 1963, the first day of the Texas tour that ended in Kennedy's death on Nov. 22, will appear in Look magazine next week. The magazine released the text of the installment Saturday.

Manchester describes in considerable detail the Texas political feuding that Kennedy hoped to quell by his scheduled three-day trip.

The author reports that on the night of Nov. 21, while resting briefly in the Rice Hotel at Houston, Kennedy sent for Johnson. What the two men said is unknown, Manchester writes, but he quotes Johnson as recalling that there had been no disagreement but somewhat contradictorily, an active discussion in which the two men were in substantial disagreement.

An eyewitness to Johnson's departure is quoted as saying that the Vice President looked furious, and Manchester reports that Kennedy later told Mrs. Jacqueline Kennedy, that "Lyndon" was "in trouble."

Manchester refers to this meeting as the final conference between the two men, but Johnson has recalled at least one later, more felicitous exchange between the two.

At the LBJ Ranch a few days after Christmas, 1963, Johnson, by then the President—told this correspondent and others that the last words Kennedy had spoken to him were:

"Lyndon, I know there are two states we're going to carry in 1964—Massachusetts and Texas."

Q. A woman lost some important papers—military and medical papers, Social Security card and Georgia driver's license — at our lumber yard in Seal Beach. We contacted Fort MacArthur, but they couldn't help. Can Action Line do something? R. L., Seal Beach.

A. Yes. ACTION LINE located Mrs. J.E.T., but it was a long search. Using her husband's military identification and the driver's license address ACTION LINE went to Hephzibah, Ga., population 676, then to Fort Gordon, Ga., where Lt. M.T.T. had been stationed. Next stop was the Oakland Army Terminal near San Francisco, then to the Adjutant General's office in Washington, D.C. Maj. Frederick Clinton, officer of the day, sent us to San Marino, Calif., where Lt. T.'s mother put us in touch with Mrs. T.'s father, who relayed our call to his daughter, Mrs. T. recovers her papers. The lieutenant and his wife were both raised in Long Beach, and Mrs. T. and her daughter are living here while awaiting the lieutenant's return from combat duty with the 1st Cavalry Division in Vietnam.

Action Line has been so well received, it now is starting "bonus columns", specializing in questions about sports, fashions, entertainment, what have you. For full details on this new feature, see Page A-4.

Q. How can I get in touch with an organization for people with above average I.Q.'s called Mensa? M. M., Long Beach.

A. Mensa, an international society for the supersmart, was founded in London in 1945. It is a loose-knit organization for persons whose intelligence scores put them in the top two per cent of the population, and has a membership of about 2,500 in the United States, 2,600 in England, and a smattering in other countries. Victor Vladimir Serebriakoff, the group's international secretary, scored 161 on the Cattell intelligence test — high as it goes — as an example of the intelligence quotients necessary. You can write Mensa at P.O. Box 86, Gravesend Station, Brooklyn, N.Y. 11223, or call the Los Angeles branch at 464-2831.

Q. Are there any private owners of submarines in the United States besides research laboratories and the government? J.H., Long Beach.

A. Yes. The Navy says there are no submarines — World War II and nuclear types — in private hands, but there are schools of miniature one and two-man subs built by companies specializing in underwater sports equipment. Some enterprising submariners have produced their own do-it-yourself U-boats. Obsolete Navy submarines are usually scrapped, donated to research groups, or reconditioned for foreign navies.

Q. Is it possible for a rank amateur gardener to "dwarf" a very young avocado tree? J. A., Lomita.

Action Line

A. Not even professionals are dwarfing avocado trees, reports Frances Ching, chief horticulturist for the Los Angeles County Arboretum and Botanic Gardens. Growth regulating chemicals are being used on flowering plants, but only one is being experimented with on elm trees. Nurseryman Bill Genschmer says you can try putting the tree in a small container to stunt root growth, or resort to trimming—not too severe or no avocados.

Q. How can a person become a notary public? W. C., San Pedro.

A. Richard Akemon, who knows from experience—he's a notary — says you must first write to Secretary of State Frank M. Jordan, Suite 117 State Capitol, Sacramento, Calif. 95814, and request a notary commission application. Applicants must be United States citizens at least 21-years-old and of good moral character. Return the completed application with a $5 fee and you stand a good chance of getting a four-year commission. Other expenses include a $10 premium for bonding, a $2 fee for swearing in by the county clerk and about $10 for a notary's seal, stamp and notarial record.

Q. Is it possible for an alien visitor to have his visa changed to a student's visa, or apply as a professional immigrant? A.V. Wilmington.

A. Robert Seitz, information officer for the Immigration and Naturalization Service, says an alien can change his visa if he has lawful immigration status and a certificate of eligibility from the school, approved by the attorney general's office, he plans to attend. Applications are made at the bureau's office, 300 N. Los Angeles St., Los Angeles. An alien may apply for professional status if he is qualified in his field, has been certified by the Department of Labor, and applies for adjustment. Aliens are not generally permitted to work, but there are exceptions for outstanding artists, or persons who can handle a job which has proven impossible to fill. Seitz also reminded aliens to report their address to the attorney general.

Las Vegas Blast Kills Buena Park Couple, 4 Others

12 Injured in Suicide's Motel Bomb

A Buena Park man and his wife were among six persons killed in the dynamite explosion that rocked a Las Vegas motel early Saturday. The blast was apparently caused by a former California man who fired a pistol into a dynamite bomb.

A special investigation team identified the Southland victims as John R. Auwaerter, 60, and his wife, Lillian, 58, of 7424 El Centro Way. Buena Park police said Auwaerter worked in Fullerton as a mailman.

A former Long Beach woman, identified as the former Mrs. Arnell Thornton, 58, also died in the blast along with her newlywed husband, George Brook, 70, of Sedona, Ariz. Officials said the pair had been married two days earlier in the Arizona city.

POLICE said the blast apparently resulted from the suicide-murder of R. J. Paris of Hollywood, who killed (Continued Pg. A-3, Col. 1)

HEROISM IN AIR

There's a thin line between tragedy and safety. Naval Reserve pilot Cmdr. Edward L. Bethel (right) scored that thin line heroically for a few tense moments Saturday. When his Skyhawk jet engine failed after takeoff from Los Alamitos Naval Station, he guided the falling plane away from a housing tract in Stanton, stuck with his plane until it was 100 feet off the ground and ejected himself safely from the plane. Above, Cmdr. Gerald Hoffman of the air station walks around wreckage of fuselage on field between Chapman and Katella avenues. Story on Page A-4.

Southland Shaken By Temblor

A mild earthquake was felt late Saturday night in Long Beach and other coastal areas of the county.

Officials said the temblor was slight. No damage was reported.

Scientists at California Institute of Technology in Pasadena were not available for comment on whether the quake registered on seismographs.

Dr. Charles Richter, who developed the Richter Scale of earthquake magnitude, was unavailable.

Apparently the quake was the strongest in the harbor area of Los Angeles County. San Fernando Valley residents also reported feeling the tremors.

CALL IT 'MADICARE' Headaches Galore Hit All Connected With New Plan

By BEN ZINSER
Medical Science Editor

It was July 1, 1966, and a little old lady—from Long Beach, not Pasadena—told a reporter:

"Young man, TODAY is Independence Day."

For her, and millions of others, it was M-Day Medicare Day—and independence from burdensome hospital bills.

At precisely 10:05 a.m. in Baltimore, Md., a Teletype clacked into action in Social Security Administration headquarters.

The message: Mrs. Lillian Grace Avery had just undergone surgery at Edward Hospital in Naperville, Ill.

Mrs. Avery, a 68-year-old widow, thus became the first person in the nation to be certified for Medicare benefits.

In another city a man stomped into a hospital and demanded:

"Medicare! I want Medicare!"

"Fine," said a nurse. "Who's your doctor?"

"Doctor? Who needs doctors? Besides, that's $3 extra."

But the tee-hee soon went out of the talk of those who recounted the above anecdote.

In Purcell, Okla., a hospital administrator reported that Blue Cross had rejected the claim of his hospital's first Medicare patient. The patient, unfortunately, died. Blue Cross's reason for rejecting the claim, according to the administrator: "The deceased patient had not signed out."

Thus came the first inkling that Medicare, called Medi-miracle by some, would some day be referred

AUTOPSIES DISPUTED 6 Specialists Call Kade 'Unreliable' As Coroner's Aide

By VINT MADER
From Our L.A. Bureau

A stern report by six specialists on work of Dr. Harold Kade, coroner's autopsy surgeon, in two murder cases has now been bared as a public document and promises further storms as he fights to stay in Los Angeles County service.

Details of the postmortem reports and the testimony of Dr. Kade on murder charges arising from the deaths of two women are repeatedly described by the six doctors in terms like "unreliable" and "unjustified."

The highly detailed unanimous finding elaborates a summary previously given to county supervisors by Dr. Theodore Curphey, chief medical examiner-coroner, with a report that Dr. Kade had resigned.

Dr. Kade, a senior medical examiner with 11½ years' service, is now battling to keep his job on the basis of an interpretation by the County Employees Association that submitted only a notice of intention.

The two Kade findings, challenged after the women's bodies were exhumed and reexamined, said the deaths of Mrs. Darlene Stearns, 27, of Gardena, and Phyllis Parr, 35, of Los Angeles, were homicidal.

The committee sums up, as Dr. Curphey had already released, that homicide findings were "not justifiable" on Mrs. Stearns and "could not be substantiated beyond reasonable doubt" on Phyllis Parr.

Neighbor Kills Berserk Trucker

By JIM HYNES

A berserk truck driver was shot and killed by a neighbor Saturday in Lakewood after he kicked in the neighbor's back door and threatened him with a hunting knife, according to Los Angeles County sheriff's detectives.

Detective Bob Lee said the dead man, Michael Hall McConnell, 30, was searching for his estranged wife, Sandra, at the time of the shooting.

Mrs. McConnell, 25, and her two small children were hiding in the bedroom of the Kyle Yaw's residence at 5832 Candlewood St. when McConnell, who had ripped up the interior of his own house at 5836 Candlewood St., a half hour earlier, crashed into the Yaw's home.

Lee said that Yaw told him that McConnell came crashing through the back door and ripped the telephone receiver off the kitchen wall as he entered the living room.

"I'M GOING to kill you," McConnell yelled at Yaw. Yaw according to Lee, said "Don't Mike. Don't come any closer." Then he fired twice with a .38 caliber revolver.

McConnell, hit in the stomach and right shoulder, died at 6:25 p.m. at Woodruff Community Hospital, Lee said.

A spokesman for the sheriff's homicide division said that Yaw had not been arrested but the shooting was still under investigation.

SNOW SLAB BREAKS

3 Rescued After Burial in Colorado Avalanche

Three young mountaineers, buried under a huge slab of snow that broke loose atop windy Loveland Pass in central Colorado, were rescued and revived Saturday by quick-thinking teams of forest rangers and ski patrolmen.

One boy at first was reported dead by the Colorado State Patrol. He was revived after 40 minutes of external heart massage and mouth-to-mouth resuscitation, administered by rescuers and a doctor who was aboard a bus that had been blocked by the snow across U.S. 6.

Two others buried under seven feet of snow also were revived, and three others in the party, all from a boy's home in Denver, escaped injury. One boy said he rode the crest of the 200-foot-high avalanche.

Two boys, Kenneth Landau and Michael Anderson, both 17, were taken to a clinic in Dillon, Colo., where Landau was reported in good condition. Anderson said he rode out the slide by kicking his feet and staying above the snow.

The two other injured climbers, Dave Fritzley, 18, and Don Porchapis, were taken by ambulance to Denver. Both were reported in good condition.

BAKER TRIAL

Bobby Baker, who built a fortune while he worked as secretary to the Senate's Democratic majority, goes to trial Monday in Washington on charges of tax evasion, theft and conspiracy.

The trial may not have the sexy overtones of earlier Baker controversy, but possible consequences of conviction — 48 years in prison and $47,000 in fines — are far greater than the mere denunciation the Senate Rules Committee gave him in 1965.

HUBERT ON AIR

"Great!" was how Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey described his first ride Saturday aboard an air cushion vehicle in Buffalo, N.Y.

The squat, seven-ton vehicle, like those used in South Vietnam by the Navy since May, took Humphrey and a party of 10 on a 17½ mile trip down the Niagara River that lasted 25 minutes, with the average speed about 50 miles per hour.

As the craft skimmed across the water and then over land—on a cushion of air—the Vice President was reminded of a powered snowsled ride.

"When I was home for Christmas, I scared the living daylight out of myself with a snowmobile," he said.

Secret Service agents demanded as safety precautions, that two helicopters and a chase boat accompany the Hydroskimmer, made by Bell Aerosystems.

EXECUTION OFF

A stay of execution for Darrell Devere Poulsen, scheduled to face a firing squad in the Utah State Prison Monday, was granted Saturday by Supreme Court Justice Byron R. White.

A court aide said White's action was taken pending the filing and disposition of an appeal to the high tribunal. He said no specific dates were set.

WHAT A FALL!

The Soviet press Sunday told of a Russian air force navigator who survived a 22,700-foot fall despite the failure of his parachute. He landed in a snowdrift.

Pravda, the official newspaper of the Soviet Communist Party, said the incident happened in January, 1942, when Ivan Chissov bailed out of his bomber after it was hit by German anti-aircraft fire, and his chute failed to open.

Uprising Erupts in Nanking

Combined Wire Services)

TOKYO, Sunday — Anti-Red guard forces have taken over the eastern Chinese city of Nanking, after bloody battles with Communist China's Red Guards, dispatches from Peking reported today. They said the city, 530 miles southeast of Peking, is in the grip of terror.

Nearly 1,000 Chinese were reported killed or injured in four days of fighting between opposing Red Guard and workers' groups. Japanese correspondents reported that army and public security forces loyal to propaganda chief Tao Chu, denounced as a counter-revolutionary by the Red Guards, have arrested 6,000 persons, according to wall posters in Peking.

Japan's Kyodo News Service said Red Guard wall posters in Peking reported 54 persons killed, 900 wounded and 6,000 arrested in clashes Tuesday, Thursday and Friday.

One correspondent, representing the newspaper Yomiuri, said defeated supporters of Chairman Mao Tse-tung had called for help from other parts of the nation.

THE CORRESPONDENTS

said the fighting and the appeal for help appeared on posters pasted on Peking walls Saturday. The posters were signed by the Peking branch of the Nanking Proletariat Revolutionists Organization, which said it received an emergency telephone call from a member who escaped from the city.

Hanoi 4 Points 'Truths,' Reds Say

By HARRISON SALISBURY New York Times Service

HANOI — So much speculation and excitement were generated in Washington, London and Paris by Premier Pham Van Dong's remarks last week on the war that Hanoi issued an official statement Saturday designed to bring the matter back to earth.

The speculation centered on Premier Dong's statement to this correspondent defining the nature of North Vietnam's program for resolution of the Vietnamese conflict. Foreign diplomats and press commentators read into his declaration two interpretations: that North Vietnam's position had changed and that its four-point program was negotiable.

THE PASSAGE in the interview that stirred excitement was as follows:

"We have our point of view and we have put forward four points, which constitute the basis for settlement of the Vietnam question. These should not be considered 'conditions.' They are merely truths.

"The most simple thing is to recognize our sovereignty and our independence. It involves only recognizing the points in the Geneva agreements. The ruling circles of the United States do not like to accept our four points, and particularly the third point. That means that they are still clinging to South Vietnam, that means they are still introducing themselves into a tunnel.

"Now what can you do about that? We must come to a solution on the basis of the four points. Whichever way you may go around, finally you must come to the four points." The premier continued: "Besides the four points, we have also put another point. That is to demand that the United States put, unconditionally and for good, an end to the bombing and all hostile activity against the North."

IN DISCUSSION later on, when Dong was asked to clarify further the status of the four points, he phrased his response thus:

"It is wrong to say that we are putting some conditions. What I have told you are not our 'conditions,' but conditions for a valid settlement. The question is how to reach a settlement which can be enforced."

Those are the premier's precise words. Friday they were officially restated as follows:

"The four-point stand of the Democratic Republic of Vietnam constitutes the basis of a settlement of the Vietnamese problem."

"THE FOUR-POINT problem is as follows:

"Recognition of the independence, sovereignty, unity and territorial integrity of Vietnam and the withdrawal of United States forces from the area pending reunification of Vietnam."

"Respect for the military provisions of the 1954 Geneva agreement, including those barring foreign forces."

"Settlement of South Vietnam's internal affairs by the South Vietnamese in accordance with the program of the National Liberation Front."

"Peaceful reunification of Vietnam by the peoples of North and South without foreign interference."

The question of the four points is particularly complex. When Premier Dong says they are not conditions that must be accepted prior to peace negotiation, he is speaking quite sincerely.

While Hanoi does not insist that they be agreed upon before it will sit down at the conference table, it does insist on a solution based on them.

Whether this is a distinction without a difference remains to be seen.

If the four points were made the agenda of a conference, the West would certainly presume that there would be give and take and that, in effect, the points were negotiable.

Among the 12 persons injured in the blast were a San Pedro couple, Steve Mariach, 70, and his wife, Katie, 67, of 927 17th St. They were reported in good condition Saturday night at Southern Nevada Memorial Hospital.

Their son, Steve Jr., told The Independent Press-Telegram Saturday that his parents were in Las Vegas celebrating their 47th wedding anniversary.

The dynamite bomb ripped open the three-story Orbit Inn Motel at 707 E. Fremont Ave. around 1:30 a.m. Saturday.

Police found a .25-caliber pistol believed used to detonate the dynamite. Ammunition for the pistol was found in a nearby car registered to R. J. Paris at a Hollywood address.

Dist. Atty. George Franklin Jr. said examination of the small Paris car revealed two sharp wires coming out of the battery.

FRANKLIN SAID it appeared Paris originally set the charge of dynamite to go off in his car, "but decided to change his mind and took it up to the room on the second floor instead."

"Based on what we know," Franklin said, "I am almost convinced Paris used the pistol to detonate the dynamite."

At mid-afternoon, firemen were still mopping up debris from the disaster that dismembered the bodies of victims and caused an estimated $200,000 damage to the motel, at which 52 guests were registered.

POLICE THEORIZED the bomb was fashioned from 10 to 14 sticks of dynamite and was triggered in Room 214 on the second floor—the room in which Mr. and Mrs. Paris were registered.

Investigators found the pistol behind the motel. It had been "pretty well banged up" from being thrown against a cement block wall by the force of the explosion, they found inbedded in a cement block wall. A woman's mud-spattered hand was found with wedding and engagement rings still on a finger.

A vacationing Idaho mink rancher, Lewis Palmer, 60, had his leg so badly shattered it had to be amputated. His wife, Laura, 65, was hospitalized for lacerations and shock.

3 TRAVEL TO HANOI U.S. Citizens Bid N. Viets to Talk

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two private U.S. citizens are reported to have gone to Hanoi to invite a number of North Vietnamese to a meeting at Geneva in May to examine the requirements for peace.

Accompanied by a Mexican diplomat, they have been to Japan and plan to visit Phnom Penh, Cambodia, on a similar mission, a spokesman said.

They undertook the trip with U.S. government approval, leading to speculation that they might bring back word of prospects for earlier talks aimed at ending the war in Vietnam.

Although they talked with State Department officials before leaving, there was no sign that they were acting in any way as representatives of the Johnson Administration.

A STATE Department spokesman was asked if the department approves or disapproves of the mission. He answered:

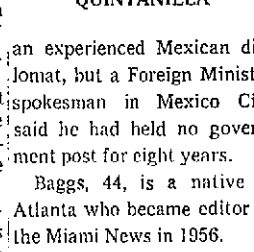

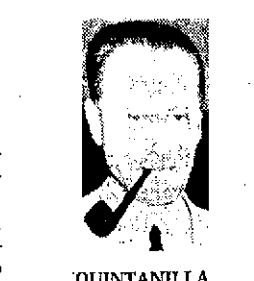

"It is not a question of approving or disapproving this project. They are not going on a mission for the United States government and are carrying no message from the United States to Hanoi."

First word of the mission came Saturday from the managing editor of the Miami (Fla.) News, C. Edward Pierce, who said in a statement:

"William C. Baggs, Harry Ashmore and Ambassador Luis Quintanilla have traveled to Phnom Penh and Hanoi to invite persons in both cities to attend and participate in a convocation to examine the requirements for peace.

"The convocation is being sponsored by the Center for the Study of Democratic Institutions. Baggs and Ashmore are directors of the center. The convocation is scheduled for late May 1967 in Geneva."

The State Department said it had validated the passports of Baggs and Ashmore to travel to Hanoi. Quintanilla is an experienced Mexican diplomat, but a Foreign Ministry spokesman in Mexico City said he had held no government post for eight years.

Baggs, 44, is a native of Atlanta who became editor of the Miami News in 1956.

ASHMORE, 50, won the Pulitzer Prize for editorial writing as editor of the Arkansas Gazette in Little Rock in 1958, for editorials written during the Little Rock school-integration troubles of the previous year. He now is chairman of the executive committee of the Center for the Study of Democratic Institutions, which has headquarters at Santa Barbara, Calif.

At the center in Santa Barbara, Frank Kelly, a vice president, said Baggs, Ashmore and Quintanilla are contacting "intellectuals, some of whom have government positions, in Japan as well as North Vietnam and Cambodia."

He said they went to Japan a week ago, are now in Hanoi and will go to Cambodia next. Plans call for them to return to Santa Barbara a week from today, Kelly said.

Delta Push by Allies Unopposed

SAIGON, Sunday (UPI) — U.S. Marines slogged through the swamps of a Mekong River Delta peninsula without major opposition Saturday in the first U.S. assault against the Communist-dominated area south of Saigon. Viet Cong forces apparently were tipped off to the offensive in advance and fled.

A communique issued Sunday morning as the drive moved into its third day said the big Allied force met only sporadic sniper fire in its push through the paddy fields of the Thang Phong Peninsula, 60 miles south of Saigon.

THE U.S. command said three Viet Cong had been killed and five others captured in the sweep by 5,000 American and South Vietnamese troops. The task force hit the beaches Friday in the first joint amphibious landing of the war.

No significant ground action was reported elsewhere in South Vietnam, but giant U.S. Air Force B52 bombers raided suspected enemy strongholds 28 miles northwest of Saigon before dawn today. It was the eighth B52 attack against the area since Thursday.

CLOSER TO SAIGON, Viet Cong gunners shot down two medical evacuation helicopters Saturday and both aircraft were destroyed. There were no reports of casualties. One of the helicopters crashed seven miles east of Saigon and the other about 20 miles southeast of the capital.

Bad weather over North Vietnam again restricted U.S. air raids Saturday, but a flight of U.S. Air Force F105 Thunderchief jets damaged the Am Thuong railroad bridge 65 miles northwest of Hanoi.

to by others as Medimess. Some also call it "Madicare."

It isn't that people didn't try.

The Social Security Administration put on 8,000 new employees. To its 620 field offices it added 80 more branches and temporary locations to accommodate the anticipated increased demand for services.

To 19½ million older persons were sent health insurance cards and a handbook explaining the program. Of these, some 17.5 million signed up for the voluntary medical insurance program and are paying a $3-a-month premium.

To 200,000 practicing physicians in the nation were mailed reference guides.

As Robert M. Ball, commissioner of Social Security, put it:

"The administration of the program involves the staffs of 6,700 hospitals, some 200,000 practicing physicians and their staffs, the staffs of almost 1,400 participating home health agencies, 74 Blue Cross organizations, 33 Blue Shield Plans, 15 insurance companies, several independent health insurers and over 75 group-practice prepayment plans.

"Medicare also involves thousands of employees in the Social Security Administration and hundreds in the U. S. Public Health Service, the Welfare Administration and 50 different state agencies."

Wilbur J. Cohen, under secretary of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, put it another way:

"It takes a forest of people, a mountain of skills and rivers of perspiration."

He can say that last part again. The administration of Medicare has been anything but "no sweat."

Problems — big problems — have arisen.

It's not easy to get to the root of this travail, for some persons don't want the problems aired.

Yet, unless some of these problems are solved, you—the public—are going to be hurt, financially and otherwise.

Q. What is the maximum alcohol content of beer in California? C.D.W., Long Beach.

A. Section 25815 of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Act says draught or bottled beer sold in California can contain no more than four per cent alcohol by weight. The section does not pertain to malt liquors, ale, stout or porter, sold under different licenses, and Special Investigator D.B. Weisel of ABC says these usually range between seven and 12 per cent.

Q. How many condemned men were executed during Governor Brown's administration? M.R.R., Long Beach.

A. Although former Governor Edmund G. Brown was an avowed and bitter foe of capital punishment, 35 men were put to death in the state's lethal gas chamber during his eight-year administration. The last to die was James Abner Bentley, 27-year-old stickup-slayer, executed Jan. 23, 1963. In the same period, the former governor commuted death sentences for 22 prisoners — four in a controversial last-minute move three days before he left office.

Q. Since the death of President Kennedy, I have been wondering where the 21-gun salute originated, and why don't we use a 20 or 19-gun salute instead? M.A.N., Huntington Beach.

A. Research and an assist from Chief Petty Officer Lee Quinn, of the Navy Public Information Staff, disclosed that the United States Navy adopted the 21-gun salute for chiefs of state in 1818 — when there were 21 states. England had used a similar salute for centuries, and other countries had varying numbers of gun salutes. On Aug. 18, 1875, the United States and Great Britain agreed to make the 21-gun salute part of standard international maritime law, and it is now recognized throughout the world as protocol for visiting heads of state.

SOUND OFF!

It seems to me that Social Security is getting out of hand. There will be another increase this year which will bring the total to $290 paid in by each worker, and for each worker by the employers. Other deductions are also up, and it seems time we took a good hard look at things. It seems we don't have much to say about it anymore, the lawmakers do things for us, and we don't even know what they do for us, and we don't even know about them. Let's get together and do something. Social Security is a must, but it's too much. H. S., Norwalk.

EJECTOR SAVES PILOT

Conked Out Jet Misses Houses

A Naval Reserve pilot Saturday steered his falling jet away from a Stanton housing area, then ejected himself to safety at the 100-foot level.

Cmdr. Edward L. Bethel took off from Los Alamitos Naval Air Station in a single-engine Skyhawk. The engine failed as he banked out of the takeoff pattern. He guided the plane over the housing tract to a ploughed field across Western Avenue between Chapman and Kattella avenues.

Bethel landed a scant 50 yards behind the plane, which exploded on crashing.

BETHEL, 36, of Santa Fe, N.M., a civilian pilot on weekend active duty, was uninjured except for a cut on his neck and some bruises. The shower of debris did no damage to the nearby homes.

Bethel summed up the accident briefly. "I got into trouble at about 1,000 feet when the engine conked. I had no choice but to bank right and to try to head the plane into an open field. When it was going OK, I ejected."

The crash occurred near the National Guard Training Center. The explosion hurled the jet engine over a six-foot fence and onto the parade ground.

The plane was carrying smoke bombs but otherwise was not armed.

Poland Pays U.S. Portion of Debt

WARSAW (AP) — Poland has made a partial payment of the 1967 installment on its dollar debt to the United States, U.S. officials said Saturday.

They said the Polish check was received Friday but declined to disclose the amount. It was assumed to be for several million dollars, but less than the full $9 million due last Monday.

RESPONSE TERRIFIC

'Action Line' Starts Bonus Columns: Sports, Styles, etc.

Action Line, new feature of The Independent Press-Telegram, is off and running after the first week of operation.

Reader interest and response — almost 1,100 telephone calls and 250 letters — has been staggering, and the cooperation of public officials, business spokesmen and law enforcement agencies has proved excellent.

The fledgling feature has big future plans.

In an effort to satisfy more and more readers, Action Line plans a series of bonus columns in special areas of interest such as sports, amusements, women's activities and household ideas. The first of the irregular series appeared in last Sunday's Independent Press-Telegram on the Amusement page.

Action Line, which pledges to get things done, cut red tape and stand up for rights, attempts to mirror reader, thinking, solve problems and get action when the reader fails.

The feature operates with few limitations, and fewer rules.

Action Line will not attempt to answer personal, medical or legal questions, but will tackle some of a general nature. Such personal questions should be taken to doctors and attorneys — men qualified to deal with specialized individual problems.

Readers are asked to call Action Line at 432-3451, between 9 a.m. and 9 p.m. Monday through Friday, or write Action Line, Box 230, Long Beach, Calif. 90801.

Limit questions to one per telephone call, or letter, because it speeds answers, but write or call as often as you wish.

Callers will be answered by a voice informing them they've reached Action Line, and explaining the operation. The telephone questions are recorded, then passed on to the Action Line research staff. Mail questions are processed daily by the researchers.

Telephone questions are handled by electronic recording secretaries. If there is no answer, or a busy signal, wait a few minutes then call back. Often the electronic recorders are overloaded by the rush of calls.

Space and time limitations make it impossible to answer every question, so Action Line attempts to dig into those with the widest general interest. Questions are not answered except in your newspapers, but often several similar requests are handled by a single answer. There is no limit to the number of times a question can be asked, and Action Line welcomes the tough ones.

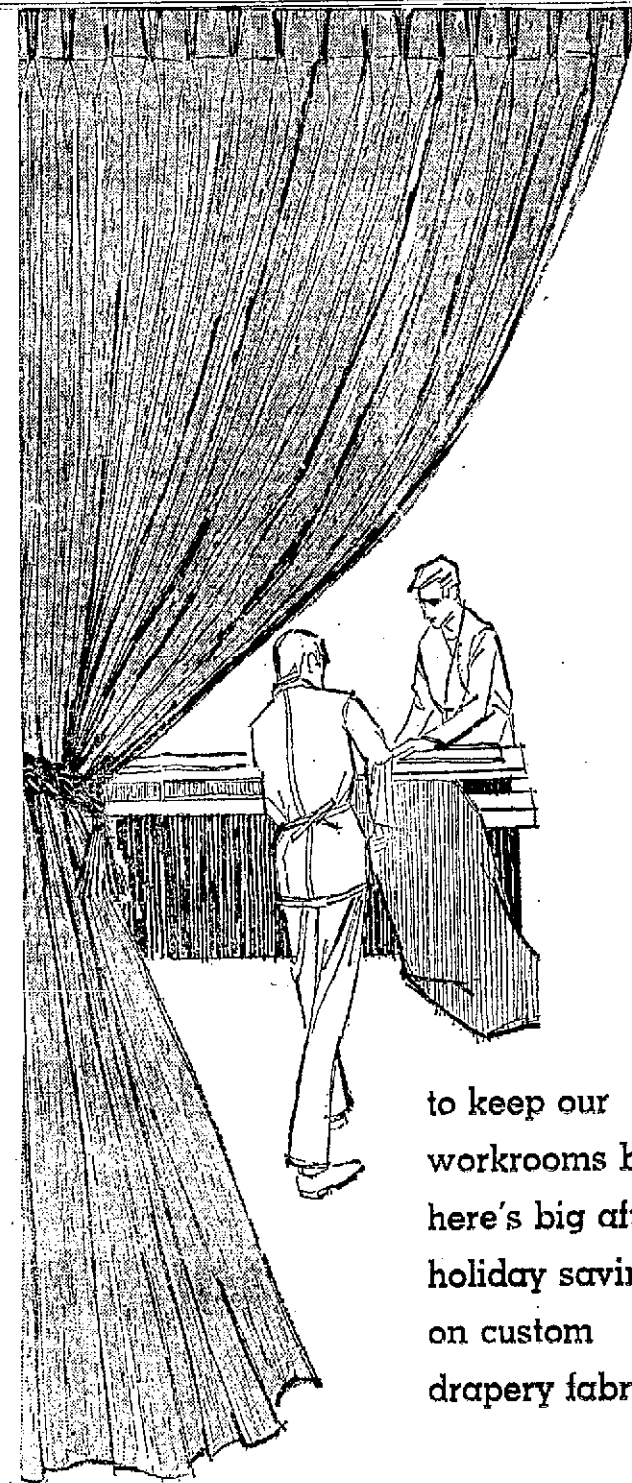

The research staff is ready, the reference books are poised and the telephones are hot — Action Line is open.

owner of 12915 Gramercy Place, Gardena, and Donald J. H. Dangler, 48, Hollywood bartender, were dismissed because of second post mortems done by Dr. Richard O. Myers as pathologist for the defendants.

IN THE STEARNS CASE, the committee's exhaustive study uncovered "definite microscopic abnormalities in the brain" and notes they partly resulted from an old case of the brain disease encephalitis, which had gone unnoticed in both of the autopsies.

"The encephalitis should have been reported by Dr. Kade and Dr. Myers," say the six, who list it as a contributing cause of Mrs. Stearns' death.

The encephalitis is the only detail on which the report faults the findings of Dr. Myers in both cases, but it enumerates many in each of the findings by Dr. Kade.

Referring to Dr. Kade's testimony in the preliminary hearing of Charles Stearns, in South Bay Municipal Court in April, that Mrs. Stearns suffered spinal-cord damage "while she was being strangled" (that could cause paralysis almost instantly and death in two minutes, the report contradicts that on four itemized points.

Also finding "incorrect" his conclusion she suffered a "fracture dislocation" of the neck, the doctors, including one representing Dr. Kade, take exception to his testimony before South Bay Judge Donald Armstrong that compared the deceased's spinal cord to a rivet cut by steel.

The find "unjustified" Kade testimony they quote from the preliminary's transcript about "severing effect of those two steel plates (two steel plates held together by a rivet) so that it slips, one on to the other, you know, the whole rivet goes through, that rivet would be cut off.

The transcript, among documents filed with the report, shows that under cross examination by Stearns' attorney, Donald Cadoo, the testimony drew a comparison with "shearing" of the spinal cord and instant death or other degrees of damage that could bring a stiff neck or lifetime paralysis.

Relative to the spinal cord in this case, the committee also itemizes: "No microscopic evidence of significant damage"; none of "damage which would produce softening of the cord," and finds the testimony about death in two minutes "was not justified" in the case.

ON THE QUESTION of a broken neck, the report notes its agreement with Dr. Myers's reautopsy and says: "There was no fracture present, as concluded at the second autopsy and by the examination of the cervical vertebrae by this committee."

The report of the committee, chaired by Dr. Lewis T. Bullock, who is chairman of the County Medical Association's medical examiner standing committee, is filed as a public document under a resolution of Supervisor Burton W. Chace that sent it for study to the county counsel, district attorney and chief administrative officer.

The new study, approved unanimously by the Board of Supervisors at its meeting Tuesday, brought cancellation of a new post for which Dr. Kade had been accepted effective Jan. 16 as chief forensic pathologist to the San Diego County coroner.

Supervisors, including Board Chairman Frank G. Bonelli and Kenneth Hahn, had expressed concern that on resignation as reported by Dr. Curphey, Dr. Kade might continue similar work elsewhere.

In the death of Phyllis Parr, the committee reported, that there were "definite abnormalities in the liver" indicating the disease cirrhosis that were undiscovered in the first autopsy.

It also condemns as "without basis in fact," Dr. Kade's report that he removed the spinal cord by chest-abdomen incision and examined it to find no injury there.

"Dr. Myers reported that the vertebral column is intact and neither it or the spinal cord have been previously dissected," the six doctors reveal, stating, "This was confirmed to the committee by Dr. Curphey."

They also align themselves with Myers on many other matters, including his direct contradiction of Kade's claim that the bladder and gall bladder had been opened.

The six, Dr. Leo Kaplan, nominated by Dr. Kade, Dr. L. Zeldis, Dr. Hugh Edmondson, Dr. Warren Bostick and Dr. Albert Hirst, and Bullock, also criticize failure to make microscopic studies on many points in both autopsies and to test for drugs known to have been in the possession of Phyllis Parr.

THIS FAILURE "in a suspected murder case is not consistent with proper medical practice," they say.

Atty. Gordon M. Emmanuel, who defended Donald Dangler in the case, says he holds a personal belief that the woman's death resulted from a poisonous effect through combining modern alcohol-depressant drugs that brought on a form of strangulation.

The committee concludes that "neither the cause nor the mode of death in this woman is apparent."

However, it gave as its consensus: "A combination of drug overdosage plus the effects of chronic alcoholism, including alcoholic liver disease, is a possibility." It notes that persons with the alcohol-related cirrhosis are more susceptible to drugs. They cannot be ruled out as "a factor in the death" so long after, and that effects of food-lack and vomiting might have contributed, it said.

In the dispute over resignation of intention, Dr. Curphey has written a formal notice of acceptance of resignation to Dr. Kade, who has responded with a letter saying he expressed only an intention.

This correspondence has not been made public, but the coroner has said he will not alter his position. However, a copy of a letter of Dec. 30 from Kade to Curphey was sent to Supervisor Chace, who is chairman of the supervisors' committee for the department, and is on public record.

Kade wrote that it would "constitute formal two-week advance notification" of a Jan. 15 employment termination. The letter also refers to an occasion about two weeks before when he "first indicated these intentions" to the coroner's executive assistant, approved in the first indication and, though "grossly inadequate," was now again being sought. The coroner has pending cases had not been since reported this as granted.

As I, P-T's Man, the Late Bill Hunter, Saw It

STRAIGHT STORY OF OSWALD'S END

When Lee Harvey Oswald, the assassin of John F. Kennedy, was cut down by a point-blank shot from the revolver of Jack Ruby millions of Americans witnessed the slaying on TV.

What they saw was a purposeful, pudgy little man striking without warning at the moment Dallas police were transferring Oswald from a City Hall lockup to the supposed security of County Jail.

Who was Ruby? Why had he slain the assassin? Was he an Oswald conspirator? Some of these questions lack complete answers today, despite reported deathbed denials by Ruby of any conspiracy and the Warren Commission's concurring viewpoint.

Readers of The Independent, Press-Telegram got one of the first — and best — word pictures of Ruby. It came from Bill Hunter, a young police reporter who flew to his native Dallas hours after the assassination of the President.

Some months after his prize-winning toils in Dallas, Hunter himself fell victim to an accidental shooting in the Long Beach police station. A few insatiably skeptical persons have pretended — without a shred of evidence — that the sudden death of Hunter was part of the fabric of mystery which enshrouds the assassination drama. These persons have imaginations which would make a flying carpet out of a spider's web.

Because it is part of the history of the Dallas tragedy, Bill Hunter's account of Jack Ruby's role is reprinted today. Written under the urgency of deadlines shortly after the events described, it helped Bill win two top awards — one from the California Newspaper Publishers Association and the other in competition with all Associated Press member newspapers of California and Nevada.

Here is Bill's story of Ruby the Avenger.

Dallas nightclub owner Jack Ruby (born Leon Rubenstein), ate a leisurely breakfast in mid-morning on Friday, Nov. 22, 1963.

After breakfast he discussed advertising with a newspaper salesman. The business conference at the newspaper was interrupted by reports of the assassination of the President of the United States. Ruby was only five blocks away from the slaying site.

He did not see the President at any part of his tour of the city.

The assassination stunned Dallas. People walked the streets silently, their faces tight and drawn. After the initial shock the normal hum of a busy, prosperous, booming metropolis died to a whisper.

Ruby, on this day in November, had been a citizen of Dallas some 14 years. He came to Dallas from Chicago after World War II and brought with him hints of a gangland background. He called himself the "Smiling Cowboy," when he first arrived and struggled to make his mark in the entertainment business.

He quickly changed his name from Rubenstein to Ruby and began a practice of meeting policemen and newspapermen for business reasons.

Closes Clubs

In the feverish activity Friday at the newspaper, Ruby remained quiet until he overheard telephoned cancellations of newspaper ads. Then he placed his ad announcing closing of his two clubs.

Ruby owns and operates The Vegas Room, an after-hours dance club in North Dallas, and the Carousel, a strip-tease club in the heart of the city. The Carousel is located only a few blocks from police headquarters and, according to Ruby, he knew "80 per cent of the men on the force."

After placing the ads,

he called his sister, Mrs. Eva Grant, who manages his club. "He was absolutely shaken . . . he was greatly concerned about Mrs. Kennedy and her children . . . he was crying," his middle-aged sister recalled.

He placed other calls, too, Friday, and conveyed the impression he was utterly heartsick over the death of the President and its effect on Mrs. Kennedy.

But he went about his business Friday night in the usual manner.

Emotional

What kind of man was Ruby?

"Jack is a very emotional man," said a friend.

"He'd give you the shirt off his back," said his roommate.

"He's a cautious chiseler," said a business acquaintance.

"A street fighter," remarked a policeman.

"He couldn't lick his lips," said a reporter.

Saturday, Jack Ruby was seen in his usual haunts. An acquaintance from Warsaw chatted with him briefly and recalled, "He gave the impression of a man who had arrived at a decision and was trying to figure how to accomplish it," said the Pole.

Several times Ruby drove by the intersection of Main and Houston and viewed the Texas School Book Depository from which the hidden sniper fired three rifle shots that killed President John F. Kennedy and seriously wounded Texas Gov. John Connally Jr.

He also read of the capture of Lee Harvey Oswald, 24, the accused assassin and murderer of a Dallas police officer.

Every few minutes he would call his sister. "I told him not to worry," said Mrs. Grant. "I told him someone would kill Oswald. Jack was crying over the feelings of Mrs. Kennedy."

BILL HUNTER

But Saturday night he and his roommate George Senator, 50, scarcely discussed the events of the two days that had brought criticism and scorn upon the people of Dallas.

Gets Up Early

Sunday morning, Ruby left the $125-a-month Oak Cliff apartment located not too far from the $8-a-week rooming house in which Oswald stayed.

He left earlier than usual. Ruby, by nature of his business, was a late riser. He seldom appeared in his apartment before 2 a.m. Even when he wasn't at the club, Ruby toured the night spots of the city, usually with a beautiful young escort.

"He seems to like the girls only in a business manner," said a service-station owner who knew him. Ruby was a bachelor and he was 52 years old, much older than the young women he squired.

Ruby left his apartment with the remark to his roommate, "I'm taking Sheba for a walk." Sheba was his favorite Dachshund, one of four he kept.

Gun in Belt

Instead of a walk through nearby Marsalis Park, Ruby drove to City Hall where police were maintaining a tight security watch over Oswald. In his belt, Ruby carried a .38-caliber police revolver. Several of his earlier brushes with the law had concerned carrying a concealed weapon, but no convictions had appeared on his Dallas record. "In my business, I carry lots of money sometimes. And this is a pretty tough part of town," he once told a policeman.

Policemen were particular friends of Ruby. "He doesn't know or care much about politics," said a friend. "He's on the police kick."

But several policemen remarked Ruby didn't need a gun to protect himself. "He could knock you for a roll of pins," said a sergeant. In his bedroom, Ruby exercised with heavy weights to keep a solid 200 pounds on his 5 foot, nine inch frame.

Ruby, and millions of others, knew Oswald would be transferred from city jail to county jail, where more stringent security could be enforced, at 10 a.m. Sunday. The transfer had been announced Saturday night to the press.

Shortly before 10 a.m. Sunday, Ruby appeared outside city hall. He was seen on the streets by more than one policeman and reporter. None paid him more than a casual glance. They were too busy.

Then the press passed into the tunnel. Reporters, photographers, television cameramen, radio men jostled for position across from heavily armed police assigned to protect Oswald from the growing hatred of a stricken populace.

Ruby waited until a policeman on the sidewalk warned a passing motorist to move on. He then ducked into the crowd, grabbed a heavy television camera and posed as a member of the working news people.

The tunnel leads beneath police headquarters and allows police to drive their patrol cars from sight of passersby before unloading their prisoners. Long Beach and Los Angeles have similar arrangements.

Officers acquainted with Ruby said later if they had spotted him in the ranks of newsmen he would have been ejected immediately.

Sudden Attack

When Oswald walked through the doorway flanked by two detectives on the first few steps of their 120-foot journey to a waiting armored truck, Ruby acted.

He burst from the ranks of the assembled press and lunged at the accused assassin. He held his right hand down and behind his right leg in the manner of a football quarterback on a bootleg. Suddenly his hand flashed upwards. In it was his revolver.

Ruby jammed the muzzle against the ribs of Oswald and pulled the trigger.

The discharge made only a muffled sound. Oswald slumped to the floor.

"My God! Oswald's been shot. He's been shot!" echoed through the tunnel.

At least eight detectives leaped upon Ruby and, after a bitter struggle, wrenched the smoking revolver from his grasp, and hustled him into police headquarters.

He fired only the single shot, but it took the life of Lee Harvey Oswald, the man Ruby blamed for inflicting misery upon Mrs. Jacqueline Kennedy, widow of the 35th President of the United States.

Held for Murder

Exactly 20 minutes after Oswald died in Parkland Memorial Hospital, Police Chief Jesse Curry announced a murder-with-malice complaint had been filed against Ruby.

Within minutes of Ruby's execution of Oswald before the eyes of millions watching television, at least two Dallas attorneys appeared to talk with him.

"He didn't tell us anything," one of the attorneys told the press after the first brief meeting. "He just listened. He paid for advice."

Sunday afternoon, police and federal officers investigated reports that Ruby and Oswald had been acquainted. Ruby denied the reports and claimed he had seen Oswald for the first time on a televised press conference.

A few hours later, his attorney, Tom Howard, prepared the groundwork for his defense. "He hasn't told us much," said Howard. "But if it were me, I'd plead temporary insanity."

As reports persisted that Oswald was seen in Ruby's Vegas Club, Dallas police tried to squelch the reports with statements that in their opinion Oswald was the assassin, that he was without confederates and that he and Ruby were not acquainted.

Drug Maker's Wrong Label Fatal to Patients in Belgium

CHARLEROI, Belgium (AP)—A heart drug mistakenly administered to cancer sufferers in a Charleroi hospital has caused patient deaths, the hospital announced Saturday. It did not say how many deaths there were but the Belgian news agency Belga said "the number of victims appears to be rather high" and the Brussels newspaper Derniere Heure quoted unofficial reports as saying there were 20 dead.

A COMMUNIQUE of the Arthur Gailly Medico-Chirurgical Institute in Charleroi said the drug digitatin was labeled mistakenly by a Belgian pharmaceutical firm and doctors used it on their patients in the belief it was a drug containing hormone for treatment of prostate cancer. It normally is used as a tonic for cardiac patients. Normal dosage of digitatin

"THESE clinical presumptions led doctors to suspend administration of the drug. Since then, investigators established that the supplier had made a mistake with fatal consequences."

The firm was not identified. Informed sources said the drug was used from March 1965 to last April.

Bus Dive Injures 21

SOMERSET, Pa. (UPI)—Twenty-one persons were injured, several seriously, Saturday when a New York-to-Chicago Greyhound bus skidded on ice on the Pennsylvania Turnpike and careened down a 170-foot embankment.

Eleven passengers and the bus driver were admitted to Somerset Community Hospital. Nine other injured passengers were treated at the hospital and released.

Slate police said the Greyhound bus, operated by John Hiltzer, 39, Berkel Park, Pa., was behind a Trailways bus which slowed down to come to a halt near a spot where a tractor-trailer had jackknifed, blocking the westbound lanes. Seven automobiles had halted in front of the Trailways bus.

The Greyhound bus skidded on ice when Hiltzer braked and the vehicle crashed through guard rails and ran down the embankment.

WORLD NEWS BRIEFS

LBJ to Speak Tuesday Night

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson personally will deliver his State of the Union message to Congress on Tuesday night, the opening day of the 1967 session.

The White House announced Saturday that Johnson had accepted an invitation to address a joint session of the Senate and House at 9:30 p.m. EST Tuesday.

The speech will be televised and broadcast live to the nation.

There had been speculation — not discouraged by the White House — that Johnson might delay his appearance before Congress until the following week.

The White House announcement was regarded as evidence that Johnson has just about concluded making a series of major decisions on economic policy, the 1967 legislative program of the administration and the federal budget.

Cities Paralyzed

U.S. International

The first blizzard of 1967 and the season's worst storm churned across the Great Lakes toward New England Saturday, leaving in its path as much as 17 inches of snow, 12-foot drifts, closed roads and paralyzed cities.

Behind it lurked the winter's coldest weather, dropping temperatures below zero from the Canadian border to Arizona and New Mexico. Cold-wave warnings were posted for parts of Minnesota and Wisconsin.

Blizzard warnings remained up through most of the day in Nebraska, Iowa and Minnesota. Hazardous-driving warnings were posted for Michigan much of New York and New England. In Minnesota and Wisconsin, authorities asked motorists to stay home.

Parts of New Hampshire and Maine were alerted for possible heavy snow. Gale warnings were up for the Great Lakes and the North Atlantic Coast.

Kerr Won't Quit

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — University of California President Clark Kerr said Saturday he would not resign, despite a disagreement with the new state administration over funds.

Kerr returned hastily from Vietnam to face a budget crisis brought on by Gov. Ronald Reagan's move to slash the university's $280-million budget by as much as 10 per cent and to charge tuition for the first time.

An emergency meeting of the university's 24-member Board of Regents will be held Monday in Los Angeles. There had been speculation Kerr might resign or be fired.

"I do not plan to resign," the mild-mannered former economics professor told reporters when he stepped from an airliner. "I have served the university a long time as best I could. I will stand on my record."

He refused to speculate on reports he might be fired.

Talks Pushed

NEW YORK (AP) — The Associated Press and the American Newspaper Guild continued negotiations Saturday night for a new contract and federal mediator George Papp kept the talks going past midnight, when the contract expired.

The negotiators were closeted with the mediator but there was no statement on what progress had been made.

Flees Disaster

MANILA (UPI) — The national police reported Sunday that one of the bus drivers involved in history's worst traffic tragedy was not killed in the accident as originally believed but survived with minor injuries and fled the scene.

The Philippine National Police launched a manhunt for the driver, identified as Lolito de Castro, who was reported seen in Batangas Province.

Oppose Bombing

New York Times Service WASHINGTON — High-level civilian officials are opposed for the time being to expanding the air war over North Vietnam to attack North Vietnamese airfields.

So far the airfields have been "off limits," but the Air Force has been pressing for months to get authorization from the White House to include Communist airfields on the list of approved targets.

The military pressure has apparently been increased lately as North Vietnam's Russian-built MIG fighters have become more aggressive in challenging American planes. Reports that North Vietnam is building up its force of high-speed, high performance MIG-21 fighters have added fuel to the argument.

Car Kills Young Mother of Twins

A young service wife from Germany, the mother of infant twin daughters, died Saturday night after she was struck by a car near her San Pedro home.

Irene Santiago, 29, of 678 W. 11th St., was hit while crossing at Gaffey and 11th streets about 6 p.m., and died in Harbor General Hospital of brain injuries at 7:30.

Officer H. R. Greenlee said the driver of the car, Charles R. Turner, Jr., of 764 W. 12th St., was not held.

The dead woman leaves her husband Louis, who is in the Army, and the 7-month-old daughters.

Cribbing Is Rampant In Colleges

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7 (AP) — Twenty per cent of freshmen in a representative sampling at America's colleges and universities admit to cribbing on an examination in the past year.

The finding is included in a survey of 206,865 current freshmen at 251 colleges and universities released Saturday by the American Council on Education, the principal coordinating agency for higher education in the nation.

The cheating figure was 24 per cent for men and 16.5 per cent for women.

Other findings included: —22 per cent of the students felt like "numbers in a book" at their schools with the highest figure being 40 per cent at public universities.

—16 per cent said they had participated in organized demonstrations in the past year.

—5 per cent were Negroes with the highest figure being 13 per cent at private, nonsectarian, four-year colleges.

—Objectives considered essential or very important were helping others in difficulty (69 per cent); being an authority in one's field (66); keeping up with political affairs (58); succeeding in one's own business (53); being well off financially (44); and obtaining recognition from peers (43).

—The most popular major fields of study planned were business (14 per cent), education (11), and engineering (10).

—Major sources of financial support during the freshman year were listed as parental aid (58 per cent of students); summer earnings (28); personal savings (16); scholarships (15); and federal government (10).

—64 per cent reported attending church frequently, 49 per cent praying frequently, and 17 per cent smoking cigarettes frequently.

U.S. Youth Raises Bail for Red Jail

MOSCOW (UPI) — An American youth, backed by $22,222 raised by the people of his hometown, will ask Leningrad court early next week to free him on bail pending appeal of his three-year Soviet prison sentence, it was announced Saturday.

The U.S. embassy said it received the money Saturday from North Little Rock, Ark., and sent it on to Leningrad, where Buel Ray Wortham, 25, is imprisoned following his conviction on charges of black marketing currency and stealing a statuette of a bear from a Russian hotel.

As I, P-T's Man, the Late Bill Hunter, Saw It

STRAIGHT STORY OF OSWALD'S END

When Lee Harvey Oswald, the assassin of John F. Kennedy, was cut down by a point-blank shot from the revolver of Jack Ruby millions of Americans witnessed the slaying on TV.

What they saw was a purposeful, pudgy little man striking without warning at the moment Dallas police were transferring Oswald from a City Hall lockup to the supposed security of County Jail.

Who was Ruby? Why had he slain the assassin? Was he an Oswald conspirator? Some of these questions lack complete answers today, despite reported deathbed denials by Ruby of any conspiracy and the Warren Commission's concurring viewpoint.

Readers of The Independent, Press-Telegram got one of the first — and best — word pictures of Ruby. It came from Bill Hunter, a young police reporter who flew to his native Dallas hours after the assassination of the President.

Some months after his prize-winning toils in Dallas, Hunter himself fell victim to an accidental shooting in the Long Beach police station. A few insatiably skeptical persons have pretended — without a shred of evidence — that the sudden death of Hunter was part of the fabric of mystery which enshrouds the assassination drama. These persons have imaginations which would make a flying carpet out of a spider's web.

Because it is part of the history of the Dallas tragedy, Bill Hunter's account of Jack Ruby's role is reprinted today. Written under the urgency of deadlines shortly after the events described, it helped Bill win two top awards — one from the California Newspaper Publishers Association and the other in competition with all Associated Press member newspapers of California and Nevada.

Here is Bill's story of Ruby the Avenger.

Dallas nightclub owner Jack Ruby (born Leon Rubenstein), ate a leisurely breakfast in mid-morning on Friday, Nov. 22, 1963.

After breakfast he discussed advertising with a newspaper salesman. The business conference at the newspaper was interrupted by reports of the assassination of the President of the United States. Ruby was only five blocks away from the slaying site.

He did not see the President at any part of his tour of the city.

The assassination stunned Dallas. People walked the streets silently, their faces tight and drawn. After the initial shock the normal hum of a busy, prosperous, booming metropolis died to a whisper.

Ruby, on this day in November, had been a citizen of Dallas some 14 years. He came to Dallas from Chicago after World War II and brought with him hints of a gangland background. He called himself the "Smiling Cowboy" when he first arrived and struggled to make his mark in the entertainment business.

He quickly changed his name from Rubenstein to Ruby and began a practice of meeting policemen and newspapermen for business reasons.

Closes Clubs

In the feverish activity Friday at the newspaper, Ruby remained quiet until he overheard telephoned cancellations of newspaper ads. Then he placed his ad announcing closing of his two clubs.

Ruby owns and operates The Vegas Room, an after-hours dance club in North Dallas, and the Carousel, a strip-lease club in the heart of the city. The Carousel is located only a few blocks from police headquarters and, according to Ruby, he knew "80 per cent of the men on the force."

After placing the ads,

he called his sister, Mrs. Eva Grant, who manages his club. "He was absolutely shaken . . . he was greatly concerned about Mrs. Kennedy and her children . . . he was crying," his middle-aged sister recalled.

He placed other calls, too, Friday, and conveyed the impression he was utterly heartsick over the death of the President and its effect on Mrs. Kennedy.

But he went about his business Friday night in the usual manner.

Emotional

What kind of man was Ruby?

"Jack is a very emotional man," said a friend. "He'd give you the shirt off his back," said his roommate.

"He's a cautious chiseler," said a business acquaintance.

"A street fighter," remarked a policeman.

"He couldn't lick his lips," said a reporter.

Saturday, Jack Ruby was seen in his usual haunts. An acquaintance from Warsaw chatted with him briefly and recalled, "He gave the impression of a man who had arrived at a decision and was trying to figure how to accomplish it," said the Pole.

Several times Ruby drove by the intersection viaduct by the intersection of Main and Houston and viewed the Texas School Book Depository from which the hidden sniper fired three rifle shots that killed President John F. Kennedy and seriously wounded Texas Gov. John Connally Jr.

He also read of the capture of Lee Harvey Oswald, 24, the accused assassin and murderer of a Dallas police officer.

Every few minutes he would call his sister. "I told him not to worry," said Mrs. Grant. "I told him someone would kill Oswald. Jack was crying over the feelings of Mrs. Kennedy."

BILL HUNTER

But Saturday night he and his roommate George Senator, 50, scarcely discussed the events of the two days that had brought criticism and scorn upon the people of Dallas.

Gets Up Early

Sunday morning, Ruby left the $125-a-month Oak Cliff apartment located not too far from the $8-a-week rooming house in which Oswald stayed.

He left earlier than usual, Ruby, by nature of his business, was a late riser. He seldom appeared in his apartment before 2 a.m. Even when he wasn't at the club, Ruby toured the night spots of the city, usually with a beautiful young escort.

"He seems to like the girls only in a business manner," said a service-station owner who knew him. Ruby was a bachelor and he was 52 years old, much older than the young women he squired.

Ruby left his apartment with the remark to his roommate, "I'm taking Sheba for a walk." Sheba was his favorite Dachs-hund, one of four he kept.

Gun in Belt

Instead of a walk through nearby Marsalis Park, Ruby drove to City Hall where police were maintaining a tight security watch over Oswald. In his belt, Ruby carried a .38-caliber police revolver. Several of his earlier brushes with the law had concerned carrying a concealed weapon, but no convictions had appeared on his Dallas record. "In my business, I carry lots of money sometimes. And this is a pretty tough part of town," he once told a policeman.

Policemen were particular friends of Ruby. "He doesn't know or care much about politics," said a friend. "He's on the police kick."

But several policemen remarked Ruby didn't need a gun to protect himself. "He could knock you for a roll of pins," said a sergeant. In his bedroom, Ruby exercised with heavy weights to keep a solid 200 pounds on his 5 foot, nine inch frame.

Ruby, and millions of others, knew Oswald would be transferred from city jail to county jail, where more stringent security could be enforced, at 10 a.m. Sunday. The transfer had been announced Saturday night to the press.

Shortly before 10 a.m. Sunday, Ruby appeared outside city hall. He was seen on the streets by more than one policeman and reporter. None paid him more than a casual glance. They were too busy.

Then the press passed into the tunnel. Reporters, photographers, television cameramen, radio men jostled for position across from heavily armed police assigned to protect Oswald from the growing hatred of a stricken populace.

Ruby waited until a policeman on the sidewalk entrance to the tunnel warned a passing motorist to move on. He then ducked into the crowd, grabbed a heavy television camera and posed as a member of the working news people.

The tunnel leads beneath police headquarters and allows police to drive their patrol cars from sight of passersby before unloading their prisoners. Long Beach and Los Angeles have similar arrangements.

Officers acquainted with Ruby said later if they had spotted him in the ranks of newsmen he would have been ejected immediately.

Sudden Attack

When Oswald walked through the doorway flanked by two detectives on the first few steps of their 120-foot journey to a waiting armored truck, Ruby acted.

He burst from the ranks of the assembled press and lunged at the accused assassin. He held his right hand down and behind his right leg in the manner of a football quarterback on a bootleg. Suddenly his hand flashed upwards. In it was his revolver.

Ruby jammed the muzzle against the ribs of Oswald and pulled the trigger.

The discharge made only a muffled sound. Oswald slumped to the floor.

"My God! Oswald's been shot. He's been shot!" echoed through the tunnel.

At least eight detectives leaped upon Ruby and, after a bitter struggle, wrestled the smoking revolver from his grasp, and hustled him into police headquarters.

He fired only the single shot, but it took the life of Lee Harvey Oswald, the man Ruby blamed for inflicting misery upon Mrs. Jacqueline Kennedy, widow of the 35th President of the United States.

Held for Murder

Exactly 20 minutes after Oswald died in Parkland Memorial Hospital, Police Chief Jesse Curry announced a murder-with-malice complaint had been filed against Ruby.

Within minutes of Ruby's execution of Oswald before the eyes of millions watching television, at least two Dallas attorneys appeared to talk with him.

"He didn't tell us anything," one of the attorneys told the press after the first brief meeting. "He just listened. He paid for advice."

Sunday afternoon, police and federal officers investigated reports that Ruby and Oswald had been acquainted. Ruby denied the reports and claimed he had seen Oswald for the first time on a televised press conference.

A few hours later, his attorney, Tom Howard, prepared the groundwork for his defense. "He hasn't told us much," said Howard. "But if it were me, I'd plead temporary insanity."

As reports persisted that Oswald was seen in Ruby's Vegas Club, Dallas police tried to squelch the reports with statements that in their opinion Oswald was the assassin, that he was without confederates and that he and Ruby were not acquainted.

Drug Maker's Wrong Label Fatal to Patients in Belgium

CHARLEROI, Belgium (AP) — A heart drug mistakenly administered to cancer sufferers in a Charleroi hospital has caused patient deaths, the hospital announced Saturday. It did not say how many deaths there were but the Belgian news agency Belga said "the number of victims appears to be rather high" and the Brussels newspaper Der-riere Heure quoted unofficial reports as saying there were 20 dead.

"THESE clinical presumptions led doctors to suspend administration of the drug. Since then, investigators established that the supplier had made a mistake with fatal consequences."

The firm was not identified. Informed sources said the drug was used from March 1965 to last April.

A COMMUNIQUE of the Arthur Gailly Medico-Chirurgical Institute in Charleroi said the drug digitalin was labeled mistakenly by a Belgian pharmaceutical firm and doctors used it on their patients in the belief it was a drug containing hormone for treatment of prostate cancer. It normally is used as a tonic for cardiac patients. Normal dosage of digitalin

Injures 21

SOMERSET, Pa. (UPI) — Twenty-one persons were injured, several seriously, Saturday when a New York-to-Chicago Greyhound bus skidded on ice on the Pennsylvania Turnpike and careened down a 170-foot embankment.

Eleven passengers and the bus driver were admitted to Somerset Community Hospital. Nine other injured passengers were treated at the hospital and released.

State police said the Greyhound bus, operated by John Hiltzer, 39, Bethel Park, Pa., was behind a Trailways bus which slowed down to come to a halt near a spot where a tractor-trailer had jackknifed, blocking the westbound lanes. Seven automobiles had halted in front of the Trailways bus.

The Greyhound bus skidded on ice when Hiltzer braked and the vehicle crashed through guard rails and ran down the embankment.

WORLD NEWS BRIEFS

LBJ to Speak Tuesday Night

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson personally will deliver his State of the Union message to Congress on Tuesday night, the opening day of the 1967 session.

The White House announced Saturday that Johnson had accepted an invitation to address a joint session of the Senate and House at 9:30 p.m. EST Tuesday.

The speech will be televised and broadcast live to the nation.

There had been speculation — not discouraged by the White House — that Johnson might delay his appearance before Congress until the following week.

The White House announcement was regarded as evidence that Johnson has just about concluded making a series of major decisions on economic policy, the 1967 legislative program of the administration and the federal budget.

Cities Paralyzed

U.S. International

The first blizzard of 1967 and the season's worst storm churned across the Great Lakes toward New England Saturday, leaving in its path as much as 17 inches of snow, 12-foot drifts, closed roads and paralyzed cities.

Behind it lurked the winter's coldest weather, dropping temperatures below zero from the Canadian border to Arizona and New Mexico. Cold-wave warnings were posted for parts of Minnesota and Wisconsin.

Blizzard warnings remained up through most of the day in Nebraska, Iowa and Minnesota. Hazardous-driving warnings were posted for Michigan much of New York and New England. In Minnesota and Wisconsin, authorities asked motorists to stay home.

Parts of New Hampshire and Maine were alerted for possible heavy snow. Gale warnings were up for the Great Lakes and the North Atlantic Coast.

Kerr Won't Quit

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — University of California President Clark Kerr said Saturday he would not resign, despite a disagreement with the new state administration over funds.

Kerr returned hastily from Vietnam to face a budget crisis brought on by Gov. Ronald Reagan's move to slash the university's $280-million budget by as much as 10 per cent and to charge tuition for the first time.

An emergency meeting of the university's 24-member Board of Regents will be held Monday in Los Angeles. There had been speculation Kerr might resign or be fired.

"I do not plan to resign," the mid-mannered former economics professor told reporters when he stepped from an airliner. "I have served the university a long time as best I could. I will stand on my record."

He refused to speculate on reports he might be fired.

Talks Pushed

NEW YORK (AP) — The Associated Press and the American Newspaper Guild continued negotiations Saturday night for a new contract and federal mediator George Papp kept the talks going past midnight, when the contract expired.

The negotiators were closeted with the mediator but there was no statement on what progress had been made.

Flees Disaster

MANILA (UPI) — The national police reported Sunday that one of the bus drivers involved in history's worst traffic tragedy was not killed in the accident as originally believed but survived with minor injuries and fled the scene.

The Philippine National Police launched a manhunt for the driver, identified as Lolito de Castro, who was reported seen in Batangas Province.

So far the airfields have been "off limits," but the Air Force has been pressing for months to get authorization from the White House to include Communist airfields on the list of approved targets.

The military pressure has apparently been increased lately as North Vietnam's Russian-built MIG fighters have become more aggressive in challenging American planes. Reports that North Vietnam is building up its force of high-speed, high performance MIG-21 fighters have added fuel to the argument.

Oppose Bombing

WASHINGTON — High-level civilian officials are opposed for the time being to expanding the air war over North Vietnam to attack North Vietnamese airfields.

So far the airfields have been "off limits," but the Air Force has been pressing for months to get authorization from the White House to include Communist airfields on the list of approved targets.

Car Kills Young Mother of Twins

A young service wife from Germany, the mother of infant twin daughters, died Saturday night after she was struck by a car near her San Pedro home.

Irene Santiago, 29, of 678 W. 11th St., was hit while crossing at Gaffey and 11th streets about 6 p.m., and died in Harbor General Hospital of brain injuries at 7:30.

Officer H. R. Greenlee said the driver of the car, Charles R. Turner, Jr., of 764 W. 12th St., was not held.

Cribbing Is Rampant In Colleges

WASHINGTON, Jan. 7 (AP) — Twenty per cent of freshmen in a representative sampling at America's colleges and universities admit to cribbing on an examination in the past year.

The finding is included in a survey of 206,865 current freshmen at 251 colleges and universities released Saturday by the American Council on Education, the principal coordinating agency for higher education in the nation.

The cheating figure was 24 per cent for men and 16.5 per cent for women.

Other findings included: —22 per cent of the students felt like "numbers in a book" at their schools with the highest figure being 40 per cent at public universities.

—16 per cent said they had participated in organized demonstrations in the past year.

—5 per cent were Negroes with the highest figure being 13 per cent at private, nonsectarian, four-year colleges.

—The most popular major fields of study planned were business (14 per cent), education (11), and engineering (10).

—Major sources of financial support during the freshman year were listed as parental aid (58 per cent of students); summer earnings (28); personal savings (16); scholarships (15); and federal government (10).

—64 per cent reported attending church frequently, 49 per cent praying frequently, and 17 per cent smoking cigarettes frequently.

U.S. Youth Raises Bail for Red Jail

MOSCOW (UPI) — An American youth, backed by $22,222 raised by the people of his hometown, will ask Leningrad court early next week to free him on bail pending appeal of his three-year Soviet prison sentence.

It was announced Saturday. The U.S. embassy said it received the money Saturday from North Little Rock, Ark., and sent it on to Leningrad, where Buel Ray Wortham, 25, is imprisoned following his conviction on charges of black marketing currency and stealing a statuette of a bear from a Russian hotel.

BILL ON DAMS DUE

California Water and Woods Hot Topics When New Congress Meets

By BAXTER OMOHUNDRO
From Our National Bureau

WASHINGTON — Fights over California's waters and woods are due to break out almost as soon as Congress convenes on Tuesday.

The two major issues—Colorado River water and creation of a Redwoods National Park—were battled to a standstill in the Congress that died in October.

Both will be battled from scratch in the new 90th Congress, because action by the previous Congress does not carry over.

They'll also be fought in an arena in which the political sands have shifted somewhat during the past three months.

Here's how they shape up: Colorado River—a controversial, complex bill for further development of Colorado River water will begin another weary journey in the House, where it died in the Rules Committee last year after an interstate agreement fell apart at the seams.

Backers of the measure now hope that between-Congress parleys of legislators and water users has patched up the agreement so that it may go back to the Interior Committee as it emerged last year.

This would include two dams on either side of the Grand Canyon, an Interior Department study of the feasibility of importing water from the Northwest, and a vital guarantee to California that it will receive its adjudicated 4.4 million acre feet of Colorado River water annually.

HOWEVER, OBSERVERS predict that the House bill probably will reach the floor in a much more modified version—most likely with elimination of a dam above the Grand Canyon and a lower dam than originally proposed below the canyon. Both dams have been fought bitterly by conservationist groups. The importation study opposed by Northwest congressmen stands to be greatly toned down.

While California's representatives might agree to these modifications, they'll fight to the last ditch for the California water guarantee.

Meanwhile, the Senate is expected to receive legislation authorizing only the Central Arizona part of the bill. The measure probably will be introduced by venerable, powerful Sen. Carl Hayden, D-Ariz., who has grown impatient at the bickering in the House. The Senate during the last Congress withheld action on the program in hopes that it would clear the House.

Here again, California will insist on a legislative guarantee, since a court decree gives priority to 2.8 million acre feet allotted to Arizona.

Redwoods—completing plans for creation of a Redwoods National Park face reevaluation in the face of a change in the state administration, with the likelihood that a bill before the Senate last year will be altered.

The previous bill, backed by the federal administration, Sen. Thomas Kuchel, R-Calif., and the state administration of Edmund G. Brown, called for a 44,300-acre, two-section park. Privately owned land accounted for 25,000 acres of this, and the rest was in existing parks.

NOW THE backing of this by the new administration of Ronald Reagan is questionable. Also conservationist groups, which generally favor a larger park than proposed last year, have been unable to form a unified front.

In these lights, last year's recommendation is being reevaluated by Interior Secretary Stewart Udall. He is expected to make an announcement this week.

Most likely is a compronise somewhere between last year's administration bill and a proposal offered by Rep. Donald Clausen, R-Crescent City, in the dying days of the last Congress.

The Clausen Plan, endorsed by Sen. George Murphy, R-Calif., calls for a 45,000-acre park. However, all but 14,000 acres of it already is in public ownership, and a large chunk of this is within the proposed Pt. Reyes National Seashore.

Clausen represents the area in which the parks would be located, and bitter protests against the larger park proposals have been voiced by lumber concerns and some civic groups there.

Nuclear Desalter — authorization for a nuclear desalting plant off the Orange County coast line is expected to have repassage through the Senate, but may hit some lumps in the House, with attacks from congressmen representing fossil fuel areas.

San Felipe—Both Rep.

Charles S. Gubser, R-Gilroy, and Sen. Kuchel plan to press for authorization of the $99 million project to bring Northern California water into the Santa Clara and Pajaro Valleys. The project has the backing of the administration, but faces stiff competition from myriad other public works projects sought for congressional approval. Also, funding is uncertain and probably will depend on budgetary demands made by the Vietnam War.

Draft Dodge Incidence Now Lower

WASHINGTON (AP)—Justice department figures indicate that a smaller proportion of young men is trying illegally to avoid military service now than at the height of World War II.

A comparison today of figures for 1944 and 1966 shows that with about four times the number of men in uniform during the World War II years there were about ten times the number of convicted draft violators.

During 1966, according to an FBI report, 450 persons were convicted of violating provisions of the Selective Service Act. This figure is for the calendar year—January through December. And it is nearly double the 262 convictions of 1965.

THESE FIGURES were listed in the FBI's recent annual year-end report to the attorney general. FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover attributes the rise to the increase in U.S. military commitments. Other officials blame it partly on larger draft calls and partly on strengthened draft laws enacted in 1965.

But justice department files disclose that the number of persons convicted for selective service violations in fiscal year 1944—July through June—was 4,609. This figure was 1,427 in 1942 and 3,950 in 1943. It dropped to 2,890 in 1945.

During the Korean War, the number of convictions hit a high of 434 in fiscal year 1954.

Considering the number of troops under arms, the number of convicted draft dodgers in 1966 represents a smaller proportion than the number in World War II.

LAST NOV. 30, for example, the United States had 3,326,491 troops under arms. On Nov. 30, 1964 the figure was 2,803,459. This is about one-quarter the 11,451,719 men in uniform on June 30, 1944 and about a third the 1943 figure of 9,044,745. The peak year was 1945 with 12,123,435.

Yet, the number of draft violators convicted in 1966 was only about one-tenth the number convicted in the peak wartime years.

In 1954, with 3.3 million men in the armed forces, the number of draft violation convictions reached a peak of 434. It was 362 in 1953 when the armed forces had about 3.5 million men.

In the years after the Korean War the number of draft violators dropped—as it did following World War II. The figures for fiscal years 1955 through 1965 were generally in the 150-250 range.

Justice department figures show the department is winning a majority of the cases it nets out to prosecute.

4 Firms Settle With Oil Union

The Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers International Union announced Saturday in Denver that new contracts have been reached with four oil firms employing almost 5,000 members.

Ten per cent — 6,000 of 60,000 — of the union's total membership is employed in the Los Angeles Basin, and 3,500 to 4,000 members are employed in Wilmington and Long Beach.

New contracts were reached with Gulf Oil Corp., Continental Oil Co., International Refineries of Duluth, Minn. — an affiliate of Continental — and with Marathon Oil Co. of Texas City, Tex.

GULF'S CONTRACT, reached earlier last week, was extended to include sections of Ohio, and the Santa Fe Springs area of Southern Calif.

The complicated negotiations involve more than 40 companies, 400 local contracts and about 60,000 workers. One minute after midnight tonight has been set as a strike deadline.

Although the union is asking for pay raises, better vacations, improved retirement and other conditions a major factor in the conflict is the demand for life-long job security — based on increasing automation which has thrown many out of work.

Strikes Widespread in Nation's Key Cities

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

Gravediggers, teachers, bus drivers, electricians, and hospital and factory workers were on strike in several areas of the nation Saturday with a physicians' group threatening to join them this week.

The strikes touched pivotal cities from coast to coast. Picket lines were up in New York, Chicago, and San Francisco.

In Chicago, 600 teachers at the city's junior colleges stayed away from classes Friday, with 23,000 faculty members in the city's elementary and high school systems planning to join them Monday.

A STRIKE threat also hung over the Cleveland school systems where one teachers' group said its members would not report to class Monday and another set a Friday deadline.

Maintenance workers joined Cleveland's teachers Saturday and voted to strike the city's schools this week.

Members of Custodians Union Local 777 said they would walk off their jobs at midnight Tuesday unless the school board agreed to renegotiate wage scales. The union already has turned down one offer.

Salaries are at issue in all the teacher disputes.

Rise in Price

NEWARK N.J. (AP) — Engelhard Industries has announced price increases in two rare metals—palladium and rhodium.

A company spokesman said Friday the price range on palladium will be boosted by two dollars, to a range of from $37-$39 per troy ounce. Rhodium is to be increased in price to a range of $207-$210 maintenance workers have per troy ounce, ten dollars charged administrators with more than before the changes; refusing to bargain collectively.

There was picketing too at Fairmont Hospital in San Leandro, Calif., and at Highland Hospital in Oakland, where the demonstrators had been fired for leaving their jobs. The nonprofessional workers had struck a week ago defying a court order.

A similar strike continued Saturday in Youngstown, Ohio, at Carfaro Memorial hospital where building and maintenance workers have per troy ounce, ten dollars charged administrators with more than before the changes; refusing to bargain collectively.

they struck last Sunday. No negotiations were scheduled for the weekend and a City Health Department spokesman said officials would meet Monday to determine if the walkout had created a health hazard.

A similar strike in 1953 lasted seven weeks without any major complications.

Doctors, meanwhile, at city-owned Harlem Hospital, told its administrators they would strike next Wednesday if a colleague suspended for his criticism of the hospital's standards is not reinstated.

Talks broke down Thursday after only an hour in an attempt to resolve an eight-week-old strike of electricians in shipyards in San Francisco, Portland and Seattle. Several thousand members of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers have been idled.

Bus drivers of the Wilmington Coach Co. in Wilmington, Del., turned down the company's latest settlement offer Friday night. The city has been without bus transportation since Nov. 16.

UPSTATE New York had two major strikes. Mechanics at Mohawk Airlines pressed wage demands Saturday on the 30th day of their walkout which company officials say has interfered with only about 30 per cent of the line's operations.

At Schenectady, production was halted for the 84th day at General Electric's plant after negotiations bogged down Friday.

Red Cross Expenses Set Record

Increased services to U.S. military forces in South Vietnam and meeting the needs of victims of Hurricane Betsy combined to make 1965-66 the busiest and costliest year for the American Red Cross since World War II.

The organization's annual report listed a total of $120,819,624 in expenditures, the largest sum since 1954-56 when expenses rose to $199,324,987.

COLLECTIONS ALSO rose in the organization's appeal for funds and members through independent campaigns by chapters and participation by many chapters in United Fund appeals — $92,686,143 as against $88,350,261 in 1963-64.

Other receipts brought ARC's total income to $106,868,513. Since this was less than total expenditures for the year, the over-expenditure came primarily from the organization's disaster revolving fund which has now been reduced to $2,500,000.

Largest item of expenditures listed was for world-wide services to the armed forces and to veterans — $40,997,719. A monthly average of 84,000 service were given at military installations and medical facilities, an increase of 9 per cent over those served in 1964-65.

WORKERS IN CHAPTERS, the report said, gave 141,400 services each month to families of servicemen and 37,600 services each month to families of veterans.

The Red Cross provided assistance to victims in 14,100 disaster situations during the year, including 357 disaster relief operations, at a total cost of $25,976,041. Emergency mass care was given to 572,900 persons, and 69,000 families were aided in long-term recovery. In the Hurricane Betsy operations, the largest hurricane relief operation in Red Cross history, 850 disaster specialists from 48 states and 11,000 volunteers gave emergency mass care to 296,000 persons and provided recovery aid to 34,600 families at a cost of $17,500,000.

Officials stressed the fact that the American Red Cross is first and foremost an organization of volunteers from its top leadership down through the ranks.

"RED CROSS volunteers last year assisted servicemen, veterans, and their families in countless ways, brought relief to disaster victims, helped to collect blood from voluntary donors, and taught first aid, water safety and home nursing courses," the report states. Chapter volunteers served with other agencies helping the economically underprivileged the sick and the physically handicapped.

"The Red Cross encouraged chapters to give youth volunteers greater responsibilities. It began a nationwide study on the role of young adult volunteer leaders in the Red Cross. The Red Cross thus remained alert to the need for a continually refreshed reservoir of qualified leadership," the report said.

A PLUNGE—AND NINE LIVES ARE LOST

Woman, 8 Children Drown in Car

COLUMBUS, Ohio (UPI)—The mystery of the disappearance of a woman and eight children five days ago was solved Saturday when divers found an automobile and six bodies in the icy waters of Hoover Reservoir near here.

The divers were forced to call off the search for the three other bodies when brisk winds made the waters rough.

The dead woman, Mrs. Mary Helen Rutherford, 41, of rural Delaware County, was taking her four children and four nieces and nephews to Columbus to buy them shoes last Tuesday evening when the car apparently crashed through a fence and careened down a 30-foot embankment into the water.

The woman's husband, Charles, came home from work Tuesday night but did not report her and the children missing until Wednesday after he had called his brother, Leonard, of Charleston, W.Va. He said he thought Mrs. Rutherford had taken the children to visit the brother in Charleston.

LEONARD RUTHERFORD was the father of four of the victims of the tragedy—two sets of twin girls aged 9 months and 19 months. The four children were in legal custody of Charles Rutherford and his wife.

Three days ago, road repairmen noticed the broken fence near the reservoir. They returned the following day and repaired the fence.

But late Friday, a highway worker noticed an oil slick on the water and tire tracks leading off the roadway toward the gap in the fence which had been repaired.

A search of the reservoir got under way at daylight Saturday. After several hours, divers found the Rutherford car, a converted state police cruiser.

Inside the car were the bodies of Mrs. Rutherford, her daughter, Delores Ann, 18, and both sets of twin babies.

Still to be recovered were the bodies of Mrs. Rutherford's children—Bertie Marie, 15, Steven, 12, and Mary Jane, 5.

Heroic Father, Sons Die in Fire

KINGSTON, N.H. (UPI)—A young father died along with the two sons he tried to save Saturday when a pre-dawn fire swept their home in this southeastern New Hampshire community. His wife and daughter fled safely.

Authorities said Philip Blake Sr., 27, was trapped in the burning one-story home, from where their father collapsed.

Fire Chief Alfred More said the bodies of 4-year-old Philip Blake Jr., and 2-year-old Gregory were found in bed in their bedroom, down the hall.

The deaths of all three were attributed to asphyxiation.

Mrs. Sandra Blake and 3-year-old Cynthia escaped.

Buenos Aires Builds Novel Planetarium

By RICHARD RITTER

BUENOS AIRES (UPI)—Outside it could look like a flying saucer from which strange creatures from outer space might descend to invade the city.

Inside it is a showcase where visitors can imagine they are about to journey into space themselves.

The building is Buenos Aires' new planetarium, located in the city's largest park and opened officially in December.

At the outset the planetarium is to be used only for scientific conferences. Opening of the structure to the public will come with completion of inside arrangements in about six months.

THE MAIN FEATURE is a huge Zeiss projector, placed at the dome of the futuristically designed two-story observatory. The projector has 22,000 parts and is driven by seven motors. It is placed atop two sliding rails and was built in West Germany at a cost of about $250,000.

A screen in the projection room allows visitors to view distant stars about six times brighter than those seen through the naked eye on a clear night. The star room when completed will hold 380 spectators in a cinema-like arrangement.

Six staircases take visitors to an exhibition room, where the latest space feats achieved by man are on show. In the middle of the triangular room is a lift, encased in a crystal tube, to take visitors to the dome. The lift works on a pump-plunger based system.

THE $1 MILLION planetarium has been a long-time dream of the Argentine Astronomical Society, a scientific organization of astronomers and star gazing fans.

Oil Industry Issues Wait for Congress

By MAX B. SKELTON

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) — Taxes and oil imports are the major petroleum industry problems the new 90th Congress probably will encounter.

Other potentials include natural gas pipeline safety and air pollution. Another effort to get Congress to clarify the Federal Power Commission's (FPC) authority to control the wellhead prices of natural gas also could develop but most of the 1967 action in this area is expected to come from the courts and proceedings before the FPC.

Some segments of the industry want Congress to tighten oil imports controls when proposals to extend the trade expansion act are debated. The act sanctions such controls but spells out no guidelines. Details for the development of and enforcement of a control system are left to the executive branch.

There is indication the industry's controversial 27½ per cent depletion tax allowance may have a busy year on Capitol Hill. The administration has indicated all types of "special tax preferences" will be revived in 1967 and has left no doubt the depletion allowance will be included in the study.

RESULTS OF the Nov. 8 general election have bolstered the industry's hopes the 40-year-old allowance can survive renewed attacks.

Senator Paul Douglas, D-Ill., long a bitter opponent of oil's special allowance, was defeated by Charles H. Percy, who said during the campaign he favors the allowance.

Douglas was a member of the powerful Senate Finance Committee which rejected by an 8-5 vote his proposal last year for a graduated reduction that would scale the allowance down to 15 per cent for gross revenues in excess of $5 million.

However, early interest of oilmen keeping watch on the depletion situation will center on the House. They will be particularly interested in new assignments made to the powerful tax-writing Ways and Means Committee. Republicans are expected to claim two additional seats on the committee. Rep. Clark W. Thompson, D-Tex., a strong backer of maximum depletion, also created a vacancy when he did not seek reelection.

OIL IMPORTS are not mentioned specifically in the trade expansion act but controls are authorized for any "commodity" that poses a threat to national security.

Many oilmen, particularly independent operators, contend Congress must spell out specific guidelines so as to provide adequate incentives for vigorous exploration programs aimed at discovery of new domestic reserves.

A new industry-wide committee has been organized to ask Congress to clarify FPC's authority over wellhead prices of gas sold into interstate commerce.

There is indication, however, the request will not be made until after the courts have settled a challenge of the legality of the FPC's area formula for controlling prices. This challenge by gas producers now is before the 10th Circuit Court of Appeals at Denver, Colo. The final outcome will not be known until the Supreme Court hands down its decision. This could delay a new push in Congress until 1968 or later.

300 Doctors In New York Protest War

NEW YORK, Jan. 7 (AP) — Three hundred doctors, nurses, researchers and personnel from the medical profession demonstrated against the war in Vietnam Saturday.

The protestors encircled the Bellevue hospital compound, between 26th and 30th Sts. on First Avenue.

The demonstration was held to protest the amount of money spent on the war and what pickets described as a lack of money spent for medical research, improvement of public health facilities and better wages.

The protest was sponsored by the New York Medical Committee to End the War in Vietnam.

Kennedy, Johnson Fight Disclosed in 'That Book'

told him that in a room at the Texas Hotel in Fort Worth on the morning of Nov. 22, just before the presidential party departed for Dallas.

Manchester writes that Kennedy did not want to make the Texas trip, believed that Johnson ought to be able to straighten out that state's political problems by himself, but felt that he had no political choice since his prospects of carrying Texas in 1964 were endangered.

AS WAS REPORTED at the time, the Texas feud — which still exists — was between a conservative Democratic faction headed by Gov. John B. Connally Jr., then and now a close associate of Johnson, and the liberal wing of the party led by Sen. Ralph W. Yarborough.

Manchester writes that during the presidential visit to Texas, Connally intended to snub and embarrass Yarborough, who had been a strong supporter of Kennedy. He recounts how the senator, on Nov. 21, twice refused to ride in the same car with Vice President Johnson in motorcades at San Antonio and Houston.

This was reported at the time. It was further reported on Nov. 22, when Yarborough and Johnson did ride together in the fatal motorcade at Dallas, that they had done so on the express orders of President Kennedy, who wanted a show of unity.

In a letter to this correspondent dated Dec. 21, 1965, Yarborough called the latter report "absolutely incorrect," and added that "it was not on any president's orders that I rode with Vice President Johnson."

That part of the story is not reached in the first installment of "Death of a President," but the Yarborough letter of 1965 mentions one incident not included in the installment's account of the events of Nov. 21.

CONCEDING that he had not ridden with Johnson in the San Antonio and Houston motorcades, Yarborough wrote:

"That same night, Nov. 21, 1963, I rode in the car with Vice President and Mrs. Johnson from Carswell Air Force Base in a parade to the Texas Hotel in Fort Worth at approximately 11:00 p.m., and planned to ride with Vice President Johnson for the rest of the time if requested, and if he had no objections. President Kennedy had not asked me to ride with Vice President Johnson then."

In Manchester's account of Nov. 21, as presented in Look, there is no mention of this motorcade or of the Yarborough-Johnson presence in the same car. The author mentions only the two occasions on which Yarborough did not ride with Johnson.

Manchester reports that Mrs. Kennedy — shortly after the Kennedy-Johnson conference that is said to have angered the Vice President — "blurred" to the President that she did not like Connally. This reportedly was because Connally was too egotistical and because he was "needing" Kennedy.

He reports that the President cautioned her against developing a prejudice against Connally, and reminded her that he had come to Texas to heal political wounds, not cause them. He said Connally had only been hinting that he would run ahead of Kennedy in Texas in 1964.

Manchester reports that later that night, Connally talked with reporters in the coffee shop of the Texas Hotel in Fort Worth, but he does not include one incident of the Governor's conversation. Connally tried to get a reporter for the Houston Post to tell him in advance the results of a statewide political poll that the Post intended to publish the next day.

The reporter would not disclose the poll results. White House reporters who had been in Houston earlier in the day had been told about the poll, however. When Douglas Kiker, then the White House correspondent of the New York Herald Tribune, joined the Connally group, he asked Connally what he thought of the fact that the poll would show that Sen. Barry Goldwater of Arizona would easily defeat Kennedy in Texas in 1964.

CONNALLY LAUGHED out loud at finding out by accident what he had wanted to know. In later discussions of the poll, however, he said he was not surprised at its results as of that time, but believed that by Election Day, Kennedy would be able to carry the state.

Manchester lays heavy stress on the right-wing political climate and the penchant for violence that he attributes to the city of Dallas — a city that he asserts has a "disease of the spirit."

He calls it "legitimate speculation" to suggest that this atmosphere had considerable effect upon Lee Harvey Oswald, whom he labels the assassin, but who he says did not belong to a conventional criminal conspiracy.

The threatening attitude of Dallas was so pervasive, Manchester writes, that in the days before his Texas trip, Kennedy was specifically warned not to visit the city.

KENNEDY'S KILLER REJECTED BY COLD WIFE

Oswald's Mad Despair Led to Assassination

By JOHN CORRY
New York Times Service

New York, Jan. 7 — The first installment of "The Death of a President," which Look magazine will publish in the issue on sale next Tuesday, tells of an ugliness in Texas politics, of Lee Harvey Oswald drifting into madness, of Mrs. John F. Kennedy timidly rejoining a world of crowds and campaigning and how this gave her husband delight and anxiety.

IT TELL of hatred in Dallas, of laxity in the secret service and of a political, not a security, factor, that determined that President Kennedy would speak at the Dallas Trade Mart, passing, on his way there, the Texas School Book Depository.

It does not suggest, however, that Kennedy died because of a conspiracy against his life.

THE 15,000-WORD installment, the first of four in the serialization of Manchester's book, is reportage, a retelling of the things that preceded the death of Kennedy. It concludes with Oswald, alone and rejected, watching an old war movie on television, his reason darkening, while the President and his wife slip away from a crowd in the lobby of a hotel in Houston.

The contents of the installment became known on Friday when Look circulated advance copies of the issue in which it appeared. This was done with the understanding that news articles on the installment would not appear until the Chicago Daily News broke the release date with an article on the installment Saturday.

"The Death of a President," which Mrs. Kennedy once sought to suppress by a suit,

The warning was made by Rep. Hale Boggs of Louisiana (later a member of the Warren Commission); Byron Skelton, the Texas Democratic national committeeman, and Sen. J.W. Fulbright, D-Ark.

According to Manchester, Skelton carried his objections to Attorney General Robert F. Kennedy. Walter Jenkins of the Vice President's staff, and to John Bailey and Jerry Bruno of the Democratic National Committee — all without effect. Bailey was chairman of the committee.

Robert Kennedy did pass the warning along to P. Kenneth O'Donnell, then the President's primary aide for political and security matters, but Manchester reports that O'Donnell regarded the Skelton warning about the possibilities of violence as being based on an unsupported hunch.

Bruno, who made advance arrangements for the trip, had selected the Dallas Women's Building for the President's luncheon speech, Manchester writes, but for political reasons Connally insisted on the Dallas Trade Mart. The motorcade route to the mart passed the Texas School Book Depository from which Lee Harvey Oswald fired.

MANCHESTER WRITES of Oswald's mother, who had a "ready, scolding voice," who coveted status and money and had neither one and who had said of herself and her son, "I've been persecuted, and he's been persecuted."

Since his childhood, Manchester says, Oswald was threatened by paranoia. He notes Oswald's trip to the Soviet Union, his disappointment there, the refusal of Cuban authorities to grant him a visa.

"Lee Harvey Oswald," Manchester writes, "had become the most rejected man of his time."

But the final catalyst for Oswald's madness, Manchester says, was the destructive relationship he had with his wife, Marina.

Obliquely, Manchester criticizes Chief Justice Earl Warren, who directed the presidential commission that investigated the assassination, for treating Marina Oswald with "exceptional consideration."

MANCHESTER SPECULATES that Oswald thought he had found a "beautiful, dedicated Communist" when he married Marina Oswald, but that instead he found a scold.

He says Oswald's wife hounded and jeered at him. "There were many fights," he says, "and Marina, a quick girl with a knee, was the better fighter."

It was Oswald, he says, who cringed, who wept, who fell to his knees "as the great darkness of his private nightmare enveloped him."

The nightmare became most intense, Manchester suggests, after Marina Oswald left her husband and moved herself and her daughter into the home of Mrs. Ruth Paine.

MRS. PAINE, a Quaker, was separated from her husband, Michael. She had gone to great lengths to befriend the Oswalds when they arrived in Texas, and she had, Manchester says, become something of a protector of Marina Oswald.

In September, Mrs. Paine took Marina Oswald into her home; Oswald sought refuge in Cuba two days later. When this failed, he attempted to join his wife and Mrs. Paine. Neither one, Manchester says, wanted him.

Manchester writes that Ruth Paine never really understood her companion, that she was aware of what she called a "wall" in the friendship. Furthermore, he writes, Marina Oswald never told her about all of her husband's strange life.

She did not, for example, tell her that Oswald used aliases, that he had allegedly tried to kill Edwin Walker, former major general, that she had photographed Oswald with a Mannlicher-Carcano carbine and a .38-caliber revolver, or that the carbine was concealed in a garage.

IN THIS CONVOLUTED relationship, Manchester writes, Marina Oswald turned to Mrs. Paine, to the final humiliation of her husband.

He writes that, on the night of Nov. 21, Oswald returned to the Paine home. He lavished affection on his wife, Manchester says, and pleaded for her to return. She refused.

Mrs. Paine returned shortly. She was surprised to find Oswald there, the story says, but did not admonish him, even though he was supposed to phone in advance for permission to visit.

At 6:30 that evening, Oswald joined the women for dinner. He was quiet then but afterward pleaded with Marina again. In turn, she asked him to buy her a washing machine. He said he would, that he wanted her.

Then Marina Oswald told her husband to spend the money on himself, that she no longer needed him.

THAT WAS OSWALD'S end as a man, Manchester writes. He was without pride. Marina Oswald, he says, glanced at her husband in the living room later and saw that he was watching television.

"In fact," Manchester says, "he was going mad."

In his account, Manchester also says that the Secret Service was lax in its security arrangements. He says that nine agents from the White House detail, unknown to Roy Kellerman, the agent in charge, visited nightclubs the night before the assassination.

He says the nine had beer and mixed drinks at the Press Club in Fort Worth with Malcolm Kilduff, the president's assistant press secretary, and that seven of the nine later went to a place called The Cellar, where they had nonalcoholic drinks. One, he writes, stayed there until 5 a.m.

HE SAID THAT four agents who were to ride in the car behind Kennedy visited the Cellar in those early morning hours, and that at various times they were joined by three agents who were supposed to be on guard outside the president's bedroom door.

When Mrs. Kennedy and Cowles Communications, which publishes Look, reached the agreement that led Mrs. Kennedy to drop her suit to prevent the serialization, Look said that it would make only one revision in the installment. This, it said, dealt with a reference to Mrs. Kennedy.

However, Mrs. Kennedy found more than one passage in the first installment offensive. She is said to have objected to the descriptions of the hotel bedrooms in which she and her husband stayed in Texas, and she is said to have objected to other passages that she considered too personal.

Most of the material that she objected to, however, is contained in the final two installments.

Russ Merchant Fleet Outnumbers U.S.

By ROBERT F. BUCKHORN, WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Soviet Union is plotting a revolution at sea.

If things go the way the Kremlin hopes, in the 1970s, the Red flag could fly over the world's biggest merchant marine fleet, relegating the United States to the also-rans.

Soviet ships are everywhere. They carry arms to Hanoi in North Vietnam, tourists to the Mediterranean, and Massachusetts codfish to Murmansk.

The fleet is new, efficient, and growing with giant strides. The United States' is small, and erratic.

The Soviet Union started its rise as a maritime power at the end of World War II with only a handful of ships, two fifths of them provided by the United States under lend-lease.

Today, U.S. Maritime Administration figures tell a different story. As of June 30, 1966, the Soviet Union had a total of 1,360 ships. As of September, the United States had a total of 961.

BUT THE NUMBER of ships does not tell the complete story. In terms of tonnage, the United States is ahead of the Soviet Union—10,335,000 gross tons to 7,616,000. Nor does the American fleet reflect its huge mothball fleet.

At this moment, the title of king of the sea technically belongs to tiny Liberia, whose flag flies over 1,406 ships with a total of 20,599,000 gross tons.

But the Soviet Union is coming up fast. From 1953 to 1966, it moved from 11th to sixth place among maritime powers.

According to the Kremlin itself, the Soviet maritime tonnage should increase by 50 per cent over the next five years, or one million tons a year.

The U.S. shipyards began on order. But at the end of 1965, the Soviet Union already had ordered 464 vessels of over 1,000 gross tons.

During 1965, the Soviets accepted delivery of 129 new ships. The United States took delivery on only 10.

THE SOVIETS make no attempt to conceal what they have in mind for their merchant marine. They want to be free from reliance on foreign shipping. By the end of 1967, they will have achieved 75 per cent of this goal, sources said. At present, the United States carries only about 9 per cent of its trade in its own ships, down from a high of 50 per cent after World War II.

Tied to its drive to carry its own commerce is the Kremlin's plan to carry the rest of the world's, too. It is not at all inconceivable that the United States might have to rely on the Soviet Union to carry its raw material sources said.

This pessimistic prediction, however, is based on continuing widening gap between the U.S. and the Soviet merchant marine.

One of the most obvious fields of gain for the Soviets is its fishing fleet which often doubles as an intelligence gathering unit.

Soviet trawlers regularly turn up off the coast of West Africa, a prime location for watching American missile firings. Soviet ships also have taken up stations off Cape Canaveral, and the coast of California, the site of a Pacific missile range. At NATO naval maneuvers, the Soviet fishing fleet always tries for a close-in view under the guise of fishing.

BUT FISHING also is very much a money-making business for the Soviets. Over the last 25 years, their catch has jumped from 1.4 million tons to over 5.6 million tons. The Soviet Union plans to boost its catch by 50 per cent by 1970.

At present, the Soviet Union ranks fourth in the world's fishing fleet race, behind Japan, Peru and Red China.

The United States is not a competitor here. It imported 55 per cent of its fish last year, including over $500,000 worth from the Soviet Union.

Like its merchant marine, the decline of the American fishing fleet is blamed on a combination of things, but old ships and old equipment lead the list along with high operating costs.

As an example, a congressional report on the American fishing industry said a fishing boat that costs $200,000 in Japan or the Scandinavian countries could run more than $350,000 in the U.S.

THE NEWEST of all the Soviet "sea targets" is the tourist trade.

The Soviet cruise ship Alexander Pushkin is carrying tourists between Leningrad and Montreal. Another Soviet ship has been chartered to cruise the Mediterranean.

Still another takes British school children on cruises to the Scandinavian countries.

Some observers say that the widening war in Vietnam may result in an eventually heavy American shipbuilding program. But others say the high cost of shipbuilding make it wiser and more economical to rely on foreign shipping. While the debate continues, the Soviet Union is steadily launching its way toward the maritime crown.

PLAN FOR GOP

Reagan-Brooke Ticket Urged

(Editor's Note: George S. Schuyler, noted Negro conservative, has been a newspaperman for half a century. Among his books are "Black And Conservative" and "Black No More").

By GEORGE S. SCHUYLER
Copyright, 1967, by North American Newspaper Alliance, Inc.

NEW YORK (NANA) — With many Democratic scalps swinging from their belts as a result of the 1966 elections, the Republicans are increasingly optimistic about 1968. But instead of holding a war council to win the White House, they're milling around, leaderless, without a vestige of a clear-cut program.

The Grand Old Party faces once again that grand old dilemma: How to win back support from city Negroes, union members and the growing number of the uncommitted, and, at the same time, hold on to the conservative elements that have supported them in the recent past. Without this combination, the G.O.P. will be viewing another Johnson inaugural two years from now.

The polls show there's a lot of dissatisfaction with Lyndon Johnson across America, a nation that is now bedeviled by war, inflation, crime and racial torment. And yet so many Republican leaders continue to echo the Johnsonian line, instead of offering the voters a choice that will lift us out of the morass.

THE MAN who today offers the clearest alternative to the Johnson line is the newly elected governor of California, Ronald Reagan. An avowed conservative, he also commands a considerable labor following. And while Negroes may be lukewarm over the issue of open housing, his huge vote in California indicates he might have considerable support from the uncommitted. Above all, Reagan's candidacy would fire the enthusiasm of the 27 million who voted for Barry Goldwater two years ago.

But Reagan won't be able to take us off the LBJ ranch all by himself. As matters stand now, President Johnson would get the vast majority of the urban Negro vote. He has unflinchingly wooed this minority with jobs and handouts, to an extent never enjoyed by any minority in history. Even in the heyday of Reconstruction, Negroes never received such preferment, and they now stand high in almost all levels of the bureaucracy.

Additionally, Johnson is counting on a large proportion of the organized labor support and the business world that has profited from the war, space and educational efforts.

So, even with Reagan heading the ticket, the G.O.P. does not have any chance unless it breaks sharply with tradition and names a Negro as vice president.

A DECADE ago there were no Negroes within the Republican Party with the qualifications, reputation and experience to command a national, or even statewide, following. Today in Senator Edward Brooke of Massachusetts, a brilliant public officer and an established votegetter, the G.O.P. has just the man they need and ought to want.

Reagan and Brooke would be an ideal pair to head the Republican ticket in 1968. While Brooke is no Negro leader in the civil rights sense and has never raised the racial issue during his political career, it is known that he is a Negro, and there are exceedingly few Negroes who would not vote for him. His large majorities in Massachusetts where Negroes are scarce indicate that he would encounter little opposition among whites elsewhere on that ground.

Brooke would also be the ideal counterweight to Reagan ideologically. He is on the Rockefeller-Romney order, a middle-of-the-roader attracting the liberal and uncommitted voters who count so much in close elections, just as do the urban Negroes. In this connection it is significant that when a liberal Republican, John Lindsay, ran for Mayor of New York, he carried Harlem, a Democratic stronghold for 30 years.

The Democrats have helped pave the way for the acceptance of a Negro vice president by the outstanding appointments President Johnson has made in the judiciary and the bureaucracy, and the bankrolling of numerous anti-poverty projects across the land. To an extent undramed during the New Deal, Negroes have entered every branch of the government and won representation as well in various city and state administrations.

It has been a tradition in American politics to make appointments and nominations based to considerable extent on religious, racial and national groupings in an appeal for votes. The Negro just happens to be the most recent beneficiary of the system, and today the problem often is to find men and women who are qualified to hold the proffered jobs.

DURING THE two Eisenhower administrations new ground was broken in Negro appointments to sub-cabinet posts and one young man became a White House secretary. Under Kennedy and Johnson the process went farther. It has been a testimony to the educational qualifications of Negroes and the liberality of whites.

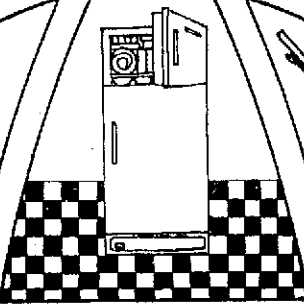

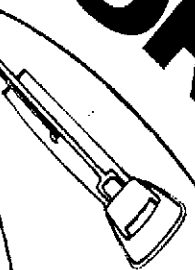

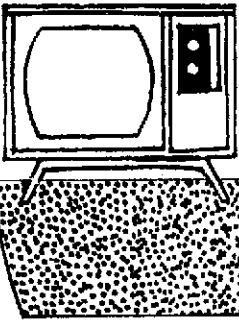

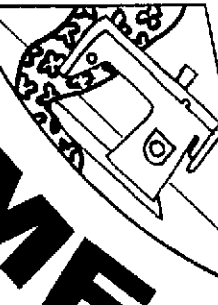

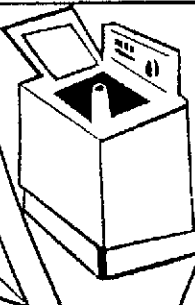

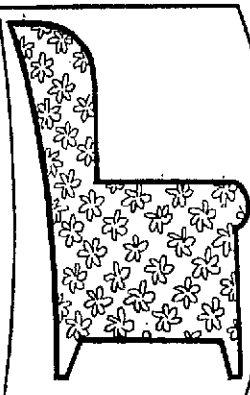

So, with an unparalleled opportunity to profit from this increased liberality, it remains to be seen whether the Republicans will take advantage of it and thereby win a crucial election. It has become customary for presidential and vice presidential nominees to be selected from widely separated parts of the country. In the case of a Reagan-Brooke ticket, the men would be representative of California and Massachusetts, just about as far apart as you can get. It would also give visual evidence of the multi-racial character of our population.

If the Republicans can make up their minds as to what they are going to be and select a strong ticket their dilemma will be resolved and they will have a good chance of staging a winning fight in 1968.

We Can't Give Away Public Right

LIKE THE EXERCISE of any right in a free and open society, publication of crime news can be a two-edged sword.

Some lawyers and even some judges would blunt one edge by wholesale censorship of such news under threat of contempt action against police, prosecutors and newspapers. In its extreme version, their premise is that crime news intrinsically and always prejudices the rights of the suspect or defendant.

The American Civil Liberties Union in Los Angeles has even sought an injunction which could prohibit police departments from disclosing pertinent facts about crimes and arrests.

Now the American Newspaper Publishers Association has issued a 156-page report by a 12-member committee firmly rejecting censorship. Ten major conclusions by the committee give the reasons.

One of the 10 goes to heart of the issue:

"There are grave inherent dangers to the public in the restriction or censorship at the source of news, among them secret arrest and ultimately secret trial."

CRIME NEWS is harrowing, particularly to many suspects, their families and their attorneys.

That is one edge of the sword, and in rare instances it is wielded blindly with unfortunate results.

But the other edge is that the dissemination of news through the press is, as the report observes, "a positive influence in assuring a fair trial." It is more than society's avenue to information on crime in any community. It is the public's shield against a ruthless police state.

Some criminals realize as much. The report quotes this comment by a convict writing in the Southern Michigan Prison publication: "As distasteful as adverse publicity may be, it is better to be spotlighted momentarily than abused in darkness."

THE ANPA COMMITTEE was on firm ground in concluding that there is no real conflict between the First Amendment guaranteeing a free press and the Sixth Amendment which guarantees a speedy and public trial by an impartial jury.

In the isolated cases where such a conflict appears to exist, the bar and the courts have remedies available to them. One of these remedies, a change of venue, is currently being applied in a notorious multiple-murder case in Chicago.

As the report concedes, the press has certain responsibilities along with lawyers and judges. The ANPA committee advocates that the press stand ready at any time to discuss relevant problems with appropriate groups and individuals.

But newspapers will not willingly compromise their duty and their function in the right of the people to know.

Reagan Aply Points Way He Will Go

GOV. REAGAN'S inaugural address was entirely consistent with the campaign that won his election. California's new chief executive ably outlined the goals he will pursue. These were the same he had emphasized as a candidate. Since he won a million-vote plurality, the generally enthusiastic reaction to the address was also a continuation of the record of last November.

THE FAVORABLE comments, however, were not limited to his pre-election supporters. Assembly Speaker Jesse M. Unruh called it a "very forward-looking speech." Senate President Hugh M. Burns reported himself "in agreement with many of the things he said."

To a large extent the address was noncontroversial. Differences over broad policies had been settled by the election. Quarrels over the details won't come until later. Gov. Reagan contributed to the harmony of the occasion by refraining, for the most part, from needless and ill-timed jibes at the opposition.

The few Democrats (such as Assembly Majority Leader George Zenovich) who complained that the speech was "vague" could better have held their fire.

Early in the address Gov. Reagan announced he will "make specific proposals and solicit other ideas." The time for harsh questioning will come when, in the course of the normal procedures of new administrations, he goes ahead with that intention.

Besides, the governor did not pass up specifics altogether. His promise to support legislation to end the wholesale preemption by the state of local law enforcement authority struck a responsive chord at Long Beach City Hall and others throughout the state.

ASIDE FROM the major elements of his platform—and now of his administration—he spoke of the need for improvements in workmen's compensation and tightening of procedures to alleviate unjust burdens. His approach to welfare reform was one of rehabilitation and, beyond that, encouragement to private industry to provide jobs.

The whole inaugural occasion was charged with hope and purpose. Now comes the interlude of organization and work to answer the hard, one-word question: "How?"

High, the Student Government Class focused special attention on safety by an essay contest.

And each of the 19 schools displays on its flagstaff a green pennant with the white cross of the National Safety Council—except when temporarily disqualified. That occurs whenever a student-caused accident at the school happens. Then the pennant must be displayed inside for 30 days as a constant reminder.

The program has produced good results in the 119 cities where it has been tried. It has saved young lives. And its lessons may be expected to linger on into adult life.

Consider Facts Before Getting 'Het Up' About Bombing Toll on Civilians

From Our National Bureau

WASHINGTON — It would be a mistake, one feels, to admit the latest spate of stories about civilian casualties from American bombing in North Vietnam as additional evidence of a "credibility gap" chargeable to the Johnson administration.

Whether incredulity in fact exists in any such measure as is asserted is itself debatable. This is one of those cases where a catch phrase is running wild. At any rate, the administration's case about civilian casualties is believable and understandable.

A CAREER OFFICER remarked the other day, "We may have been guilty of suppression of information by accident. If so, we did not know it was happening, and now, I still don't know what we could have done about it if we had known."

His point was that stories of civilian casualties have been appearing for at least a year in the newspapers of foreign governments friendly to us whose correspondents have had the entry to Hanoi and other parts of North Vietnam not open until just recently to American reporters.

Some of these stories by British, French, and Canadian journalists, especially, have been reprinted and broadcast in the United States, with little impact.

When an American reporter, Harrison Salisbury, of the New York Times, makes his report it suddenly becomes big news and is treated by some in this country as shocking not only in itself but as an example of the administration's refusal to tell the public the truth. As my friend said, "What were we going to do—mimeo-graph the stories in 'Le Monde' and issue them as White House documents?"

TO AN EXTENT, the administration is the victim of the accuracy of its own reporting. When the first big air strikes were made on oil farms and other strategic targets near Hanoi and Haiphong, the administration gave out extremely detailed accounts, supported by photographs to prove how precise the bombing had been. That, unfortunately, was a textbook instance which could rarely if ever be repeated. The weather was perfect, the response of enemy defenses was limited because surprise had been achieved, the most skillful pilots had been used, and there had been opportunity for intensive briefing on pinpoints.

It has been most often the case since then that all these factors have been against us rather than with us.

Enemy defense has been ready and effective. It would be folly to send photo planes in, and certainly lose some, to record results.

Bombers carrying heavier loads than they were meant to, finding enemy fighters on their tails, are inevitably going to have to jettison some bombs off target if the planes and crew are going to make it home to fight another day. Not all pilots are as good as the best. In summary, perfect precision is not always attainable, and accurate reporting backed by pictures is not always possible.

NOR ARE THE TARGET AREAS necessarily as innocent as the North Vietnamese claim. Mr. Salisbury managed to convey the impression that relentless assaults by bombing planes on Nam Ding have been aimed wholly at a civilian population in a city chiefly distinguished as the site of a textile mill.

Consider, on the other hand, the views of Navy Comdr. Robert C. Mandeville, who has flown bombing missions there. To him, the city is "ringed with fire," holding missile and conventional anti-aircraft defenses so heavy as to suggest it has tactical importance greater than one textile mill. In fact, it has a transportation center, trans-shipment area, fuel depot, and main Hanoi-Haiphong route.

It might be just as well to stop and think a moment before joining the cry about the credibility gap.

WHAT OTHERS SAY

"Breakfast at Tiffany's" is my Bay of Pigs.

Certainly there can be no question that the First Amendment protects expressions in opposition to national foreign policy in Vietnam and to the Selective Service System.

I have always refused to accept the alternative of either the United States or France.

—Germany's Kurt-Georg Kiesinger on foreign relations.

Europe Shies From Our Asia Entanglements

New York Times Service

PARIS — It is fashionable to say the world's conscience has been aroused by our bombings of North Vietnam and emotions have surely and understandably been stirred. But the world approach to such tragedies is strangely dehumanized; everything depends so heavily on preconceived bias.

Thus, on one side, there is genuine sadness and well-orchestrated rage about aerial attacks but no mention of the disemboweling knives used with deliberate deadliness by Viet Cong terrorists in the South. And vice versa on the other side.

PUT ANOTHER WAY, one finds little mention of and no organized opposition to Egyptian bombing of Nasser's adversaries in the Yemen. Often, as in North Vietnam, innocents are killed there although the explosives are of Soviet, not American, manufacture. Yet no Bertrand Russell inquiry into their use has been proposed.

One can defend neither bombing nor disemboweling of civilians, but both help explain the furore stirred by Harrison Salisbury's dispatches from Hanoi. Europe had been more aware of events in North Vietnam than the United States because its press had printed accounts from successive French, British and other correspondents. Salisbury is the first accredited American reporter. Nevertheless, Salisbury's dispatches have excited European as well as American reactions.

They describe considerable damage in civilian areas, but official Hanoi casualty statistics are not heavy. Jean Sainteny, friend of Ho Chi Minh and former Gaullist minister, reported last year that U.S. bombing of the north was substantially accurate and aimed at military targets. Jean Decornoy of Le Monde recently discussed U.S. Air Force attempts to damage communications between Hanoi and China, and also with South Vietnam. Nightly he had seen lines of trucks working southward, presumably bearing equipment for Communist forces below the 17th parallel.

In America, Salisbury's dispatches stimulated Doves to demand stronger peace efforts and stimulated Hawks to demand stronger war efforts. Some anti-Johnson Democrats intimate that, under President Kennedy, things would have been different.

European opinion is especially concerned lest the conflict ultimately suck everyone into its vortex. This is the inner meaning of the excitement renewed here by Salisbury's dispatches.

No similar excitement was ever produced when venturesome travelers reported on fairly bloody actions by Egyptian tanks and aircraft in the Yemen because that region at present is tangential to the zones of power rivalry.

THIS COMBINATION of moral indignation and self-interested fear should be fully appreciated by Washington when regarding European public reaction to our Vietnam policy. It emphasizes Europe's distaste for any effort to link NATO in any way with our Asian military position.

Since world War I, starting with Germany, Europe has been extruded from the Orient, save for a few vestigial toeholds; and with the loss of material possessions has come a change in global attitudes. Save for our loyal but increasingly feeble British ally, no European nation even seems ready to offer any longer the kind of vigorous support tendered during the 1962 Cuban showdown.

Filibuster Is Tough Issue for Humphrey

From Our National Bureau

WASHINGTON — As a result of his "other" job, Vice President Hubert Humphrey may find himself facing one of his most difficult decisions since taking office when the 90th Congress opens Tuesday.

Humphrey, who also wears the hat of presiding officer of the Senate, is faced with deciding the outcome of a fight over that hoary Senate institution, the filibuster.

Unfortunately, Humphrey will draw little help from the experience of two of his predecessors, Lyndon Johnson and Richard Nixon, who failed to solve the same sticky parliamentary question.

Humphrey's difficulties concern Senate Rule 22, which requires a two-thirds majority of senators to end debate. Widespread bipartisan support has developed for changing the rule to reduce the number of votes needed to close debate.

Some senators favor a three-fifths majority; others want a majority of 51 members, and still others would like a simple majority of members present and voting.

COMPOUNDING THE QUESTION is the contention of some senators that each new Congress has the constitutional right to change its rules. Opponents of any change say the Senate is a continuing body and rule 22 automatically carries over.

Humphrey, who fought for making it easier to cut off debate when he was a senator, could be faced with a filibuster against a ruling that would make it easier to break a filibuster.

Johnson, when he was the Senate's presiding officer, passed the buck by ruling that the Senate itself had to decide whether Rule 22 carries over. When Nixon was vice president, he gave an advisory opinion that the Senate could, at the start of each new Congress, determine its rules by majority vote and that any previously adopted rule preventing this would be unconstitutional.

Humphrey isn't saying how he'll rule.

WIVES OF NEWLY-ELECTED Republican congressmen were advised by the wife of a leading House Republican last week that in Washington, the hemlines of their dresses may be an even more important fashion consideration than the dresses themselves.

Mrs. Leslie Arends, wife of the GOP house whip, from Illinois, cautioned some 40 wives of GOP newcomers that hems in their dresses tell more about what they wear than does the label.

"If the hem is machine-stitched in, rip it out and put it in again with invisible hand stitches," Mrs. Arends advised.

THE UNITED STATES apparently acted none too soon last year in imposing a restricted fishing limit for nine miles beyond the three-mile territorial limit.

The U.S. Bureau of Commercial Fisheries reports that a 550-ton Japanese trawler has been dispatched to explore fishing possibilities off the Southern California coast.

For years, the Japanese have avoided most traditional U.S. fishing grounds, but the current expedition and an earlier one off the northwest indicate they have been emboldened by Russian forays into American waters.

L. A. C. SAYS Older Men Can Help Returning Veterans

By L. A. COLLINS SR.

YOUNG MEN 18 to 25 years of age face greater problems today than have many of those in the past. As they finish high school or college they face induction into one of the armed forces. Many spend two or more years in uniform and then are dumped back into our economic and social structure. The interruption of their schooling and years in the armed services do not leave them with the kind of understanding they would have if they had gone directly from school into some kind of work.

They represent a large part of our population which deserves greater consideration than they are receiving. We look after them with many organizations during their years through high school. They have their school organizations, Boy Scouts, Boys Clubs, P.T.A., and many other organizations constantly looking out for their welfare. But when they get back from the armed services many feel lost. They have the veteran school privileges of which many take advantage. But they do not have the necessary understanding of what they want to major in to provide them with the tools for a future vocation.

THE SCHOOLS are doing a splendid job in attempting to counsel them in the right channels. But the greatest help they could have would be the interest of the older men with whom they come in contact. But that contact is of little value unless it is used by both the young man and the older man to exchange ideas. Young men look up to older men whom they respect. Older men have a great wealth of experience that could be helpful to the young man trying to make up his mind what trade, profession or business he is to follow.

Older men feel at a disadvantage because they may feel out of touch with the younger generation. This would be quickly overcome if they would just make it a point to talk to the young fellow. He may be the boy across the street or next door. He may be working in your office or shipping room. He is struggling to get his foot on the ladder. He wants to get or already is married. But coming from the Army or Navy this economic system may seem a strange and discouraging venture for him.

Some 10 years ago about 400 ex-service people were enrolled at City College. Each Monday morning of each semester they were in a vocation class. But the counselors felt they needed help. The Rotary Club provided a speaker at each of these classes. They were successful men in the vocation specified by the counselors. The speaker talked about his vocation for 20 minutes and answered questions for another 20 minutes. An example was the chief accountant of the Douglas plant who told of what was needed for that vocation. After the meeting a young man came up to the speaker and said: "Now I know what I want to do. I was good in math in high school, but did not realize how I could use it." This experience can be magnified many times. It is an example of what successful men can do to help guide the young man who may be confused.

OLDER MEN who are well established in their business or profession, can look back and find many instances when they have been helped by a word spoken to them at some critical period. They can recall how, in their youth, some older man took an interest in them. It does not mean offering a job or financial help. It simply means giving a little of yourself and of your experience. The opportunity to be of real service is all around us as these young men strive to get their feet on the ladder. We can pay off the debts we owe to others, by trying to be a friend to young men of today.

Cullen Has 'Trained' for Political Career

Editor's Notes: Mike Cullen, Long Beach attorney and one of 34 freshmen assemblymen elected in November, explains his background, career lawmaking responsibilities in the following interview profile.

MIKE CULLEN took an oath 21 years ago and became the youngest commissioned officer in the U.S. Navy at age 18. After seven years on a destroyer and a 1952 Pentagon stint working liaison with Congress, he decided legislative service was "where the action and excitement was."

Cullen took the oath of office Monday as the new Democratic assemblyman for the 44th District comprised of West Long Beach, Lakewood, Carson and Dominguez.

The interim years, from 1952, were spent in calculated preparation for a political career. It included law school, service with the state attorney general's office, service as a private law clerk to an appeals court judge, a brief association with the law firm of Ball, Hunt & Hart, then private practice and finally an unsuccessful bid for Congress here two years ago.

IT WAS THE IDEA of elective legislative service, rather than personalities in that estate, that captivated Cullen. He says he has no particular lawmaker heroes, possibly excepting Jesse M. Unruh. "Every time I hear him speak I am impressed."

Unruh's plan to generally reduce committee assignments to three for each assemblyman fits well with Cullen's idea of lawmaking. Heretofore, the prestige of multiple memberships has been thick but attention to committee business has often been proportionately thin.

Beyond spending the first few months listening, Cullen's philosophy of his new job "is that I would be more effective within the committee than on the floor. You can make progress in a committee where persuasive argument might prevail, but it's not often you change votes with stirring speeches on the Assembly floor."

"And with the raise in pay I think committee work merits undivided attention."

Interested in the obvious state problems, Cullen otherwise claims no crusades. He is, however, especially interested in salvaging school dropouts by resorting to live-in schools patterned along lines of the ROTC camps. And he says he would work to simplify accounting procedures for doctors and pharmacists working in the Medicare program.

Assemblyman Cullen's political philosophy probably falls within the current terms of "conservative Democrat."

"I am apprehensive," he said, "of legislators who appear to want to make California a pilot model for the welfare state with a view to extending such government to other states and countries — such ideas as unemployment benefits so large that it is uneconomical for recipients to seek work."

HIS LEGAL TRAINING grounds a specific and intense feeling about contracts in general and particularly the sanctity of private contract in terms of housing. Thus he is for repeal of the owner-occupant section of the Rumford open housing law, contending that owner-occupants should not be subject to fair housing laws.

Cullen sees possible relief for the Negro in housing matters in tract housing. "Private people" don't have tract housing, he points out, so Negroes cannot be denied entry there. Fears of Caucasians of massive neighborhood saturation by Negroes are misplaced fears, in Cullen's view, simply because there aren't enough Negro families in Long Beach, for instance, to put even one family in every block.

SUMMING UP, Cullen says that government, "except for the draft, should not be able to force a person to enter a contract against his will."

MIKE CULLEN

For liaison with his constituents in one of the most densely populated districts in the state, Cullen is considering use of a periodic questionnaire. But he would prefer personal communication with district residents.

"Legislation is not created in a vacuum. It is the contributions of scores of legislators from all walks of life who reflect the apprehensions and desires of the people who send them to Sacramento. If the voter desires a change in a law or a new law, he should realize an obligation to transmit that desire on an inexpensive postcard to the legislator at the State Capitol," said Cullen.

A DESCENDANT OF Irish immigrants from the 1846 potato famine, Cullen admits his party affiliation came mainly from family tradition, but added, "I am not enchanted with the status-quo, no-change attitude of the GOP."

FRUITION OF Cullen's dream of legislative service came high. His recent campaign cost $27,000 and $13,000 of it was deficit. He borrowed the $13,000.

Cullen's legislative assistant is John H. Leahy, a Notre Dame law graduate who lived here briefly and recently returned from practice in Chicago to take his new post. Miss Karyl Marsh is Cullen's legislative secretary.

Although the U.S. Congress is his first love, Cullen said he looks eagerly to Assembly service, and, "the voters willing, I'd be delighted to serve several terms. I look upon this as a new career for which I've been working very hard to prepare myself."

Vet Says Stop Communism

EDITOR:

I am a Vietnam veteran, and I am sick and tired of draft dodgers who justify their lack of backbone, with political loudmouthery and loose theories.

They're quick to jump on the Viet-nik bandwagon with "get out of Vietnam" sings, and justify this saying, "Vietnamese civilians — North Vietnamese at that — are being murdered by our bombers."

Why don't they ever ask about how we came to be in South Vietnam? In essence, because of a little guy (S. V.N.) who asked us to help throw out a giant bully, communism.

We're there now, because of the Communist aggression against S.V.N., who slaughter S.V.N.'s people by the hundreds.

But who carries a sign protesting that? No one, that's who.

Sure Hanoi wants peace — a piece of South Vietnam, Thailand, Laos, Cambodia, Japan, all the way to the LBJ ranch.

I sincerely feel that we do have something in common with South Vietnam; a desire to be left alone, with freedom from Communist aggression.

Can't the people understand that the Communists aren't playing; they're dead set on conquering South Vietnam; and if they felt strong enough, they would come after us. I ask you, if that ever happens, who would we call on to stop the bully?

The time to stop communism is now, in Vietnam, Korea, Berlin, and wherever we are asked to do so.

Not in Agreement

EDITOR:

In reading Mrs. Snider's view on condolence cards, I find a very cold individual. Does she expect thanks for Christmas cards also?

She obviously hasn't had the misfortune of having anyone close or dear to her pass away. Otherwise, she would know that the bereaved is also on a very busy schedule.

I would suggest to Mrs. Snider not to waste her precious time to pick out a card, if she herself is so ignorant as to expect thanks from a person with enough things to worry and grieve about.

Pension Question

EDITOR:

Ex-Governor Brown will receive $21,000 a year pension for the rest of his life, regardless of how much money he earns from other sources.

We "oldsters" can only earn $1,500 and draw Social Security. We like to eat, dress and live as well as Mr. Brown. Why are we on y allowed to earn such a small amount?

Wire Tapping to Be Hot Issue in Trial of Baker

WASHINGTON — The most sensational political trial in recent Washington history opens Monday when

DREW PEARSON

Bobby Baker, former Senate secretary, goes on trial for income tax evasion.

Involved will be not merely the future of a young man who was the friend of senators and presidents, but also:

1. The ramifications of illegal wire tapping, even when the evidence is not used directly to secure an indictment;
2. The past operations of one of the wealthiest senators, the late Bob Kerr, D-Okla., who took Baker up on the mountaintop;
3. The operations of a powerful Republican, Rep. John W. Byrnes, Wis., and his financial ties to Bobby Baker through the MAGIC firm;
4. The friendship between Baker and Lyndon Johnson, who used the enterprising young man from Pickens, S. C., as his eyes and ears in the Senate;
5. The whole question of raising political campaign funds.

Of these, the most important principle involved is the use of wire tapping. One revelation likely to come out at the Baker trial is a phone call he received from Bobby Kennedy, then attorney general.

"GET OFF THE PHONE. You shouldn't be talking," warned Kennedy cryptically.

In view of the Justice Department's recent revelation that wire taps and electronic devices were used to monitor some of Baker's conversations, the warning is highly significant. U.S. Judge Oliver Gasch has now supported the Justice Department's claim that none of the evidence used to indict Baker was taken from wire-tapped conversations.

But the basic constitutional issue is whether the FBI can listen in on a man's conversations and pick up such clues as "tell 'X' not to say anything."

Then the FBI can go to "X" and can bluff him into revealing what the conversation was all about.

Judge Gasch also ruled that J. Edgar Hoover did not have to testify as to whether he had supplied the Justice Department with all the bugged transcripts involving Baker. Hoover did not even sign a statement on this point. Merely an inter-office memo from Hoover to Fred Vinson, Jr., head of the Justice Department's criminal division, bearing no signature, was submitted in evidence.

This phase of the Baker case is certain to be appealed to the Supreme Court, if there is a conviction.

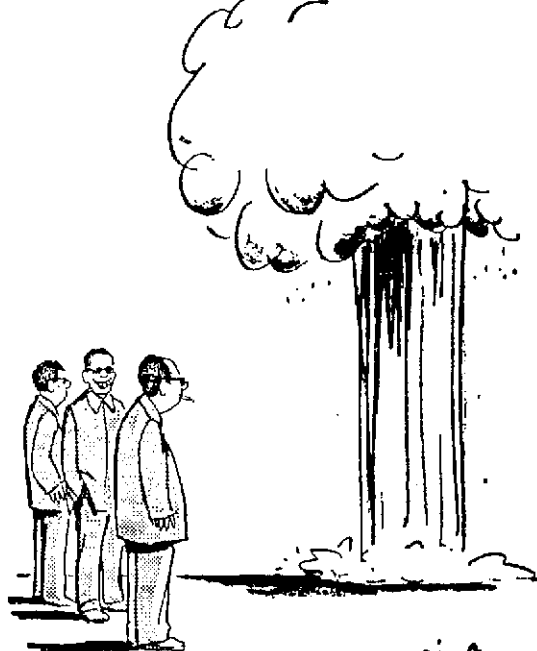

MOST SENSATIONAL testimony in the Baker trial will concern Sen. Bob Kerr, the big oil man from Oklahoma who dominated the Senate Finance Committee when in 1962 it was writing tougher taxes on the federal savings and loan institutions. Many savings and loan executives were anxious to avoid this increased tax, but their overtures to both the late Sen. Harry Byrd, D-Va., and Kerr had been unsuccessful.

However, Bobby Baker suggested to Kerr that some of the savings executives were willing to put up $200,000 if their taxes were not appreciably increased. At first Kerr was uninterested, then he recalled that the Democratic party faced a tough election fight in Oklahoma. The testimony will bring out that he agreed to receive the money—in cold cash.

On Nov. 9, 1962 Bobby Baker brought in the first installment — $100,000 in greenbacks — and laid it on Sen. Kerr's desk. Of this, $33,000 came from Sidney Taher, chairman of First Financial in Beverly Hills; $50,000 came from Stewart Davis and $17,000 from John J. Marten, officers of the Great Western Financial Corporation in Los Angeles.

KERR COUNTED OUT the money and stacked it in three piles on his desk. He put $50,000 in one pile to go to the Oklahoma campaign. He put $10,000 in another pile to go for contingent expenses. And he put $40,000 in another pile, which he gave to Bobby Baker.

SHE'S EVERYBODY'S FAVORITE AT 79

Ex-Showgirl Retains Charm--- Without Chorus Line or Juggling

By BARBARA KNESIS

When she was 16, Dixie Clendenan of Los Alamitos was the sweetheart of a Spokane, Wash., chorus line.

Today, at 79, she hasn't lost an ounce of charm.

Unwrinkled and as wiry as when she was in a vaudeville juggling slack wire act, Dixie claims the hearts of hundreds of Marines at the Los Alamitos Naval Air Station where she has been base seamstress for the last five years.

At specially called inspections, "my boys," as she calls them, think nothing of dropping into her tiny apartment at 4424 Green Avenue for last-minute alterations to their uniforms.

Needless to say, Dixie is ever obliging.

IN BETWEEN TIME, Marjorie comes to drink coffee, eat a home-cooked meal or just listen to Dixie reminisce.

"In the first place," she says before you can sit down, "Abe Lincoln was my father's commander-in-chief."

She then launches into the years of milking cows and splitting wood on her family's Kansas farm.

"If President Johnson wants to know how to fight show business," she says with a wink.

AT HER FIRST show, Dixie was stage struck. She hasn't been able to shake it since.

"I was gonna be a great dramatic actress. You know where I ended up on the stage... doing a juggling slack wire act."

She slaps her knee and laughs aloud.

Dixie pursued her career during her four marriages, playing up and down the coast.

"I was married all my life but not to the same man," she says.

At 50 when many women are setting down to be grandmothers, Dixie took up driving a cab in the nation's capital.

"IT TOOK ME three to four months to sling my car around as well as any man. I could take it and dish it out," she says.

She once let what she referred to as "a woman-beater" have a stiff right in the chin.

"And he got out of my taxi fast while he was still in one piece," she says.

Dixie spent 10 years behind the wheels.

Then she worked at the Gay 90's until "they turned it into a go-go place."

Is she through with show business?

Civic Leader Urges Vote for 'Cerritos'

"The name 'Cerritos' for the community of Dairy Valley will change overnight the image of the municipality from a farm town to an important college city," Alfred V. Highstreet, Chamber of Commerce president, said in urging a "yes" vote at the special election Tuesday.

A search for a new name for the city began more than 2 years ago when newcomers and pioneer residents realized the need for such a change because of the changing character of the city.

Electors of the original Los Angeles County community voted to incorporate the 8.5 square-mile U-shaped community 10 years ago to preserve the open fields for dairying and other agricultural industries.

BECAUSE of the new era demands for more residential and commercial land, electors of the city have voted to abandon the city's restricted agriculture land use plan, approved a $3 million bond issue for a municipal water-system and adopted a $50,000 master land use plan in the past 18 months.

The talk is part of the Community Lecture series inaugurated last fall at the college.

The address is open to the public.

Another L.B. Firm Joins Plane 'Stretch' Business

By LEE CRAIG
Aerospace Editor

Douglas Aircraft Company's Long Beach plant, with its lengthened DC8 "Super Sixty" series jetliners, no longer has a local monopoly on the airplane stretching business.

Across the airport from Douglas is an ambitious, comparatively small concern that's also building new dimensions into airliners.

However, C-Air, Inc., 3521 E. Spring St., is enlarging an aircraft originally built by another company into an optimum size for a third-level air carrier.

The plane is the tried and proven Havilland Dove, a twin-engine British-made craft in use throughout the world mainly in commuter and corporate operations.

Major changes to the Dove, renamed the "Carstedt Jet Liner 600" by C-Air, include stretching the fuselage 87 inches and switching to a pair of Garrett - A1Research TPE-331 propeller-driven jet engines of 605 horsepower each.

Seating capacity is now 18 passengers, compared with the old Dove's 10, and cruise speed is up 100 or so miles an hour to 300.

Flight testing of the prototype began last month and Federal Aviation Agency certification is expected early this year. C-Air, owned by Von Carstedt, owns 17 other de Havilland Doves which will also be converted to the new configuration.

Worker Finds Dead Infant

The badly decomposed body of a one-month old female baby was found by an oil worker Saturday near a Signal Hill oil road.

Signal Hill Sgt. Don Anderson said the baby was the county's first "Jane Doe death" of the year.

THE BODY WAS found wrapped in pink blankets inside a white pillow case by William Allen Kelly, 2491 E. Fifth St., who was inspecting oil lines for a vacuum leak 500 feet east of Cherry Avenue and Burnett Street.

The Shell Oil Co. employee said he discovered the body under a pipe in a hillside culvert at 4:30 p.m. and summoned police.

Coroner's deputies said the infant had been dead about a month.

Police had no clues to the baby's identity, Sgt. Anderson said, and the body was so badly decomposed cause of death could not immediately be determined.

Two Face Kidnap Charges

Two Willowbrook area men were in Los Angeles County jail Saturday on suspicion of kidnaping two teen-age girls.

They also are accused of a $1,000 robbery at a Firestone area home more than two months ago.

Ronald Reese Thompson, 19, and Fred Earl Davis, 23, both of 12010 1/2 Wilmington Ave., were booked at Firestone Sheriff's Station on suspicion of statutory rape, robbery, kidnaping and cultivating marijuana, deputies said.

Detective Sgt. C.J. Severs said the suspects were arrested after an 18-year-old girl told deputies she escaped from their apartment.

SHE SAID SHE had been abducted Thursday morning from an Inglewood bus stop and taken to the Wilmington Avenue address.

The girl told deputies that Davis and Thompson, whom she dated about a year ago but stopped dating on parental orders, said she was going to be a prostitute to earn money for them.

Sgt. Severs said when deputies went to the apartment, they found a 16-year-old Lennox area girl reported as a runaway Dec. 29.

The teen-ager said she had been kidnaped from a bowling alley and forced into prostitution by the pair, Severs said. She was released to her parents.

A SMALL GARDEN of marijuana was found behind the garage at the address, Severs said.

Thompson and Davis surrendered themselves to Firestone deputies Thursday night.

Severs said the pair have also been identified as the intruders who broke into the home of Joseph Bloodshaw of Los Angeles Oct. 18. Bloodshaw's wife and two daughters were handcuffed and Bloodshaw was severely beaten. More than $1,000 was stolen from a home safe.

THUGS BREAK BOTTLES ON HIS HEAD

Barkeep Robbed, Beaten Up

When a West Long Beach bartender came to work early Saturday, he was greeted by two soft-spoken thugs who forced him to open a safe, emptied it and broke liquor bottles on his head.

Daniel J. Curran, 39, of 1420 Parade St., told officers he opened the Carnou Bar, 1830 Santa Fe Ave., at 6 a.m., and found the pair standing next to the light switch.

The bartender opened the safe at gunpoint, and the robbers pocketed $325, Officer Keith E. Elkins said. Curran said they ordered him to lie down behind the bar, and each man struck him with an empty bottle.

'Fall' Continues

Arthur Miller's "After the Fall" continues its engagement at Actor's Theater, 117 S. Hamel Drive, Beverly Hills, playing Wednesdays through Sundays through January.

The pair fled through a rear door, he told police.

Patrolman Kenneth L. Edwards said the bartender told him both suspects were neatly dressed, soft-spoken and appeared to be fairly well educated. They pried open the back door of the bar to enter, police said.

$1,500 Burglar Loot Includes Color TV

Mrs. James L. Treadwell, 3730 Gundry Ave., camesterling silver service and a home from church to find her home ransacked, Long Beach police said Saturday. The burglar entered a bedroom window, police said.

Stab Victim Is In Fair Condition

A 24-year-old punch press operator was in fair condition in Pacific Hospital Saturday after he was stabbed in the chest and forehead outside a Long Beach apartment.

Harry Harold Richter, 2371 1/2 Lime Ave., told police a man called him outside his girlfriend's apartment at 4:30 a.m. and stabbed him twice after a brief conversation.

The stabbing occurred in the courtyard of 1821 Harbor Ave., Patrolman Columbus Lowe said.

The victim told police he had been having trouble with other clubs.

Ruby Death Closes Another Chapter

With his weeping family mourning him as a "mis-guided patriot," a small-time Dallas saloon keeper was buried Friday beside his immigrant parents and another chapter was closed in the continuing story of the assassination of President John F. Kennedy.

Jack Ruby, slayer of presidential assassin Lee Harvey Oswald, was laid to rest in Chicago's peaceful Westlawn Cemetery with rites that were in stark contrast to the scene of violence in the basement of the Dallas jail when, on Nov. 24, 1963, he gunned down Oswald before the eyes of 40 million shocked television viewers. There were only 75 mourners inside the green canvas tent at graveside as Rabbi David Graubart intoned in Hebrew the words that committed Ruby's body to the earth. Newsmen and curious onlookers were kept at a distance by Chicago police, alert against a possible last outburst of violence in the Ruby saga.

Rabbi Graubart, seeking to explain the slaying of Oswald, said, "There are men who acquire their world in one moment. There are men also who destroy their world in one moment. Jack Ruby probably thought his was a heroic act and that he would acquire his world in a moment."

THE RABBI SAID RUBY was "not an evil man. He loved the martyred President . . . he made it his own task to avenge his death—and who knoweth the way of the spirit. Let us understand and be sympathetic to pray for the rest of the soul of Jack Ruby. On the surface we would consider Jack Ruby as having been an avenger . . . a misguided kind of patriot. There were conflicts . . . raging within him. Shall we condemn Jack Ruby? Certainly not."

Leading the mourners were Ruby's three brothers and four sisters.

RUBY WAS TRIED for Oswald's slaying and on March 14, 1964, he was convicted of murder and sentenced to die in the electric chair.

The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals reversed the conviction and ordered a second trial for Ruby on grounds that the trial should not have been held in the City of Dallas, the assassination site.

Ruby's motives for slaying Oswald have remained obscure.

Some said he was a madman. Others claimed he was a conspirator.

Ruby insisted there was no conspiracy and denied he was part of a plot to kill Kennedy.

Now the world may never know all the facts surrounding the bizarre events in Dallas that tragic weekend.

THE SHADOWY NIGHTCLUB owner died last weekend in the same hospital where both Kennedy and Oswald were pronounced dead.

Ruby was taken from jail to the hospital for what was first believed to be pneumonia. Tests showed that Ruby was infected with cancer of his lungs, pancreas and other portions of his body. His death was attributed to a blood clot of the lungs.

It was said of Ruby that he was obsessed with the idea that he was a nobody with a burning ambition to make it big some day.

THE FIRST WEEK of 1967 brought a spate of talk about the possibility of Vietnam peace negotiations—but if real progress was made it took place in secret.

Mai Van Bo, head of the North Vietnamese mission in Paris, said that if the United States would quit bombing his country and then ask peace talks "I believe this proposal would be examined and studied."

He insisted that the United States had no right to ask the North Vietnamese for any reciprocal reduction in the fighting.

In Washington, Robert J. McCloskey, spokesman for the State Department, had this to say:

"We are prepared to order a cessation of all bombing of North Vietnam the moment we are assured, privately or otherwise, that this step will be answered promptly by a corresponding and appropriate de-escalation on the other side."

IT ALL LOOKED VERY MUCH like the same mixture as before. The resemblance became even closer when the North Vietnamese Radio broadcast a statement by Premier Pham Van Dong on his government's views of the moment.

Pham Van Dong said, "The position of the four points of the Democratic Republic of Vietnam (i.e., Hanoi) is a basis of ways to settle Vietnam problems."

The oft-repeated four points would, among other things, require settlement of the war along lines demanded by the National Liberation Front, political arm of the Communist Viet Cong guerrillas. Nobody really expected South Vietnam or the United States to buy that.

Premier Nguyen Cao Ky of South Vietnam nevertheless professed optimism that Hanoi is being driven closer to the conference table every day. The reason: The North Vietnamese "are finding the war too expensive both in money and men."

INTERNAL DISSENSION in Red China, main supplier of munitions for the Vietnamese Communists, persisted, while outsiders puzzled over what was really going on.

A possible clue was provided when Communist Party Leader Mao Tse-tung's militant, young Red Guards put up posters in Peking asserting that he was muscled out of the presidency in 1958 by followers of Liu Shao-chi, who got the job, and still has it.

The Red Guards quickly followed up with another wall poster series quoting Mao as saying he had made a wrong choice of successor to party positions of power. Mao specifically cited Liu, party General Secretary Ten Hsiao-ping and former Peking Mayor Peng Chen.

Does Mao want to be president again? You couldn't tell yet, from a distance.

and commercial relations—the first formal opening of relations between present-day Spain and a Communist country in Europe.

As Spain moved to improve its trade, the United States took steps to cut off some of its own—with Rhodesia. President Johnson signed an executive order forbidding purchases from or sales to the rebellious British colony in conformity with a United Nations resolution adopted on Dec. 16.

IN FLORIDA, FEDERAL AGENTS balked another sort of export—a group of revolutionaries planning an invasion of Haiti, to be followed by an attack on Cuba. Launching such movements from U.S. soil is illegal.

In the bag after the roundup were Rolando Masferrer Rojas, one-time senator in the Cuban government of Fulgencio Batista, about 70 other Cuban and Haitian refugees, and four Americans.

IN INDIA, PRIME MINISTER Indira Gandhi had the week's oddest governmental problem—how to placate three jagadgurus. A jagadguru is a Hindu holy man of high stature, and these three want a total ban on the slaughter of cattle, revered in the Hindu religion.

The Jagadguru Shankaracharya of Puri had been fasting for nearly seven weeks to support the demand. He was backed by the jagadgurus Jyotirmath of Uttar Pradesh and Dwarka of Gujarat. Mrs. Gandhi said she would name a top-level committee to try to iron it all out.

ANOTHER MAN OF RELIGION, the Rev. Adam Clayton Powell Jr.—who also is the congressman from New York's predominantly Negro Harlem district—was making waves in Washington.

Powell is under fire for ultra-free spending of U.S. funds as chairman of the House Education and Labor Committee. A House investigating committee has recommended that his wife be removed from her $20,500 job on Powell's payroll, and a number of colleagues feel the congressman should be deprived of his chairmanship, and maybe his seat.

From his holiday hideaway in the Bahamas, Powell, who is a Negro, denounced the hubbub as an attempt to handcuff his race's best-known spokesman in Congress.

THE 'BLOW-UP'

Seal of Approval Denial Deployed

By BOSLEY CROWTHER
New York Times Service
NEW YORK — It is indeed an irony that the first film to be denied a seal under the operation of the motion picture industry's newly "liberalized" production code should be an exceptionally fine picture which maturely conveys the idea that evil (as well as beauty) is in the eye of the beholder—that people looking for evil see what they want to see.

This is essentially the moral that is stunningly and soberly expressed in Michele Antonioni's "Blow-up," the picture denied a seal.

The ultimate statement of this picture about a London photographer who is so used to looking for shocks and sensations that he can't recognize truth or love is that anyone brought to this vironment in which he lives is a sadly unfortunate person and maybe he'd better go out in the garden and eat worms.

THE PERSONS who have the responsibility of administering the code seem caught up in much the same condition as the fellow in this film. They are so accustomed to looking for evil — so alert for and ready to pounce on whatever appears in violation of the moral standards specified in the code—that they can't bring themselves to discover or acknowledge the larger ambience of good in which these dubious aspects of evil may appropriate.

Princess Ira Furstenberg, one of the most photographed girls in Europe, makes her screen bow in "Matchless," adventure yarn with Patrick O'Neal as her leading man and Henry Silva as the heavy.

A de-glamorized Vima Lisi (above) stamps out mud for bricks on the Rumanian farm on which she and Anthony Quinn live in "The 25th Hour," being filmed in Yugoslavia.

Arch-villain Ernst Stavros Blofeld, number one man of the international conspiracy, SPECTRE, is unmasked in the latest James Bond thriller, "You Only Live Twice." His scarred visage is revealed in the person of British actor Donald Pleasence (left). Sean Connery is once again starred as Bond.

Mary Tyler Moore Views on Disaster

NEW YORK — "Now that I know what an actor goes through on stage," said Mary Tyler Moore, "I will never again applaud perfunctorily. I will applaud till my hands are red!"

Miss Moore — better to say Mrs. Grant Tinker, wife of NBC TV's vice president in charge of programs — was still wincing a little at the memory of the audience talking back to the actors in David Merrick's "Breakfast at Tiffany's" which was closed (mercifully) before it could ever open on B-way.

There's a movie of hers ("Thoroughly Modern Millie") coming out, and another one ("What's So Bad About Beeling Good?") soon to be started, but the disastrous musical sticks in her memory like a tack in a tap dancer's shoe.

"IT WAS a shattering experience," she said. "Some people were very cruel. You can't imagine being up on stage, believing what you are doing, and people laughing at very dramatic moments."

"There was one scene where Richard Chamberlain and I were talking, and I said, from the script, 'Let's start over. Let's do it differently. And somebody in the audience yelled, 'Yeh, do the play differently.'"

"I think they had paid $50 a seat, they had heard the show was bad, and they got angry."

Then Miss Moore, the star so well known in the Dick Van Dyke TV show, had to hear repeatedly that David Merrick was trying to get Diahann Carroll to replace her.

"That was a little bit of hell to go through," she said. "My grandmother, to whom I was very close, had died, and I was so sad. I had laryngitis and a 103 temperature, I had no voice at all, and they had toyed with the idea of making an announcement about me being sick. Anyway David heard about my difficulties and he panicked. That's when the stories about Diahann Carroll started."

BUT THAT'S past, and there's work to begin on the movie with George Peppard which concerns a bird which bites people in New York and infects them with euphoria.

"George and I are a couple of Village beatniks protesting everything."

"He is bitten by this bird and begins to be happy. I am filled with disgust wondering what's wrong with him feeling so good? Then I'm bitten and we both feel good..."

THE BURNING passion to do a B-way show remains with her. "And if I did one, it would be for David Merrick. I have tremendous respect for him."

Television doesn't interest her now. "I think I've done TV at its best and to do it with somebody else would be going back."

Miss Moore was still angry at some theater audiences. "I went to see 'Man of La Mancha' in Boston," she said. "The audience clearly loved it, yet not one of them would applaud. It was just too much trouble!"

WEEKEND WINDUP — Mike Nichols wants Richard Benjamin (of "Star Spangled Girl") to join Henry Fonda and Alan Arkin in "Catch 22"

Don Kirschner reports the Monkees' second album, not even titled yet, has more than a million advance orders...

Kate Smith may make her dramatic debut on TV — in a "Batman" show... Robert Preston, who sings and dances in "I Do, I Do," is turning down offers to do ditto on TV variety shows...

Sam Goldwyn's raving about the young Francis Coppola, who filmed "You're a Big Boy Now" for a mere 750Gs... Don Rickles wrote the gag lines for Connie Francis' new cafe act.

TODAY'S BEST LAUGH: Bob Orben says one of his Christmas gifts was a smoked turkey: "I know it was smoked — I could see nicotine stains on the wings."

WISH I'D SAID THAT: The rock 'n' roll songs we can't stand today will be, in 20 years, that quiet old-time music nobody listens to any more.

REMEMBERED QUOTE: "One pound of learning requires ten pounds of common sense to apply it."

EARL'S PEARLS: Bob Schiller says he spent last weekend taking the tinsel off his Christmas tree: "Sort of a tinselotomy."

Kay Medford, in "Don't Drink the Water," plays a tourist chased by communists into a U.S. embassy behind the Iron Curtain. In housewife fashion she whines to her husband, "First no movie on the plane — then this..."

That's earl, brother.

THEATRICAL BROMIDES
Away With Cliches

By WILLIAM GLOVER
NEW YORK (AP) — Now that a new year is here, Barry Nelson wishes everyone would swear off a few old theatrical notions.
Nelson, Broadway's list of expendable bromides champion long-run star, got going the other day on a while holding forth on his pet peeve — about players being expected to give the exact same performance night after night.
"The guys that thought up that cliché," he amiably protests, "never had to do it. And the same thing goes for certain other popular axioms about stage work."
"TAKE THAT one about the show must go on! For whom?" Even though he has never missed a performance since his Broadway debut 23 years ago, the idea bugs Barry—"What other business works on such a principle?"
Then there's that slogan about no part being small which is great until you try signing a contract with management."

Or the one about the public always being right. "Some darn fool writes that he couldn't hear all the dialogue and panic breaks out all over the place. Nobody wonders if maybe he's hard of hearing or if someone was talking near him."
FOR SUPREME backstage hysteria, however, Nelson says there is nothing like the return visit of a show's director for a brush-up session six months after a run begins.
"Trying to freeze a show exactly as it was on opening night is a pernicious fallacy. It's unnatural and unhealthy, but everyone believes it because nothing has ever been said to the contrary. Well, I'd like to rouse everybody."
The red-haired actor's experience has given him more time than most to mull the perils of rigidity. His long runs include "No Time For Sergeants" (18 months), "The Moon Is Blue" (30 months), "Mary, Mary" (24 months plus the audience response, by changing characterizations, by new business and values uncovered after the opening.

NEVER TOO LATE
Community Play
Bright, Spritely

By RALPH HINMAN JR.
Drama Critic
Harry M. Lambert, a gruff, no-nonsense businessman of touchy temper, was 62 that bright summer Sunday afternoon when his bride of 30 years coyly announced: "Dear, we're going to have a baby!"
Around this seemingly fragile joke playwright Arthur Summer wove the bright and spritely "Never Too Late," which opened Friday night before a capacity crowd at Community Playhouse.
It probably will continue drawing comparable crowds during January's weekend runs because it plays upon a pair of basic human emotions: women's feelings toward motherhood and everyone's amusement over belated paternity.
BESIDES, HARRY is no ordinary man. As Keith Houdyshell ably portrays him, he's a McKinley-era holdover lumber tycoon who constantly blows his top whether or not anyone agrees with him on anything — and they'd better.
Wife Edith on the other hand, is a lovable, pick-up-after everyone sort of wife and mother. Elizabeth Carr knows — instinctively? — how to play it to perfection.
Then there's the married daughter Kate, who lives at home with her opportunistic husband Charlie. Millicent Treadwell is the pouty, spoiled little girl who finally learns during her mother's confinement how to cook — TV dinners.
Her meek-defiant husband Charlie is done to a blistering-cringing turn by Ralph Dougherty. Perhaps the show's funniest scene comes off when Charlie gets his teetotaling father-in-law drunk, alienating neighboring Mayor Crane — and finally resolving all problems.
Edith's best friend and confidant is Grace (Vi Coulter), whose doctor husband (Arthur Perkins) really started the action by confirming certain suspicions.
A SIDE conflict develops as the penny-pinching Harry butters up the mayor (Don Daniels) hopefully to get a new highway built alongside his lumberyard.
The fast-moving, well-paced show was directed by James Brittain.

Code and 'Blow-Up'

seen in Hollywood films.
Indeed, they are beautifully subtle in stating elliptically the peculiarly lonesome and pathetic attitude of the hero towards sex. He clearly has no urge whatsoever to have an affair with the woman who comes to his studio seeking the snapshots and is willing to pay with her body for them. He is mildly fascinated by her, but is actually more interested in why she is so desperately eager to retrieve the undeveloped roll of film.
And the scene with the girls is so barren of any actual libidinous desire that it is more like a wild, hysterical frolic among a bunch of kids.
It is noticeable that, although the youngsters rip and tatter their own dresses in the scene, they are fully clothed in their original uniform garments when he suddenly orders them out of his studio.
THAT'S THE fascinating thing about this picture. It is entirely a construction of moods that express the involvement of this fellow in the whimsicalities of photography. He doesn't see life as reality. He doesn't even think of it as that. He sees it only as it appears or is cleverly caught in photographs. And that is a comprehension that he thinks he can preconceive and manipulate.

Thinking of Moving? Move to Sunny San Diego... a Better Place to Live

San Diego . . . and Ryan Aeronautical . . . a great, progressive combination for security in your career and happiness in your living. Give this combination a little serious thought. If you've been plugging along for a number of years with a big outfit and feel you don't have the sense of first-hand participation in things . . . if you've been sort of working in your own little sphere and don't have the satisfaction of knowing you're contributing to the success of a product from start to finish . . . San Diego and Ryan are definitely for you.

If you looked around and perhaps you have, you'd probably find that there are a lot of other engineers who feel the same way. A common enough feeling, when there are 8,000 or more on staff. The percentage of men who can look at one of your company's products and say, "That's my baby . . ." is probably pretty small. If you're a good engineer, you're probably proud of it.

Chances are you'd like to believe your own personal contributions are important . . . recognized. After all, there is such a thing as an emotional reward, in addition to income. Check into Ryan. We believe you'll like what you see. We're solid. With our majority-owned subsidiary, Continental Motors Corporation, we do an annual business of over $400,000,000 in sales; we rank 288th among the top 500 companies in America. And over 90% of our contracts are prime. Ryan's piled up a backlog of more than $1,000,000 of work to be done here in San Diego. You've got a challenging, progressive and long-term career waiting for you at Ryan.

CRAFTSMEN

HOW CAN THE 2nd LARGEST EMPLOYER IN LONG BEACH BE NO. 1 IN THE NATION?

It's quite simple. The Long Beach Naval Shipyard, employing over 6500 people, is the second largest employer in Long Beach. However, as a family member of the U.S. Government, we help to make up the largest employer in America. In this unique position, we can offer you many unequal advantages. For example, it's possible to earn a 4 weeks' vacation (20 days) during your first year with us if you've already had 3 years of military or Federal civilian service. Over a month (26 days) if you've had 15 years' service. And 2 1/2 weeks (13 days) without any prior service. That's in addition to 13 days of sick leave each year and 8 paid holidays. Many of our over 100 vacancies listed below offer immediate additional career Federal Service fringe benefits including health and life insurance, a liberal retirement program, work stability, additional leave with full pay for reservists on 2 weeks' training, promotions based on merit and the opportunity for voluntary transfers to other Federal activities while retaining both seniority and fringe benefits. Incidentally, over 95% of our supervisory and production-facilitating positions are filled from within. We offer good wages and excellent working conditions. Why miss out? Apply by mail today or in person Monday for any of the following immediate openings, and take advantage of our new wage increases.

Major Plant Expansions Planned Locally

By KEN CHILCOTE
Business Editor

Major plant expansions, huge aerospace or electronic contracts and new manufacturing plants coming into the area will boost the economy of the Long Beach area in the coming months.

Except for the lack of housing developments, the area has entered the new year with a bright future in construction. And, the many major contracts awarded recently to Southland plants should keep employment at a high level.

Here are just some of the things that spark a bright future for the area in the months ahead:

REDONDO BEACH—TRW Systems Inc., has received a $2,900,000 contract from the U.S. Department of Commerce to analyze all kinds of high speed ground transportation, including ideas developed by industry and private inventors. The firm also has received a contract for $88,000,000 from the Canadian Province of Alberta, involving the application of aerospace systems engineering and planning techniques in hospital planning and operation. The firm will provide consulting services relative to creation of a Health Sciences Center at Edmonton.

NEWPORT BEACH—Aeronutronic Division of Philco-Ford Corp., received a $9,869,400 contract from the Army for data control sets for the Shilleagh missile system.

ANAHEIM—North American Aviation Inc., $50,000,000 initial increment of a contract for production of guidance and control systems for Minuteman II missile systems.

HAWTHORNE—Northrop Corp., $330,000 contract for technical support for flight tests programs of the Hawker-Siddeley P1127 vertical or short take-off and landing jet fighter.

SANTA ANA—Giannini Scientific Corp., $145,000 for research on an electromagnetic thruster.

COSTA MESA—Atlantic Research Corp., 3333 Harbor Blvd., has received an initial $500,000 contract of the estimated $14,000,000 program to enable it to proceed with production of Athena space boosters.

COMPTON—Chrysler Boat Corp., to meet requirements for expanding production of boats and trailers, is adding a 26,000-square-foot structure to its facilities at 1950 Santa Fe.

HAWTHORNE—Advanced Automation Corp. is building facility at 13709 Cordary St. to manufacture pulse and time delay generators, automated electronic test equipment and specialized electronic designs.

HAWTHORNE—Spacecraft Components is adding 20,000 square feet to its plant at 14137 Chadron St., to permit increased production of electrical connectors.

LONG BEACH—Metal Forming Corp., 2749 E. Wardlow Road, is stepping up production after a recent expansion of building facilities. The concern does sheet metal forming and fabrication.

LYNNWOOD—Ken-Craft Campers will move soon to a larger, new plant at 12600 S. Atlantic Blvd. The company not only manufactures its own lines of campers but also makes two other models for another company.

SANTA FE SPRINGS—Baron-Blakeslee Inc., makers of ultra-sonic cleaners, autoclaves, ovens and vapor degreasers, has purchased 2 1/2 acres at 9445 Ann St., and plans to erect an industrial plant of 35,000 square feet. Later a 7,000-square-foot structure will be provided for production of chemical solvents.

SANTA FE SPRINGS—Riverside Steel Co., has constructed a 10,000 square foot office building so employees may be moved from the shop building at 10130 Adella Ave., South Gate. The new office is at 11400 Greenstone Ave., Santa Fe Springs. The company fabricates and erects heavy structural steel buildings.

LOS ALAMITOS—Frank Pattern & Manufacturing Co., is now in production at a new factory at 10852 Kyle St., having moved from Long Beach to the new and larger quarters.

SANTA FE SPRINGS—Puritan Packaging Co., a subsidiary of Puritan Aerosol Corp., Berkeley, has occupied a new 45,000-square-foot plant at 9101 S. Sorenson Ave. Options on additional land will permit construction of three more buildings for a total of 120,000 square feet in the future.

TORRANCE—Finch Paint & Chemical Co., has added 14,440 square feet to its facilities at 20850 S. Normandie Ave., to be used as additional warehousing supporting the manufacturing plant at 1536 West 228th St.

ORANGE—Anillo Industries will begin manufacturing next month in a new 38,000-square-foot structure at 2090 N. Glassell St. It will move from smaller facilities in Huntington Park. Production of aircraft washers and metal stampings will start in the new plant by Feb. 15.

SANTA ANA—Parko Electronics Co., Inc., has moved into larger quarters at 1540 S. Lyon St., where it will expand production of solid state hermetically sealed circuits primarily for military use.

SANTA ANA—A 12,300 square foot plant is under construction at 1910 S. Yale St., for Burford Auto Finishes, now located in Santa Monica. The firm is expanding production of automotive conditioning products such as paints, waxes, polishes and cleaners.

LONG BEACH, CALIF., SUNDAY, JANUARY 8, 1967

RECENT AERIAL PHOTOGRAPH shows progress in and around Fashion Island and road work (oval boulevard will be six-lane Newport Center Drive) hastening to completion.

FROM RANCH LAND TO SMART SHOP OASIS

Fashion Center to Open in Mid-September

This is the year for the grand opening of the first portion of one of the world's largest shopping complexes — in Newport Beach.

Newport Center, the 330-acre Irvine Company enterprise at Pacific Coast Highway and Newport Center Drive, is taking shape rapidly.

Obviously further along in construction is Fashion Island, the hub of the center, which will include four major department stores.

Eventually, 51 smaller shops will flank the island. Daniel A. O'Farrell, center manager, recently said the area is 95 per cent leased.

THE SHOPPING COMPLEX has been master-planned under a new concept, whereby, the small retail shops are staggered in stair-step fashion rather than a conventional in-line layout.

This eliminates the monotonous effect which is inherent in most shopping centers. It also draws the shopper's attention directly into the shop as they walk down the mall.

Ground was broken for Fashion Island, the first phase of Newport Center, in August, 1965. Grand opening is set for next Sept. 11. Cost of developing the 75-acre island has been forecasted at $20 million.

Parking facilities for 5,500 automobiles have been planned and traffic within Fashion Island should flow smoothly because of six wide thoroughfares leading in and out of the center.

ANTICIPATED GROSS SALES will exceed $35 to $50 million within the first three years of operation.

Major tenants for the shopping complex are J. W. Robinson, Broadway-Hale, Buffums' and J. C. Penney.

Other businesses in Fashion Island are (clothing stores): Silverwoods, Back Street, Pickwick Fashions, Judy's, Chris Fashions, Desmonds, Di Orrio's, Waltah Clarke's Hawaiian Shop, Motherhood Maternity, Phelps Wilger, Show-Off Appropos, The Loo, Lerner's Youngland, Sam Bork Originals, and Gentry Shop.

Shoe store spaces have been leased to Mandel's, Paul Allan, Wetherby Kayser Shoes, Fiesta Footwear, Leeds, Gallenkamp and Newport Children's Bootery.

SEVEN RESTAURANTS INCLUDE Robert Burn's Cutty Sark, Ontra Cafeteria, Northcott's Restaurant, Cnco's, and restaurants in Buffums', Penney's and Robinson's.

Four jewelry stores are Zale's, Slavick's, Clark's and Brett-Walker Goldsmith.

Specialty stores are Hallmark of Newport, Neal's Sporting Goods, Dalton Books, Westbrook's Yardage, Penney's Patio Shop, The Tobacconist, See's Candies, Bath Shop, Mediterranean Imports, Newport Candle Center, Karl's Toys, Warren's Stereo, Plummer's, radio station KOCM-FM, a beauty salon, barber shop, florist and custom shoe building shop.

Long Beach Man Starts Own Wells Fargo 'Museum'

Wells Fargo Bank's famous early west History Room in San Francisco is getting some competition from Tom Martin, 21, of 6151 Linden Ave. Long Beach. Martin has acquired in a short time a sizeable collection of Wells Fargo memorabilia and right now is even speculating on adding a Wells Fargo stagecoach in his own old west "museum."

"I'd like to get one of everything connected with the history of Wells Fargo," he said. "It would be great to get a stagecoach if I had the room."

MARTIN, son of Mr. and Mrs. D. O. Martin, of 16222 Monterey St. Huntington Beach, started his collection a year ago when he spotted an old Wells Fargo "call card" in an antique store in Arcadia.

The call card, a diamond-shaped sign with "Wells Fargo Express" written on it, was displayed by merchants of early years when they had packages to be picked up and delivered.

The sign, which dated from around 1900 cost $85, Martin said.

THE CALL card was the beginning of a collection that now includes an old shotgun Martin found in Pasadena, a variety of wax and lead sealers, keys, handcuffs, a set of scales, service pins and even an old strongbox, used by Wells Fargo to transport gold dust and other treasure.

Martin, concluding service with the United States Coast Guard in the Bay Area, recently visited the Wells Fargo History Room to look over its large collection of early west items and to do research on his own collection.

HOW DO you go about acquiring such a collection? "It takes a lot of time and patience," Martin explained. "You have to keep a sharp eye open every time you pass an antique store. But you'd be surprised at the number of people who have collections like this. Pretty soon you find yourself in correspondence with them. Often, they're able to give your leads on where you can find a valuable item."

Martin is preparing a Wells Fargo display to be shown at the Disneyland Gun Show in June.

RELIABLE INDICATOR

Demand for Durable Goods Sags in October, November

New York Times Service
WASHINGTON — One of the most consistently reliable of all the advance indicators of economic trends—the new orders received by manufacturers of durable goods—declined in November for the second month in a row.

The decline in orders brought new orders for the first time in nearly three years to a level below that of current sales. As a result the backlog of unfilled orders in the hands of durables manufacturers—a backlog that in effect, represents the level of guaranteed future sales—also dropped for the first time in three years.

AS HAD BEEN the case in October, the drop in new orders was centered in the aircraft industry. The Census Bureau's figures did not contain enough detail, however, to show whether the drop was in orders for military or civilian aircraft, or both.

A number of large orders of civilian aircraft were placed in September as commercial airlines apparently sought to make sure these orders qualified for the 7 per cent tax credit on business investment, which Congress suspended temporarily in October, following a request to

L.A. Metro Area Has Top Gain

The Los Angeles metropolitan area (Los Angeles County) ranks first in the nation's metropolitan areas that have had the greatest growth since 1960 U.S. Census was taken. The average net gain in population is 140,000 per year.

New York is second at 124,000 and Washington, D.C. third with an average net increase of 81,000 persons per year.

ORANGE COUNTY, now a separate metropolitan area (officially tagged Anaheim-Santa Ana-Garden Grove-Metro) ranks fifth in quantitative growth since the census.

It is significant that, of the top 10 metropolitan areas in terms of growth since the census, five, or one-half, are in California, and three of them, in Southern California.

do so by President Johnson, early in September. The effects of the suspension of the investment credit could also be read elsewhere in the new orders figures. A decline in the new orders reaching the machinery and equipment industries resulted mainly from a drop in railroad equipment orders, which industry leaders have said is directly related to the suspension of the credit.

OVERALL, the incoming orders to manufacturers of durable goods in November fell by $800 million to $23.3 billion, a drop that takes this figure back below the orders, $23.5 billion, for August, before the big bulge in aircraft orders in September.

Durable goods manufacturers' sales continued to move up rather slowly and in total of $23.5-billion.

The backlog of unfilled orders declined by $100-million to $76.1-billion.

Newer Taxes Finding 'No Place to Hide'

By KEN CHILCOTE
Business Editor

This may well be the year that Americans become tax conscious.

For years we have been absorbing more and more hidden taxes and saying nothing about it. Voices were raised when the retailers increased prices and the general sentiment seemed to be the merchants were getting fat in their greed for bigger profits.

Too many of the increases really could have been blamed on hidden taxes. Today, with few places left to "hide" taxes the public is sure to find increased taxation will be more in the open.

Your first pay check of the new year will bring this fact home to you and remember this is only the start of a new year of taxation.

Let's take a look at some of the hidden taxes you have been absorbing via increased food costs:

THE LOAF OF BREAD you bought at the market yesterday contained a minimum of 150 hidden taxes, says the Tax Foundation. There are seven major raw ingredients: yeast, milk solids, shortening, malt, salt, sugar and flour. The corporation producing the yeast pays seven different federal and six different state taxes. Naturally, the price of yeast reflects the impact of those taxes.

The railroad transporting the yeast to the baker pays five different federal taxes and numerous state taxes, dependent upon the number of states the shipment passes through en route. So add more hidden charges.

PRODUCTION OF THE MILK solids cost some company seven different federal and six different state taxes and these are included in the price charged the baker. Then the railroad again pays five federal and uncalculated state taxes moving the milk solids from the producer to the baker.

It is the same story with the producers of shortening, malt, sugar and flour. And, remember that each item must absorb transportation taxes as well as other government and state taxes.

The baker pays eight federal taxes and at least 12 state or city taxes. Naturally, the grocer must pay his share of federal and state taxes which are reflected in the price you pay for the bread.

The Tax Foundation says there are undoubtedly more than the 150 taxes. There have been state and local taxes levied since the figures were compiled by the foundation. Social Security taxation has increased and locally property taxes have mounted.

The Tax Foundation lists some other things well burdened with hidden taxes. These include:

- Eggs—100 hidden taxes-plus.
- Man's Suit—116 hidden taxes-plus.
- Woman's Hat—150 hidden taxes-plus.
- House—600 hidden taxes-plus.

MANY WERE PRONE TO BLAME California retailers for a lot of the increased costs the past year. Retailing is important to California's economy, providing almost one out of every six jobs in the state. A payroll of over $5 billion was provided 1,150,000 Californians in 1966 by retail establishments.

These stores pay taxes as a business firm, an employer, a property owner, a consumer, etc. The California Retailers Association points out there is a significant indirect tax cost in collecting, ammounting and remitting not only of the retailer's own taxes but also those levied on his employees and customers.

Several particularly burdensome areas stand out in the structure of direct and indirect tax cost applicable to California retailers:

—high personal property tax burdens due to the large investment required in inventories, fixtures and equipment, cash on hand, solvent credits, all of which are taxable in California.

—expense of collecting sales and use taxes from customers for state and local governments, paid by retailers without reimbursement in California although such costs are reimbursed in many states.

'HIGHER RETAILERS' COSTS from proposed new taxes or compliance burdens can produce only higher consumer prices or less income available for salaries and jobs, return to investors and store expansion," declares the state retail group.

Here are some of the direct tax costs paid by California retailers:

Income taxes: on corporations, federal 22 per cent of first $25,000 taxable income and 48 per cent of taxable income over $25,000. State, 5.5 per cent of taxable income. A small unincorporated store must pay on salaries and income derived from business subject to federal and state personal income taxes.

The retailer faces many licenses handed down on all levels. There are special state licenses such as dry cleaners, cosmetology, milk marketing, electronic repair dealers, nurseries, pharmacies, furniture, bedding, alcoholic beverages, etc.

AT THE LOCAL LEVEL there are both city and county business licenses and permits. Cities have special license taxes that have been added through the years for revenue purposes. Most are based on the gross receipts. There are some others such as a yearly tax and permit for a sign hanging outside the store.

As an employer the retailer is burdened with payroll taxes. He must pay 4.4 per cent of an employee's first $6,600 in wages for social security. He must pay 4 of first $3,000 of employee's wages for federal unemployment insurance and an average of 2.7 per cent of first $3,800 in employee's wages for state unemployment.

Workmen's compensation premiums depend upon the risk of the job. For grocery stores it is 1.16 per cent of the payroll.

If you are getting woozy with such figures think of the retailer who must keep records, compile and pay.

As a property owner the retailer must pay local, county, school and special assessment taxes which run from 2 to 3 per cent of the property's assessed valuation. He must pay 1-10 of 1 per cent of accounts receivable less accounts payable.

AS A CONSUMER THE RETAILER must pay sales and use taxes on purchases, for his own use of construction materials, office supplies, equipment, fixtures, etc. This is a tax of 3 per cent of the purchase price for the state and 1 per cent for the cities. He also must pay a federal tax of 10 per cent of the telephone bill.

And retailers must hand over 4-cent federal and 7-cent state gasoline tax for delivery and pickup services with trucks or cars. On motor vehicles they must pay a federal truck use tax, depending upon weight, which runs from $81 to $180.

The state collects a personal property "in lieu" tax of 2 per cent on the market value of any motor vehicles owned by the retail firm. Then there is a state commercial vehicle tax of from $14 to $318 depending upon the weight.

And because of all this burden of keeping up with the taxes, every retailer has an added cost of retaining a tax expert as well as personnel to keep the records.

All of these costs must be paid by you, the final buyer of a product.

U.S. DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCE Trade Tips ON THE WORLD MARKET

Joseph E. La Liberté, assistant vice president of Advance Mortgage Corporation, will speak to members of the Long Beach District Board of Realtors at their 7:30 a.m. breakfast meeting Tuesday at the Crown Cafeteria. Jack Saxon, program chairman, said the executive's topic will be "Present and Future Outlook for FHA, VA and Federal Vet Loans."

1966 Bellwethers Ran 'to Form'

It was a downbeat ending for the Index in 1966. The chart backed off, in its last reading of the old year, to a point just 6.3 per cent ahead of its starting point last January. This matches roughly the progress during 1964—but falls considerably below the 8.9 per cent advance made by the Index in 1965.

Autos and steel, the two bellwethers of the past year, ran true to form by edging downward during the final holiday week. The auto industry secured its second best production year in history with 8.6-million units, but this was still below 1965 output levels by more than 700,000.

Total U.S. and Canadian car and truck production during the latest week was 29.9 per cent under the previous week, and down 24.9 per cent from the same week a year ago.

Similarly, steel output edged downward 2.2 per cent to the lowest production level since early last January.

All was not gloom, however, as this week's carload, truck tonnage, and paperboard production figures—accounting for almost a quarter of the Index activity—all moved ahead.

DEFENSE ACTIVITY HOLDS ANSWER

'Bloom Is Off' Steel, Says Analyst

PITTSBURGH — "Our management is more apprehensive than the numbers seem to warrant," a steel analyst said last week.

Certain steel makers are watching their markets with caution and concern. Some officials consider actual orders more reassuring than general comments would indicate. Others feel there is good reason for wariness.

"THE BLOOM is off," the sales manager of another mill said. Demand, he declared, had "lost its steam." At the same time, he noted that his company's forecast called for a 15 per cent rise in shipments next month.

A third authority said shipments would probably go up in January, if only because considerable tonnage was being shifted from December. However, he could see no sign of a positive upturn developing.

"Continued sluggishness suggests, at best, that demand will remain at reduced levels," he said. "The real threat is a downturn in the general economy."

Iron Age magazine said the steel industry was becoming more concerned with such things as consumer confidence. Despite strength in some markets, the disappointments of sheet producers suggested a general easing of the consumer market, the magazine noted. Intangibles were involved in this assessment, Iron Age said.

THE SAME POINT was cropping up in the immediate steel picture. Mills were getting reports that the setbacks of the automobile industry were leading many users to "take another look at their hands." Major customers supposedly had "their fingers on the trigger."

This kind of talk made steel men fearful that they might be facing a more drastic adjustment than had been indicated by orders. Yet most officials said the amount of tonnage actually rescheduled so far had been minor. Officials said there was always a certain amount of juggling because of year-end tax considerations.

At one mill, where there was considerable pessimism, new orders in the first week of December equaled those in the first week of November. It was noted that November orders had been quite strong.

OFFICIALS were carefully studying another indirect indicator: steel inventories of manufacturers were reduced by 500,000 tons in October, according to a report by the commerce department. A mill analyst said the whole fourth quarter would see inventories trimmed by 2 million tons.

He said it had been thought the inventory adjustment would be completed by January. On this basis, he said, a fairly decisive upswing had been expected. Recent order rates have killed that hope, he said.

"We've passed one milestone," he explained. "It's clear that inventory liquidation is going to extend into 1967."

He added this extension raised a question about consumption and general business activity. "People don't usually get rid of inventory if they expect to need it."

OTHER SOURCES noted that, in past steel swings, inventory cutting has usually meant the start of a sustained downturn. However, it was also pointed out that the shrinking of steel delivery times make stock reductions logical. It was emphasized, too, that with steel readily available the January outlook could change for better or worse on short notice.

Despite all the forebodings, the most conservative prediction last week was that shipments would go from 7 million tons in December to 7.3 million tons in January and to 7.7 million tons by March.

Conservative forecasters conceded there was nothing in the immediate steel picture to suggest a serious slump. The main fear, again, was that the whole economy might be heading into a slide.

"There's all kinds of evidence the private economy is slipping," one expert said. "It all depends on how much defense activity will rise."

Wall Street Briefs

NEW YORK (UPI) — Robert T. Allen of Shearson, Hammill & Co. says some of the optimism showed in the current rally, to some extent, seems well founded.

Allen feels the current rally has further to go but warns against being captivated by it. He says that although the Dow Jones industrial average has only gained around 70 of the 250 points lost in the 1966 decline, it is getting harder and harder to find a good bargain.

James Dines & Co. says the market is "itching" to turn bullish but until the economic indicators turn decisively bullish, it would recommend "precautionary buying." The company feels the biggest question now is whether this upswing is a bear market rally or the start of a substantial rise.

Colby & Co. says penetration of the 820 level of the Dow Jones industrials average with good volume would signal a potential move to the 860 intermediate term.

NEW YORK (UPI) — Western Union and Candygram Inc. have introduced a perfume-by-wire gift service. For $13.50, plus telegraph tolls, a customer can have delivered by Western Union a half ounce of Jili perfume, two and one-quarter ounces of cologne and a message. The perfume and cologne are packaged in a satin and velour-lined box.

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Santa Fe Drilling Co. has received a $5 million contract to furnish and operate two diesel electric rigs for a fixed oil drilling platform in Cook Inlet, Alaska. The contract from the Marathon Oil Co. calls for the drilling of up to 48 directional wells.

NEW YORK (UPI) — United Airlines has announced a special training course to familiarize corporation pilots with the latest techniques and developments in jet operations at United's Denver flight training center. Instructors will be regular United Air Lines flight training personnel. Some of the nation's leading corporations have enrolled their pilots.

NEW YORK (UPI) — The National Register Publishing Co. of Skokie, Ill. says U.S. advertising agencies will show a total net gain of 3.1 per cent in accounts this year. The publishing company says a study showed the gain was almost double the gain rate in the $964-$965 period. It said the rate of agency "switching" by advertisers was at a 20 per cent level.

NEW YORK (UPI) — Radio Corporation of America has announced a new laser device called a solid-state injection laser. RCA says the laser will give designers a new tool for electronic development in many areas of safety, security, communications and computers.

RCA says one use for it would be to warn of an impending auto collision by indicating the relative speed and closing rates of the laser-equipped car and the one ahead.

NEW YORK (UPI) — Allied Chemical Corporation has announced a boost of $2 a ton in the price of caustic soda, effective immediately. The company also says it will boost the price of chlorine $2 a ton instead of $4 a ton, as announced originally. Other producers forced Allied to shave its price to meet the competition. Allied's prices for chlorine will be $67 a ton east of the Rockies. Caustic soda will cost $60 a ton east of the Rockies.

REDWOOD CITY — Ampex Corporation says it has received a $2 million contract from Bell Telephone Laboratories to develop a videotape system to be used to store and retrieve maintenance data for the Nike-X weapon system. Ampex officials say maintenance personnel will be able to view any of approximately 200,000 documents pertaining to the missile system by pressing a set of retrieval buttons.

IT'S TOO MUCH HOUSE FOR THE MONEY.

Some people may feel that our homes at Greenbrook are almost too good to be true.

For a starter, just look at their size.

Not one of these homes has less than 3 bedrooms. Some have 4, some 5, and some even 6. And they're all big bedrooms at that.

Then, there's the styling of these homes.

We put a lot of talent and imagination into designing the interiors and exteriors of these homes. We think you'll like what we've done.

Outside, you will see a great deal of natural rough-sawn wood and Adobes brick. This gives our homes a warm, cheerful, comfortable look.

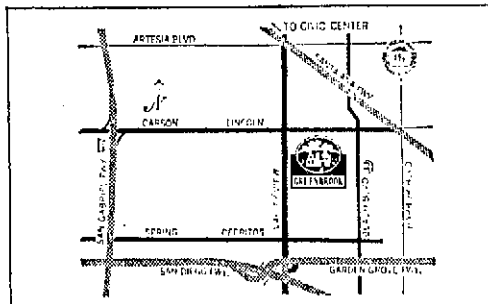

Inside, you'll see styling like you've never seen before. Beautiful fireplaces, balconies, and "mile-high" living-room ceilings. (Several people have used the word "fantastic" to describe the interiors of our homes.)

Finally, there are the prices of these homes.

Even though our homes are big and well-designed, we have been able to make the prices very, very reasonable.

When you see the homes at Greenbrook, we think you'll be spoiled.

In fact, you'll probably find yourself looking at other houses and saying, "That's not much house for the money."

NEW RETREADING MACHINE . . . Applies Rubber Ribbon

Johnny Gillette Tire Company Installs New Retread Process

Revolutionary electronic tire retreading equipment—called Orbitread—recently was installed at the Johnny Gillette Tire Company, 3910 Cherry Ave., Long Beach.

The automated process produces better balanced retreads than any previous method, Gillette said.

The firm, now in its 14th year of business, is the first retreading company in the Southland to install this system.

The new equipment is a development of the American Machine & Foundry Company.

RETREADS MADE on this equipment differ from conventional retreads in the way the new tread rubber is applied.

"The Orbitread machine winds a continuous ribbon of new tread rubber around the circumference of the tire casing until a complete splice free tread is formed," says Gillette.

"Electronic controls precisely govern tread thickness and contour at every point, and make sure a perfect tread is applied."

"Because there is no splice, the retread is stronger and the tread is more perfectly balanced. This," adds Gillette,

"means mile after mile of extra safety an extra mileage."

IN CONVENTIONAL retreading, a single band of preformed tread rubber is wrapped around the circumference of the tire manually. The ends of this band are butted together to form a "splice."

To prevent the splice from opening up, extra rubber is "crowded" into the splice area, said Gillette. This frequently results in a tire that is out of balance.

"All this is eliminated with our new system," Gillette declared.

Snow Reigns as L.B.'s Athlete of Year

SUNDAY Sports Independent-Press-Telegram

SUNDAY, JANUARY 8, 1967 SECTION 5—Page 5-1

By HANK HOLLINGWORTH Executive Sports Editor

Jack Snow, former all-America football player at Notre Dame and now with the Rams, has been named the Long Beach Century Club's major award winner for 1966. Snow will be honored at the club's 11th annual Sports Night banquet Jan. 26 at the Edgewater Inn.

President Mason Kight also announced a new feature of this year's banquet. Special major awards will be given to three former athletes who gained nationwide recognition for Long Beach: Football stars Morley Drury and Norm Standlee, and baseballer Vern Stephens.

Young Snow joins a select group of Long Beach athletes who previously were the Century Club's honorees: Pat McCormick, Bob Lemon, Greta Andersen, Bud Daley, Ben Agajanian, Rocky Bridges, John Olszewski, Willie Brown, Billie Jean Moffitt, Johnny Morris and Ron Fairly.

Born Jan. 25, 1943, in Rock Springs, Wyo., Snow moved to Long Beach at the age of four. His high school football was played at St. Anthony, where, as a senior, he led the Saints to the Catholic League championship and into the CIF playoffs. The year 1960 was one of his finest for honors. He was on the CIF first team, was an all-Catholic League and all-city performer, and was named Long Beach lineman of the year.

Snow's career at Notre Dame reached its peak in 1964 when a fellow named Aru Parseghian arrived on the South Bend scene. Parseghian molded the Hurte-Snow aerial combination into one of the most fabled in Notre Dame history.

Everybody's all-America in 1964, Snow broke most Notre Dame pass receiving records that season. He also participated in the North-South, Buffalo and Chicago All-Star games.

Snow has been the Rams' No. 3 pass receiver during both his seasons with the National Football League team. As a rookie in 1965 he pulled in 38 aeriels, while during the past campaign he caught 34.

UCLA in 1st Scare of Season

PULLMAN, Wash. (AP) — Lew Alcindor got into foul trouble and No. 1-ranked UCLA had some anxious moments, but the Bruins survived to post a 76-67 victory over Washington State in their opening Pacific-8 Conference basketball game here Saturday.

The victory margin was UCLA's slimmest of the season in nine outings.

Alcindor drew his fourth personal foul with 11:58 remaining, and was benched for 4½ minutes. The Bruins led 52-48 when he went out. WSU moved ahead 54-53 on a basket by Lenny Allen with 9:30 left. But Jim Neilson scored for UCLA and the Bruins were ahead to stay.

Washington State was still in contention, trailing 70-65, when UCLA went into a slowdown with 2½ minutes remaining. Then the Bruins scored six successive points and the game was out of reach.

Alcindor was the game's leading scorer with 28 points, including 11 of 21 field goal attempts.

UCLA took only 64 shots

Trojans Roll Past Huskies

SEATTLE, Wash. (UPI)—The University of Southern California Trojans never trailed as they rolled to an 83-74 victory over the Washington Huskies in the schools' AAWU conference opener at Seattle Saturday night.

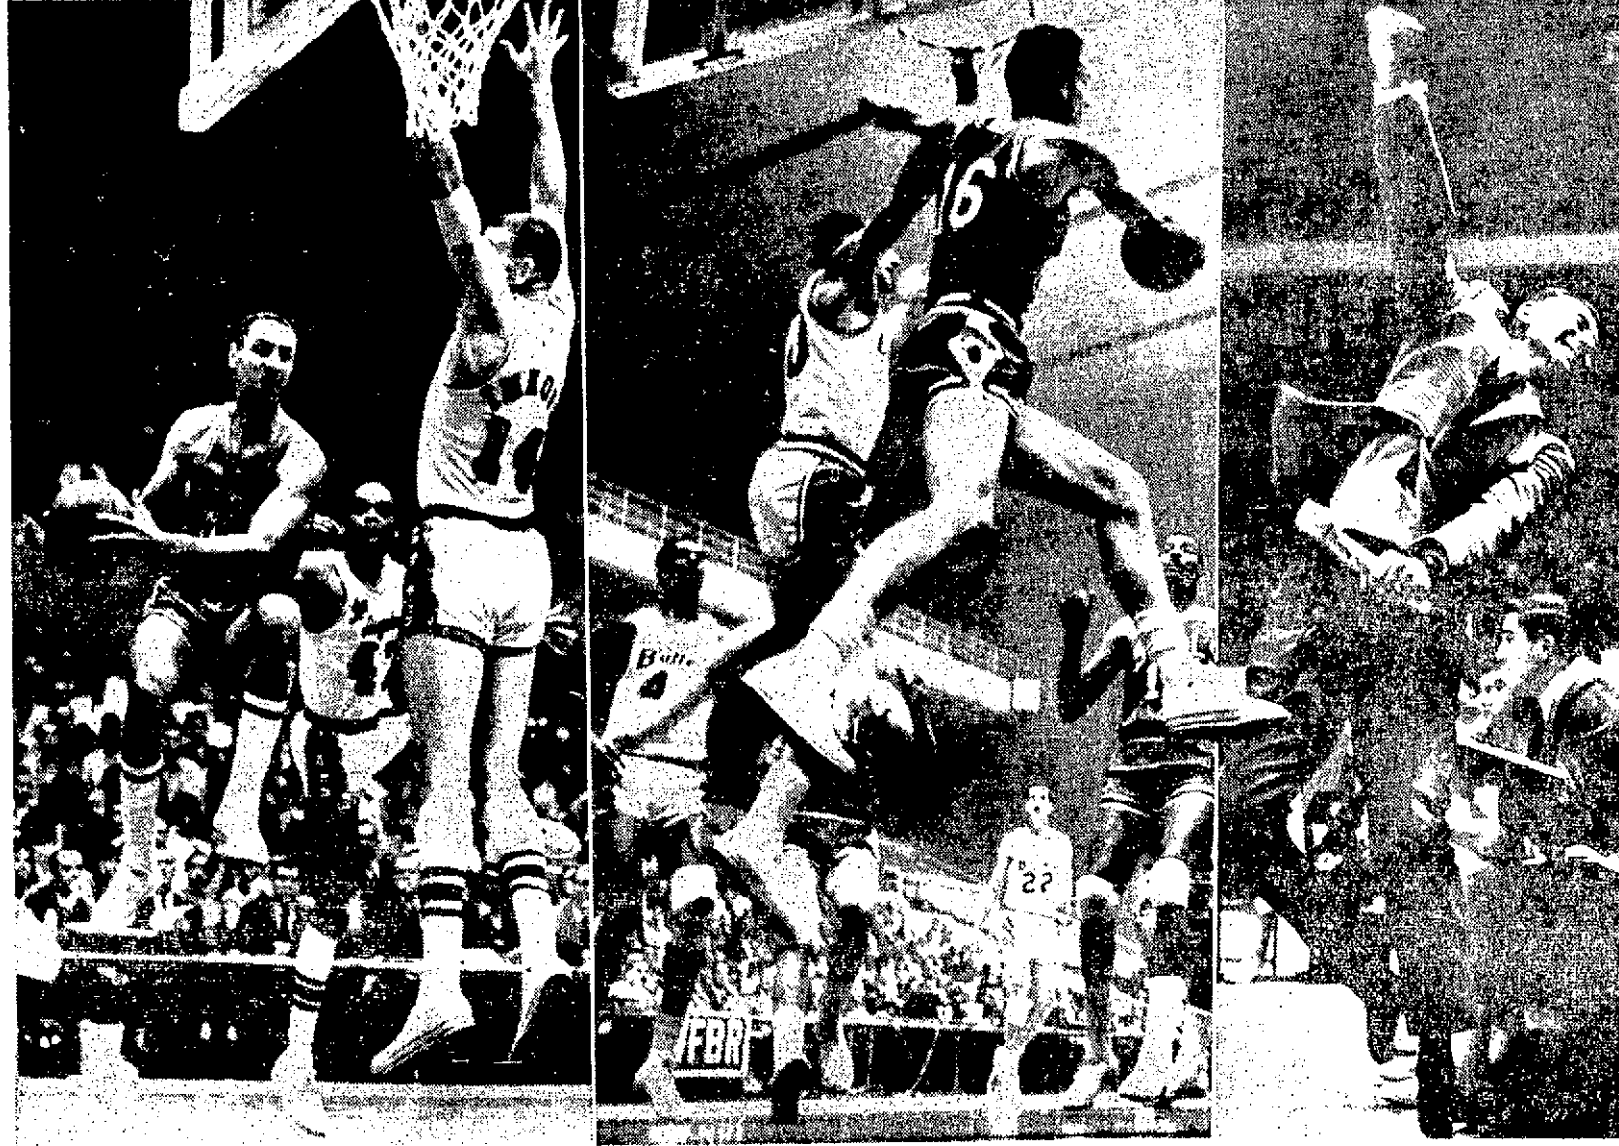

Leading the Trojan attack were Jim Marsh and Bill Hewitt, who scored 24 and 21 points respectively.

USC, leading 25-22 with six minutes left in the first half, scored 10 successive points to give the Trojans the cushion they needed for a 43-36 halftime margin.

The Huskies came out hot after the half, outscoring

Diver Flashes to 4-Length Triumph

By ERNIE MASON

California's greatest homebred stakes winner, Native Diver, breezed to victory by four lengths Saturday in the 29th running of the $62,050 San Carlos Handicap at Santa Anita for the sprint championship of the winter.

Native Diver scored his 29th stakes victory in capturing the San Carlos for the second time, having won the race in 1965 as a 6-year-old.

The dark-hued gelding displayed his intense speed after the first quarter when he took the lead. From there on jockey Jerry Lambert merely hand rode the elderly star as he easily withstood the challenge of Hoist Bar who was second while Pretense was third and Taipan finished fourth.

Native Diver raced the seven furlongs in the good time of 1:22 after having posted a fractional time of 1:09 1-5 for six furlongs. The crowd of 47,697 installed the 8-year-old a 2-1 favorite and he rewarded their backing by returning $6.40, $5.80 and $4.00 across the board. Hoist Bar paid $9.80 and $5.20 while Pretense returned $3.40 to show.

The San Carlos was Native Diver's first race since last July 25, but the son of Imbrus was as sharp as trainer M. E. Millerick could get a horse.

The victory brought owner L. K. Shapiro a purse of $39,550 and increased Native Diver's lifetime

W-HOOP-ING GOOD TIME WAS HAD BY ALL
From high school courts layed in arenas amid rural Indiana to the magnificent emporiums of the NBA, basketball reigns during the early months of the new year. Spectacular action is the keynote be it Walt Hazzard (upper left)

NBA COMES TO L.B. ARENA
Beach Ball for Lakers, N.Y. Tonight

By DOUG IVES

Professional basketball makes a solo stop in Long Beach tonight and matches the most underrated team in the National Basketball Assn. against the most puzzling.

The Lakers, featuring superstars Jerry West and Elgin Baylor, will be in the spotlight, opposing the New York Knicks. Game time is 7:05 in the L.B. Arena, and an ample supply of tickets are available in three price ranges.

Advance sales indicate a turnout of about 7,000, which is what the Lakers usually draw at home against New York.

A few years ago the Knicks were about as appealing as a Berkeley bentnik, but they've won now respect this season and actually are one of the most feared clubs in the league, not to mention one of the most underrated.

Philadelphia, beaten only four times in 42 games, was upended by New York earlier this week, and it isn't difficult to explain why. Pound for pound, the Knicks match up very well against the muscular 76ers.

Willis Reed, at 6-foot-10 and 240 pounds, and Walt Bellamy, at 6-11, 250, are big enough to uproot a giant redwood, and about as gentle as grizzly bears.

The Lakers may not say it publicly, but Reed and Bellamy rank 1-2 as the meanest players in the NBA. Reed has been in numerous scrapes with Laker players. Bellamy, a fearsome-looking fellow, hasn't had a challenger as yet.

As basketball players, Reed was good enough to be chosen Rookie of the Year three years ago and made the All-Star team this season. Bellamy, a superstar without portfolio, has the best career shooting percentage (.514) of any man in NBA history.

Joining this talented twosome will be Dick Barnett, the ex-Laker who can still shout with the best; Butch Komives, a long-range marksman; and Dick Van Arsdale, one of the new breed of swift cornermen dominating the NBA.

In reserve roles are Dave Stallworth, another gazelle with a great future; Emmette Bryant, an underrated guard; Cazzie Russell, the all-everything from Michigan; and Henry Akin, a 6-10 center who runs like a 6-2 backcourter.

The Knicks currently reside in third place in the Eastern Division, a position very foreign to them since they've spent the last

RICH ROBERTS

Hockey's
Big Boss

"You take away some of the finesse and put more bull strength into it. I think it's easier to play hockey if you are bigger."—Dick Meissner of the Blades.

It's too bad for football, but Richard Donald Meissner missed his calling by only a few hundred miles on that cold winter morning 27 years and two days ago.

Had he been born in the relatively tropical latitudes of, say, Green Bay, Wis., perhaps the Packers never would have needed Jim Taylor.

But in Klondike, Saskatchewan, where the next neighbors north are Eskimos, the game is hockey, and if you can't skate before you walk you're just plain retarded.

Still, you don't see many hockey players who skate like Meissner, who is quick to explain that "you don't see too many forwards that weigh around 200 pounds. I skate a little heavier, so I have to work a little harder. I don't have a difficult time skating, mind you, but I'm not a good skater."

Actually Meissner goes about 210 right now, packed into only 5 feet 10 inches of piledriver arms, tree trunk legs and a physique bulging with wall-to-wall muscles, so you see why they call him "Hoss." Put it all on skates, point it toward the goal and strike terror into the hearts of the defense.

"I'd like to be around 200 but it's pretty tough," Meissner says, shrugging his bullish shoulders. "The weather down here makes it tough, you know. There's so much more to do around here you don't eat regular meals like you would if you were down East or somewhere."

MEISSNER ALSO has been gorging himself on goals this season, contending for the Western Hockey League lead with 21 going into Saturday's game against the California Seals. He isn't shy about shooting, and when he rears back for one of his cannon slaps everybody in that end of the rink flinches by instinct.

"He's got a heavy shot," says goalie Dave Kelly, who has to face Meissner's artillery in practice, "but Dick's trouble is that sometimes he doesn't know where it's going. A shot like that, that's high, tends to get away from him."

"I know I shoot 'em high," Meissner says. "I try not to shoot 'em too hard in the warmups for my own goaltender's sake, but if I don't shoot 'em hard in the warmups then I don't get a good warmup myself. I like to shoot the puck a lot."

Recently one of Meissner's bombs ripped the chin of Seattle defenseman Jean Gauthier for 23 stitches. Dick feels no remorse.

"I think if a person gets good wood on the puck and the goaltender or somebody gets in the way he's gonna hurt him every time he shoots, 'cause they sting," Meissner says.

MEISSNER HAS been playing on the right wing of Murray Hall, the Blades' class' new center acquired in the Howie Young deal. Hall, something of a gunner himself, chides Meissner for not reciprocating on the playmaking end of it.

"He doesn't pass off too much," Murray confides, implying that he doesn't mind getting a setup himself once in a while.

Dick doesn't deny Hall's accusation. "I'm not a notably good passer by any means. I don't control the puck that well. I carry the puck pretty well some nights, but other nights I'm just brutal. Therefore when I'm fighting the puck it's tough to make a good pass."

However, Meissner also points out that he and Murray both "have been getting our share of goals."

Despite his size and strength, Meissner is more bent on scoring than punishing opponents.

"Size gives you advantages and disadvantages," he says. "If there's a small hole it's more difficult to slip through if you're a bigger man. But you can stay in front of the net and not get pushed around as much as a smaller fellow."

"Then again, I don't think you have the coordination. You're not as smooth. You gotta work a lot harder to get where you're going."

MEISSNER WORKS so hard that the ice literally flies when he goes charging down the rink, fair game for opposing defensemen when he has the puck.

"I think they get away with a lot more than they do on other players. A lot of times I'll come through two defensemen, and one of them will grab me and I'll break away. It should be a penalty, but since I break away it's not called."

"But I like 'em to run at me. It not only gives me a shot at getting around but I can put the puck in behind 'em. A lot of times you have to take a good bodycheck to make a play. I don't know if they like running into me, but I don't mind running into them."

"I probably don't hit as much as Ferny (coach Ferny Flaman) would like me to, but it's a lot tougher to hit somebody on the ice than you'd think it is. You have to have a knack."

Meissner spends the off-season contracting in Prince Albert, Sask., where he makes his home.

"I built a couple of warehouses last year. I do mostly sub-contracts out of the lumber yard. I can't let my business get too big because I'm not there all the time. But it's good, because being a hockey player I'm there in the summer which is the building season in Canada."

Dick taught an adult course in basic construction last summer.

"It was sort of a rehabilitation thing for the government," he says. "There were a few Indian boys in the class and some boys who had dropped out of high school. They're putting up a big pulp and paper mill up home now and they want some trained labor."

He explains that he isn't allowed to putter around down here "because I don't have a working visa," a restriction that isn't preventing him from hammering home goal after goal for the Blades.

Chiefs—A 'Hunt' for the Best

NEW YORK (AP) — The Kansas City Chiefs have been marked by disaster — both financial and physical — in their short history, but have managed to come out on top with a cast of characters that may be the most unusual in pro football.

Born and raised in Dallas as the Texans under the guiding hand of millionaire Lamar Hunt, the founder of the American Football League, the Chiefs have been a marked team of sorts ever since the 1962 season.

That was the year in which they won the AFL title in pro football's longest game, edging Houston 20-17 in a second sudden death period. But while they had been artistically successful they also had been financially drained by the war with the National League's Dallas Cowboys.

And so Hunt pulled his team out of Big D and took it to KC, where the Chiefs began to take a physical beating that may be unmatched in the history of any pro football team — but ultimately wound up as the AFL's entry in the long-awaited Super Bowl game.

The first accident took place during the 1963 exhibition season when Stone Johnson, a young hopeful, died as the result of a broken neck suffered in a game. And, only last year, fullback Mack Lee Hill died on an operating table while undergoing a knee operation.

In between guard Ed Budde and tight end Fred Arbanas have been assaulted on Kansas City streets while defensive tackle Ed Lothamer was almost decapitated in an auto accident before arriving at the Chiefs' training camp this past year.

Lothamer still is out of action but Budde and Arbanas have made their way back, gaining all-AFL status-Arbanas despite the fact that he has lost the sight of his left eye.

While Lothamer, Arbanas and Budde represent one side of the Chiefs' personality picture, there is the lighter side represented by such characters — and talented performers — as E.J. "The Rancher" Holub, Fred "I'm The Greatest" Williamson and Sherrill

"No Pain" Headrick.

Holub, a linebacker who has undergone seven operations on his knees, is a typical Texan-10-gallon hat, chewing tobacco and ranch back home. But he has turned sort of modern recently, and among the comforts of his homestead now is a telephone.

Williamson is a defensive back and the Cassius Clay of his profession. A white-shoe wearer who will tell you how handsome he is, Williamson does not shy away from telling you he's equally proficient at his job.

Headrick, another member of the linebacking corps, has pulled some crazy stunts in his career but is best known for the fact he has played with a variety of injuries, including a slipped disc and a dislocated thumb — which he personally jerked back into place.

SOME OF their better-known compatriots are guard Curt Merz, the uncrowned handwrestling champion; safety Johnny Robinson, the No. 1 needle on the club, and Buck Buchanan, the 287-pound defensive tackle who may be the outstanding man in the world at the training table.

The ringmaster for that group is Hank Stram, the only coach the Texans-Chiefs ever had. An innovator who sent the Chiefs out in I formation when they beat Buffalo for the AFL title last Sunday, Stram has been criticized in the past.

What his detractors said was that Stram had been given the best personnel in the league and had been unable to win with it since 1962. What Stram said was: "Give me speed and then we'll see."

Stram's estimates turned out to be accurate. Given speed in the person of Taylor and Mike Garrett, the 1965 Heisman Trophy winner from Southern California, the Chiefs romped to the Western Division title with an 11-2-1 record.

TAYLOR CAME to the team directly from Richardson, Tex., where he walked out of—or bolted—one of the National League's baby-sitting classes in a plush motel, flying into Kansas City to sign with the Chiefs.

Installed at the flanker spot this season, the 6-2, 215-pound product of Prairie View caught 58 passes for 1,297 yards—a 22.4 average — and had rival coaches comparing him with Lance Alworth, San Diego's peerless wide receiver.

Garrett, the No. 2 draft choice of the Rams, was picked only on the 20th round by the Chiefs, who figured the Rams had him locked up. But it didn't turn out that way when the Chiefs wrote a check in the neighborhood of $300,000.

Garrett proved his value, giving the Chiefs what Stram said was "more long runs this season than we have had in several years." He finished in a tie for second among the rushing leaders, gaining 801 yards for a league-leading 5.5 average.

Taylor and Garrett easily took their places in the Chiefs offense and despite their youth were called on consistently in key situations by Len Dawson, the quarterback Stram saw at Purdue and finally lured out of the National League.

DAWSON, who was the signal-caller at Purdue while Stram was an assistant coach, sat on the bench at Pittsburgh and Cleveland before coming into the AFL. He again was the league's No. 1 quarterback this season, hitting 56 percent of his passes and connecting for 26 touchdowns.

While Taylor and Garrett, along with Dawson, made the Chiefs go both on the ground and in the air, there's little doubt that much of their success has to be credited to two of the highest and strongest lines in pro football.

On the offensive line are two all-AFL performers, tackle Jim Tyrer at 6-6 and 292 pounds, and guard Ed Budde, at 6-5 and 260. On the other side are guard Curt Merz, 6-4 and 267, and tackle Dave Hill, 6-5 and 254.

Buchanan is the man mountain of the defensive front four which also includes another All-AFL selection, end Jerry Mays at 6-4 and 252. Andy Rice, 6-3 and 266, is the left tackle, and Chuck Houston, 6-6 and 230, is the right end.

So the Chiefs have weight, height, speed and personality. All that remains now is to see if they have enough of it all to beat the Green Bay Packers next Sunday.

ONE-EYE, SEES PRESSURE ON G.B.

Arbanas: Super Comeback

By ROSS NEWHAN

His football fame at its apogee, Fred Arbanas had the vision in his left eye savagely destroyed during the winter of 1964 by a set of brass knuckles. He is a man who has successfully challenged the giants of fear and self-doubt.

"If we were afraid of the Packers then we wouldn't be justified calling ourselves football players," said Arbanas Saturday.

Currently encamped at the Edgewater Inn, Arbanas is celebrating his return from the depths of depression. His touchdown reception ignited Kansas City's rout of Buffalo and he reigns again as the all-league tight end, an eminence he attained twice before the tragedy of '64.

"UNLESS WE beat the Packers, the year will have been a flop," confided the articulate Arbanas. "Unless we beat the Packers, every high school and college victory I was a part of will not mean a thing."

"We'd play this game for nothing. We've had our alleged inferiority thrown at us for so long that it's reached the busting point. Believe me we're ready to release it. This will be the hardest fought game ever played and we have the tools to win it."

Those who spread NFL propaganda say the tools will lie dormant. They insist that on Super Sunday the Chiefs will melt at the sight of Green Bay and its famed deity, Vince Lombardi.

Arbanas rebuttal is simple and logical.

"The way we see it, the pressure is on Green Bay," explained Arbanas. "People expect the Packers to win and win big. If they don't, then Green Bay and the entire NFL looks bad."

"We like the role of underdog. We've seen them on films. They're fine football players, but we have absolutely no reason to be afraid. I saw no supernatural beings on the Packer team. We all went to the same universities and, in most cases, we were all drafted by both leagues."

Graduating as co-captain (the Packers Herb Adderley, ironically, was his co-) from Michigan State, Arbanas was drafted seventh by the Chiefs and second by the Cardinals.

Now 27, the 6-3, 240-pounder is completing his fifth season, having substantiated Duffy Daugh-ty's earlier estimation that "Arbanas is the finest blocking end I've ever coached or seen."

IT IS A skill which is paramount to the Chiefs' offensive success, for in Hank Stram's system the tight end's primary responsibility is blocking.

On the 15th, that assignment matches Arbanas against the formidable Willie Davis, Lionel Aldridge, Ray Nitschke, Dave Robinson and LeRoy Caffey.

"I have seen them knocked down before," said Arbanas coolly, while sipping on a soft drink.

When asked to catch the football, Arbanas received 23 passes this year for 307 yards and 4 touchdowns. It is a favorite sport of the NFL to ridicule the AFL's secondary, and this will be a key to the Super Bowl.

As an end who has exploited those secondaries, we asked Arbanas for his insight.

The AFL is like the bad guys in a Western movie," he said. "People think of the AFL and they immediately have to say something bad about it. However, you will never hear a PLAYER knock the defenses. On the basis of experience and talent I will match our own secondary against anyone's, including the Packers."

You sit opposite Fred Arbanas or watch him on film and you tend to forget the handicap this man has overcome. It happened on Dec. 8, 1964 on a street where Arbanas was window-shopping.

nition of light and dark and even dimmer hopes of ever playing again.

"I was in a state of total depression," Arbanas admits. "I figured I was through. How can an end play without depth perception and sight in one eye?"

Then one day coach Stram called. He had sent his wife and six children onto the lawn to play catch — each with a bandage on one eye. Stram informed Arbanas they were meeting with great success.

"I was exhilarated," said Arbanas. "If the coach had that much confidence in me then I couldn't let him down, and I couldn't let myself down."

So in the backyard of his Kansas City home, Arbanas and Len Dawson began to rebuild the skills. "At first I couldn't even follow the ball's flight at five yards. But Dawson was patient and so was I. When a way of life you love is at stake, there is no end to the amount of work you'll attempt to save it."

Slowly, Arbanas regained his confidence. The 1965 season was difficult, but the fear and self-doubt ebbed, and on that day he began joking about it he knew he had it licked.

"I'VE MADE a few catches that aren't really too bad for a blind man," laughed Arbanas. "Whoever said keep your eye on the ball certainly had me in mind."

With his eye on the ball, Arbanas slipped on the frozen turf at Buffalo and suffered a slight shoulder separation. However, he will be ready on Super Sunday, for, more than any other Chief, he has his sight set on $15,000.

Packers History One of (Johnny) Blood and Guts

NEW YORK (AP) — There is a touch of magic in the very name — Green Bay Packers.

From the days of Curley Lambeau, Johnny Blood and Don Hutson to the golden era of Vince Lombardi, the Packers have been a power to be reckoned with in professional football.

There are over 1,700 stockholders among the 82,000 solid citizens of the smallest big league city. Regularly they pack 50,861 into Lambeau Stadium for the home games.

Packers-backers made a long trek to Dallas for the 1966 title game and many have made plans to follow the team to Los Angeles and the Super Bowl, Jan. 15, when the Kansas City Chiefs, champions of the American Football League, will be met.

In the years since Lambeau talked the old Indian Packing Co. into putting up money for equipment in 1919, the Packers have won 10 National Football League championships. No other team has won three in a row as the Packers did in 1929, 1930, 1931 before the league was split into conferences for a post-season playoff. Green Bay has rolled up a fantastic 7-2 record in championship playoffs, including a 4-1 record under Lombardi.

When Lombardi left his job as an assistant coach with the New York Giants and took over the Packers' head coach and general manager in 1959, he inherited a team that had struggled through a 1-10-1 season in 1958, the Packers' worst record.

By shifting personnel already on the scene moving Paul Hornung from quarterback to halfback, for example and making astute trades for players like Willie Davis and Henry Jordan, Lombardi brought the team to the heights. He has kept them there by wise draft choices and judicious swaps for other team's draft rights.

Lombardi's first Packers team finished third with a 7-5 record but he won the Western Conference in 1960, his second year, only to lose to Philadelphia in the title game. This was his only championship defeat.

A 37-0 ROMP over New York in 1961 and a 16-7 victory over the Giants in 1962 were followed by second-place finishes in both 1963 and 1964. The Packers took it all again in 1965, beating Baltimore in a divisional playoff and then knocking off Cleveland, the defending champs. Their 1966 regular season was climaxed last Sunday by the 34-27 title thriller with the Dallas Cowboys.

With all due respect to the Cowboys, Colts, Cardinals and Browns, most NFL observers are relieved that the prestige of their league will be carried at Las Angeles by the consistent Packers who seldom beat themselves.

Lombardi's teams try to win by carrying out their assignments better than the other team, not by surprising them with radical innovations. The Packers did make some blocking changes for the Dallas game and their defense is an ever-changing maze, operating out of a basic 4-3 formation with four linemen up front and three linebackers.

72,000 EXPECTED FOR BATTLE OF ALSO-RANS

Colts Tabbed Over Eagles in Fun Bowl

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — With Johnny Unitas healthy, the Baltimore Colts are favored to beat the Philadelphia Eagles by a touchdown today in the National Football League's Pro Playoff Bowl.

In good passing form in Miami workouts, the veteran Unitas appeared to have shaken off the effects of a sore shoulder incurred in a Nov. 13 game with Atlanta and rib bruises inflicted by Green Bay Dec. 10.

With Unitas as the top drawing card, the game which has broken attendance records four years in a row, could be a sellout for the first time in the 72,000-seat Orange Bowl. It came close last year when 65,543 watched Baltimore beat Dallas 35-3.

The rapid growth of the game's popularity has pleased the NFL and the co-sponsoring Orange Bowl Committee in view of the fact that it is played by second-place teams.

It is supposed to determine the third best team in the NFL, but doesn't necessarily do so. Philadelphia tied Cleveland for second in the eastern division and got the Miami trip only because Cleveland took it last.

The Colts and Eagles both finished with 9-5 records, but followed opposite routes during the season.

The comeback of the Eagles was perhaps the biggest surprise of the NFL season. Bombed in succession by St. Louis 41-10 and Dallas 56-7, they retaliated by winning their last four games and seven of the last nine.

By contrast, the Colts were in the thick of the Western Division battle early. They had won seven of nine and five in a row when Unitas came up with his shoulder injury.

Below par the following week, Unitas was pulled in the first half as the Colts lost to Detroit. Gary Cazzo finished the game, then started the next one against the Rams which the Colts also lost.

Baltimore's title hopes were dead when Unitas returned to lead them over the Chicago Bears.

Willis Richardson will open at flanker for the Colts in place of Jimmy Orr, sidelined with a broken collarbone.

The game, played for the benefit of the NFL player pension fund, has produced more than $600,000 for that purpose and will add close to $200,000 from this game. It will be televised by CBS with the kickoff at 11 a.m.

Packers History Written in 'Blood', Guts

The Packers seldom blitz or send their linebackers after the passer. Coach Tom Landry of the Cowboys, who made an intensive study of Packer habits, said last week Green Bay blitzed only about five per cent of the time. That means the front four men in the defensive line — big, agile Willie Davis and ever-improving Lionel Aldridge at the ends and sturdy Ron Kostenlik and 10-year-man Henry Jordan at the tackles, put the big pressure on the passer — in this case, Len Dawson.

THE LINEBACKERS move up quickly to meet the rush or peel off to pick up a pass receiver as the occasion demands. Dave Robinson, on the left corner, is the man who put the heat on Don Meredith last Sunday. Ray Nitschke, the baldish middle man, is a crasher and a devastating tackler. Lee Roy Caffey, the right linebacker, has the size 6-3, 250 and the speed to bop the receiver at the line of scrimmage, close in on the runner or drop off to defend on the pass.

Herb Adderley, the left corner man or halfback, has been all-league for years. He and Bob Jeter, the right corner man, did the job on Bob Hayes last week. They will be on the watch for Otis Taylor and Chris Burford of the Chiefs.

Willie Wood, always the all-league free safety, is a wonder at being in the right place at the right time. Tom Brown, the former Washington baseball player, is the strong safety with the job of covering tight end Fred Arbanas on passes. It was Brown who picked off that last desperation pass by Meredith last Sunday.

The Packers' offense is of a conservative nature. In years past they played ball control, slogging into the line with Jim Taylor and Paul Hornung and passing just enough to keep the defense honest. Things have changed.

TAYLOR, USUALLY a threat to the rushing title, finished 10th in the league with 705 yards. Hornung, bothered by a pinched nerve in his neck, gained only 200 yards and lost his halfback job to Elijah Pitts.

When the running game sagged a bit, quarterback Bart Starr really came into his own as a passer. Starr completed 62.2 per cent of his passes in regular season for 14 touchdowns and was intercepted only three times.

He threw four more TD passes against Dallas and hit with 19 of 28. The Packers gave him good protection although the Cowboys got to him five times last week. Dawson was smeared seven times by the Buffalo Bills on the same day.

LOMBARDI MADE sparing use of his million dollar bonus twins, Donny Anderson and Jim Grabowski. They did most of their work on special teams, punt returns and kickoffs. Grabowski picked up a fumble and went in for a TD against Dallas. Anderson runs back kicks.

The Packer bench is deep with rookies Bob Brown, 6-5, 270, and Jim Weatherwax, 6-7, 275, behind the defensive linemen; Tommy Crutcher as the No. 4 linebacker; and Doug Hart, who lost his job to Jeter, and rookie Dave Hathcock the backup men in the deep defense.

Lombardi has the veteran Max McGee behind Dale at split end and fleet Bob Long and Red Mack behind Dowler.

K.C. Left Its Mark—8 of Them

By AL LARSON

In surging to the AFL championship and the winningest record in pro football, 16-2-1, which includes pre-season games, the Kansas City Chiefs set three individual records and five team marks.

Rookie halfback Mike Garrett rubbed out Willie Mitchell's year-old punt return record of 71 yards when he dashed 79 yards against Buffalo.

Flankerback Otis Taylor shattered Frank Jackson's reception yardage record for a single season by pulling in 58 passes for 1,297 yards. Jackson's old mark was 943 yards on 62 catches in 1964.

Defensive halfbacks Bobby Hunt and Johnny Robinson each picked off 10 interceptions to wipe out Hunt's previous best of eight set in the '62 campaign.

Team records to fall included most points scored in a season (448, old mark 389 in '62); most yards total offense for single game (614, old mark 551 in '62); most yards total offense for season (5104, old mark 4862 in '62); most field goals in a season (20, old mark 14 in '60 and '62); and most passes intercepted in a season (33, old mark 32 in '60 and '62).

The Chiefs also tied the record of most passes intercepted in one game (6).

In addition, kicking specialist Mike Mercer set a league record for best field goal percentage of .700. Mercer, who started the season with Oakland, connected on 20 of 26 attempts with the Chiefs after hitting one of four attempts with the Raiders. In successfully popping through 21 of 30 attempts, Mercer thus bettered Gene Mingo's previous percentage best of .692 set in 1962 when the Denver star connected on 27 of 39 attempts.

Cross town rivals Long Beach Soccer Club and the new Long Beach International Soccer Club will meet today at Heartwell Park. Game time is 2 p.m.

GREEN BAY MAYOR HAS BEEF COMING

GREEN BAY (UPI) — Mayor Donald Tillemann said Saturday the mayor of Kansas City has accepted his "friendly bet" of cheese vs. beef on the upcoming Super Bowl game.

Tillemann wired Mayor Ilius W. Davis earlier in the week and offered to bet a "block of excellent Wisconsin cheese against a package of prime Kansas steak" on the outcome of the Super Bowl in Los Angeles between the Packers and Chiefs.

Davis wired Tillemann: "Challenge accepted. Hope you have the cheese packed."

Davis said Kansas City was "looking forward to some of your delicious Wisconsin dairy products."

"The citizens of Kansas City are on the warpath and the whole tribe here is solidly behind the Chiefs," Davis said. "The war dance has begun and I'm sure all Americans are looking forward to the greatest athletic event of this century."

FRED IMHOF Sports Expert You Ask He'll Answer

Q.—What are the figures, for comparison, between the Dodgers stolen bases and the Giants stolen bases for 1966? Can you also include caught at stealing?

A.—In 1966 the Giants stole 28 bases and were caught stealing 26 times; the Dodgers stole 95 and were caught stealing 64 times. In the 54 attempts by the Giants, the main players were Willie Mays with 5-1; Tito Fuentes with 6-2, and Jesus Alou with 5-5. In the Dodgers attempts, Maury Wills had 38-24 and Willie Davis, 21-11. (The first figure is successful steals, second is times caught).

Q.—Saw an article a few days ago that O'Doul is away up there in the batting list. Just where does he stand?

A.—Frank J. "Lefty" O'Doul most certainly is "up there" in the all-time batting list of players with 10 or more years of play. In fact, at this writing Lefty is the top man in that listing of those living today! O'Doul is sixth in the all-time list with 11 years played, 970 games, 3,264 at bats, 624 runs, 1,140 hits, 175 doubles, 41 triples, 113 homers and a batting average of .349. Now that Ty Cobb, (.367), Rogers Hornsby, (.358), Joe Jackson, (.356), Roger Browning, (.355), Denny Brubaker, (.349) have all passed on, Lefty is No. 1 on list of living players.

Q.—What has been the largest crowd to ever attend a boxing contest?

A.—The record for most people attending a boxing contest that paid to get in was the first Dempsey-Tunney fight, Sept. 23, 1926, at the Sesqui-Centennial at Philadelphia. At that bout, where Jack lost his title to Gene, 120,757 paid to enter. The record for the most people attending a boxing contest goes to the Tony Zale-Billy Pryor fight held in Milwaukee on Aug. 16, 1941. In this bout Zale kayoed Pryor before an audience of 135,132 who had been admitted free in a Fraternal Order of Eagles show.

Q.—Could you give me a rundown on the professional career of Eddie Machen?

A.—Eddie Machen, born Redding, Calif., July 15, 1932. Started in the pro game in 1955. That year he had 11 bouts, won 10 by KO, 1 by decision. He kept winning until 1958. That year he drew with Zora Folley and was KO'd by Ingemar Johansson in one round in Sweden. He was "up and down" from then on, winning some of the big ones and losing some. Latter part of 1962 he became ill and was idle until Sept. 1963. On March 5, 1965, in Chicago, he lost a 15-round decision to Ernie Terrell in a fight that was billed as being for the W.B.A. championship. This past year he started off with a decision loss to Karl Milendberger and then to Manuel Ramos, followed these two bouts with wins over Jerry Orullo, Jerry Quarry, and Scrapiron Johnson. In his last outing he was stopped in 10 rounds by Joe Frazier, Nov. 21, 1966. Eddie's recap: 62 bouts, 50 wins, 9 losses, 3 draws.

King Hero as Warriors Finally Down Celtics

Combined News Service

Jim King's driving layup with six seconds left gave the San Francisco Warriors a 110-108 National Basketball Assn. victory over the Boston Celtics Saturday night.

King, who made 10 of his 12 points in the final period, also scored the go-ahead bucket on another layup with 1:07 remaining. That made it 108-107 and the Celtics' K. C. Jones tied the game with a free throw.

Before King's winning basket, John Havlicek missed a 20-foot jump shot for Boston. Tom Meschery picked off the rebound and the Warriors called a time out.

Nate Thurmond, outplaying center counterpart Bill Russell, scored 34 points and collected 23 rebounds for the Warriors, who won their third straight game.

NBA scoring leader Rick Barry finished with 28 points. Bailey Howell paced the Celtics with 24. Russell had 19 rebounds for Boston.

Willis Reed blocked a shot in the last 30 seconds and then scored the decisive basket to send the visiting New York Knickerbockers to a 129-126 victory over the reeling Baltimore Bullets Saturday night.

The defeat was the 12th straight for Baltimore, five short of the NBA record, as they sank deeper into the Eastern Division cellar with a 8-35 record. The Knicks pulled over .500 at 22-21.

Reed's big defensive play came with the Knicks leading 125-124. Baltimore stole the ball and Don Ohl, who finished with 25 points, drove for the basket, but Reed slapped away the shot.

PGA's '67 Road $how Opens in S.D.

By DAVE LEWIS

The sports world's greatest road show — the PGA tournament tour — opens another season this week at San Diego with a record $4½ million in purse money slated to be cut up by those who "follow the sun."

The winter portion of the trail will include four events offering $400,000 in prize money when pro-ams are included.

Kicking off the 1967 tour will be the $66,000 San Diego Open Thursday through Sunday at the Stardust Country Club in Mission Valley. Leading off the first big week in golf will be a $5,000 pro-am Wednesday.

THE REMAINDER OF the California schedule includes the following events:
—Jan. 19-22: $104,500 Bing Crosby National Pro-Am at Pebble Beach.

LAKERS---

SEVEN years in the basement.

The best-ever New York club in those seasons won 31 games and lost 49, and already this year's team is playing .500 ball with 21 victories prior to Saturday's game against Baltimore.

One reason for the Knicks' improvement has been the Lakers, who can't buy a victory in Madison Square Garden. They've dropped eight in a row there, including three this year. The clubs have split a pair in L.A., thus giving the Knicks a 4-1 seasonal edge.

The Lakers, after an agonizing start, are beginning to pick up steam in their bid to gain second place in the Western Division. They've won four of their last five and are only two games behind runner-up St. Louis.

Laker skipper Fred Schaus has all but decided the key to victory is inter-changing eight or nine players a game. If the bench delivers, he reasons, then the Lakers have a chance at beating the better clubs.

With the reserves helping immensely, the Lakers won twice from Boston this past week and own four victories in six meetings with the perennial champions.

The Laker attractions, of course, will be West and Baylor. Two of the greatest stars the game has ever known, you'll find they are worth seeing at any price.

In Bob Pettit's book, Baylor is described as the most exciting player pro basketball has ever known, and West is called the greatest clutch shooter.

At age 33, Baylor is slowing a little on defense, but he hasn't lost his shooting magic, and he still remains the best 6-foot-5 rebounder in the NBA. At 28, West is in his prime and is regarded as a superstar in every phase of the game.

In his prime and is regarded as a superstar in every phase of the game.

The golfers then go to Arizona for the Phoenix and Tucson Opens before heading for Florida and the East coast to close out the 12-tournament winter section with the Masters, April 6-9. These 12 events will be worth over $1,200,000.

Golf has the longest competitive run of major sports, covering the full 12-month scale. And many of the leading players are pressing their contentions as they head into 1967 the schedule is much too demanding.

In fact, Arnold Palmer and Jack Nicklaus are now trying to limit their schedules to 20-25 tournaments a year.

"We simply can't play 12 months and maintain a championship edge," says Nicklaus, who won two legs of Golf's Grand Slam in 1966 — the Masters and British Open.

"THE SEASON is much too long," adds Palmer. "The touring pros should confine ourselves to no more than 30 top tournaments on good courses."

However, the purses are now so large — escalating to the point where $100,000 tournaments are now normal and $200,000 is the new measure of prestige — that few players are willing to cut the schedule other than the ones who have made it big. There will be at least three tourneys with purses of over $150,000 this year and one — the Carling Open — worth $250,000.

Nicklaus and Palmer will not compete at San Diego. However, they will join the tour at Pebble Beach the following week and also will play at Los Angeles and Palm Springs.

Despite their absence, San Diego will offer a star-studded field which will include eight of the top 10 money-winners of 1966. The golfers will be shooting for first money of $13,200 — more than the entire $10,000 purse offered when the tournament was first held 15 years ago.

The players who finished in the top 10 include Billy Casper, Doug Sanders, Gay Brewer, Phil Rodgers, Gene Littler, Dick Sikes, Frank Beard and PGA champion Al Geiberger.

In Casper, of course, San Diego not only gets the defending champion but currently the No. 1 pro golfer in the business after being named "Player of the Year" for '66.

CASPER LAUNCHED his great year by winning the San Diego Open and added three more victories later on — including his dramatic triumph over Palmer in the U.S. Open.

Billy wound up the leading money-winner with $120,747 in official earnings to become only the fourth man ever to win more than $100,000 in a single season. Nicklaus finished second with $110,221 — marking the fourth straight year he has topped a hundred grand. Palmer was third with $89,467 on the strength of his tremendous start in the California winter tournaments.

After winning the Los Angeles Open, he finished second to Don Massengale at Pebble Beach and also was the runner-up at Palm Springs where he lost to Sanders in a sudden death playoff.

San Francisco, which has been on the winter tour for the past several years, has switched dates for its Lucky International to the fall. It most likely will be held in November.

earnings of $807,950, third among geldings behind Kelso and Armed. And his nearest rival as a California-bred stakes winner was Determine with 15-added money victories.

In nothing his win, Native Diver carried top weight of 128 pounds which was eight pounds more than Time Tested who finished seventh. Last year, with 132 pounds, Native Diver finished 10th in the San Carlos.

Jockey Lambert did not rush Native Diver out of the gate with his heavy impost and as the field streaked down the seven-furlong chute, Embassy took a momentary lead, followed by Sledge, Doc Jockey and Pretense.

But when the field of 13 moved onto the main track, Native Diver had moved to the front by a length and there he stayed. Hoist Bar tried to race with the gelding but never could close to gap. Time Tested was in third position going to the half-mile pole and Pretense was next.

Going around the turn, Native Diver was a good two lengths in front as Hoist Bar and Pretense jostled for second. But it was when the field straightened out in the stretch that Native Diver in seemingly effortless fashion pulled away from his rivals to increase his margin at the finish to four lengths.

Add Andrie, Pitt Kicker to Pro Bowl

Tom Landry, head coach of the East All-Stars who will play in the 17th annual Pro Bowl Jan. 22 at the Coliseum, has selected a defensive end and a place kicker as his bonus choices to round out the 35-man squad.

George Andrie, rugged defensive end for the Dallas Cowboys, and Mike Clark, ace field goal kicker for the Pittsburgh Steelers, are the added entries on the Eastern roster.

Thirty-three other players were previously selected by a vote of the NFL coaches.

Clark finished fifth among the league scorers this season with 97 points. He kicked 21 of 32 field goal attempts and added 34 extra points.

California Now Rodeo Leader

By AL LARSON

California became the national leader in 1966 in the sport of professional rodeo which last season paid $3,515,964 to winning contestants.

Figures released by the Rodeo Cowboys Assn., headquarters in Denver, listed 59 California pro rodeos to 52 for Texas, the first time in the 31 years that national records on the sport have been kept that the Lone Star State has been topped.

In all, 524 localities in the U.S. and Canada held cowboy contests on a pro level.

The new season for the athletes in broad-brimmed sombreros and high-heel boots gets under way at Palm Springs Jan. 28-29 with the annual Mounted Police Rodeo which last year paid out a record $14,531 in two days.

The event draws one of the season's largest entry lists—259 in 1966—with many of the big name cowboys flying in from the 10-day Fort Worth contest which opens a day earlier.

In February, the action moves indoors for the Pacific Indoor Rodeo at the Long Beach Arena, Feb. 17-19. In four years since the Arena opened, Long Beach has become Southern California's major rodeo date, with attendance totaling 134,210.

The Long Beach purse, which went over $20,000 two years ago, is richest of the 19 events held in the southern one-third of the state.

Texas lost its title as the biggest state to Alaska.

NEW YORK — Shocking pink pajamas? At a black-tie social gathering?

Well, there was only a pair. And the cut, as well as the color, was shocking. Only thing missing was hair curlers.

The PJ's were worn by one of the guests at Cue Magazine's annual formal party honoring New York's "entertainer of the year" — the winner in this case, Barbara Harris of the Broadway hit, "The Apple Tree."

Also sipping champagne in the gilt-edged poshness of Fifth Avenue's Hotel Pierre were jet-setters in black velvet pantsuits, long-haired lovelies in short-skirted mini-dresses, grandmothers in baby doll dresses and Mary Jane Sandals, entertainers in everything from spangled evening gowns and chandelier earrings to short tents and long togas. There was even a short knit T-Dress swirling with blinding horizontal stripes.

The event was being televised for showing on Merv Griffin's Show sometime next week. He was there. So was Arthur Treacher. Also director Mike Nichols ("Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf") who, as director of "Apple Tree," had flown in from picture-making in California to make the award to Miss Harris.

Blonde, good-looking and flashing his capped teeth, Mike Nichols said he's making a new movie for Paramount. It's called "The Graduate" and promises to vie with Virginia Woolf in shock appeal.

The gents turned out in black-tie and tux, like the invitation said. But funny thing about black-tie events these days men follow the rules. Women wear whatever strikes their fancy.

Like pajamas and pantsuits, for instance.

REMEMBER when New Yorkers talked about, wrote about and joked about "those California women who wear pants everywhere."

"Why they even wear them downtown! was the hue and cry. So now who's shopping downtown. . . for pants. . . in pants?"

Some of New York's best-dressed women, that's who.

Of course they have a good reason. The psychologists say so. Pantsuits, they contend, are a new symbol of today's feminine emancipation.

Converted Gothamites are wearing the pants, or pantsuit, on Fifth Avenue, to black-tie events to cocktail parties and out on the town. . . even though conservative maitres des (like the Colony or 21 Club) still refuse admittance to their posh establishments in such attire.

IN SPRING collections being previewed here for the nation's press by The New York Couture Group and The American Designer Series, pants of all shapes and lengths steal the show.

Pants costumes, long and short, with and without mini-skirts or doublets, are a large part of the new freedoms promised for women this spring by the nation's couturiers.

There are party pants to take over where evening dresses left off. Most often they're long and fluid in luxurious fabrics, sometimes hidden under a toga.

There's the pantdress with the look of a dress, the comfort of a pant . . . in hot-colored linens, snappy knits, zingy prints.

There's the pantsuit, now practically a basic in every fashionable woman's wardrobe. But it's the short pantsuit that makes the news, a pant that stops above the knee - sometimes cuffed, sometimes cut wide to look like a skirt. It looks snappiest when paired with a longer jacket.

BUT WATCH, every fashion-respecting, pantsuit-wearing New Yorker polishes off her pantsuit with a fitting and proper combination of trousers and jacket.

Say the designers: "The pantsuit is the 'in' suit. But the pantsuit must have the right fashion accessories." Translated that means the proper bag, glove, scarf and shoe.

The pantsuit bag, for instance, is either a roomy swagger swinging from the shoulder, the French envelope borrowed from the French mailman, the soft

WILD WAVES SAY

Everyone (almost) is flying high this january

ALL OF a sudden the friendly skies of United are friendlier than ever. The reason is pretty obvious. More pretty girls, all formerly of Long Beach or Lakewood, have become stewardesses for UAL, following training in Chicago.

Three of the newest are pictured at right. They are Sharon Duke, daughter of George and Alice Duke, 2030 Snowden Ave. A graduate of Poly High, she attended California State at Long Beach as a nursing major, until she got bitten by the fly-now, nurse-later bug.

Her home field is bustling Sea-Tac at Seattle and her current flight pattern takes her from there to Vancouver, San Francisco and Los Angeles.

Blonde, green-eyed Mary Nicol, daughter of Mary Lu Nicol, 4200 E. 10th, and John Nicol, also of Long Beach, drew flight duty out of Washington, D.C., and her sweet smile is currently being flashed at passengers enroute to destinations in the South or Chicago.

A grad of Millikan High and former LB City College student, United may put her on its Hawaii run when she has gained enough experience for longer flights. She'd be great for it. One of her hobbies is Tahitian dancing.

Third of the new stewardesses to be saluted is Gloria Groves, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph W. Groves, 6047 Oliva, Lakewood. Blonde, hazel-eyed Gloria, a graduate of Paramount High and LBCC, is home based right in the Windy City.

NOW ENROUTE home to Hong Kong is Ed Demack after a couple of surprise visits in the U.S. that hit like a sonic boom.

Ed, who is director of Far Eastern Operations of Gen. Tel. Directory Company, and wife, Midge, have been in Hong Kong for one and a half years, transferring there from the Philippines, where they spent a full eight years. About the surprises. Midge went to New York to spend the holidays with their sons, Gary, 15, and Bruce, 13, who are both enrolled in private schools in Connecticut.

She and the boys were sitting in their NY hotel room waiting for an overseas telephone call from Ed when there was a knock on the door. There he was in person—in this country on a trip that came about so suddenly he couldn't believe he was there any more than could his aghast, delighted family.

Next sonic boom came with his arrival to spend couple days with sister, Beverly Crabtree, and see or call up as many of his old friends as he could.

Midge will be here next Thursday for a brief stay. She'll meet Ed back in HK on Jan. 21 after stopovers in Honolulu and Tokyo.

FOR ALMOST everyone, the New Year signals the end of the holidays. But not for the more than 250 friends of the Kral clan. The Kral's host a traditional Serbian Christmas party—this year an event of Saturday given, as usual, at Helen and Steve Kral's big, hospitable home, 3838 Linden Ave.

Co-hosting with their parents were the couple's sons and daughters-in-law, Steve Jr. and Lavonne, Donald and Marlene, Paul and Barbara, plus Steve and Helen's other children, Michael, Darlene, Sally and Mary.

Mrs. Kral Sr. and her girls cook for weeks preceding this party and serve such favorites as sarma (a meat cabbage roll dish which has many variations, but Helen's own version is one of the best in the world), cubacles (spicy smoked sausage), a tremendous macaroni dish—and always baklavas, the elegant, elegant honey, pastry and spices dessert.

Among those present were Supervisor Burton and Polly Chace, Mayor Ed and Mary Wade, Dr. George and Jo Paap, Dr. George Benson, president of Claremont College, and his wife, Mahs. Also toasting the season during the pre-dinner cocktail party were Jim and Marilyn Crocker, Tony and Nancy Gregory, Hal and Hattie Lewis, Karl and Dolie Ward, Jeanette Enloe, Dr. Pettus and Margaret Seccrest, John and Joan Knight, Bob and Mary Ruchti.

Others still in party mood present were Kenyon and Ethel Wells, Dick and Peggy Wilson, Chet and Ann Yunker, Burr and Linnell Dilday, John and Sandra Ward and Dave and Karen Ward.

PUTTING SOME early zip into the '67 social scene will be Nina (Mrs. John) Harris, 320 W. Bixby Road. Chairman of last year's extremely successful headress hall, she'll entertain her committee at luncheon Tuesday.

The all play, no work day will attract such members of LB Auxiliary to Southern California Symphony (Sponsors of the ball) as Mary Gray, president, Mildred Valuch, Sue McDonald, Lu Peterson, Luba Kadvany, Sarah Lee Clingan, Enid Peterson, Doris Root, Virginia Milton, Betty Benwell, Isodene McCall, Betty Howe, Loretta Lease and Doris Squire.

MAKING LIKE a pair of Sherlock Holmeses have been Ann and Harry Drake—to date without success.

Ann lost the setting out of a ring she has treasured for 23 years. The setting a 3 1/4 karat diamond valued at over $5,000. Ann, in closing their garage door, remembers sort of whacking her ring hand on the pull which may have loosened the stone.

Unfortunately at the time, about 11:30 a.m., she thought nothing of it. That night at dinner she discovered her loss. She and Harry have covered every place she went that afternoon but to no avail.

JUST ONE minute before midnight on Carrie Reach's birthday this past week, she and Jim became parents of their second child and first son at Memorial Hospital. How's that for terrific timing? Carrie and the baby, James Howard, should be home today.

Going around with Cheshire grins have been grand-parents Howard and Deda Patrick. Greet grandmother Mrs. Carl Patrick, 83 came here from Lindsborg, Kan., especially to be present for newest arrival.

Here's an anecdote regarding that name Patrick. Irish? Nope. Swedish. Seems Lindsborg is heavily populated with Swedes and when the first ancestor—Johnson—arrived there, there were already so many Johnsons dotting the countryside he decided to be entirely different, chose name Patrick.

Try for size

Mrs. Michael Murphy (left) and Mrs. Thomas J. Horan launch roles as Nightingale provisionals by donning uniforms worn by the auxiliary to Long Beach Memorial Hospital. Before assuming duties assisting in the hospital's gift shop and Stork Club, they'll be honored at party Jan. 21.

Bare blight battle plans on Jan. 17

City-wide plans for neighborhood participation in its beautification program will be made known by Long Beach Beautiful Committee of the Chamber of Commerce during an 8 p.m. meeting Jan. 17 at Elks Club, 4101 E. Willow St.

Introduced by Travis Montgomery, chairman of the area division program, will be the prominent citizens who have agreed to head up the 17 geographic areas of the city, battling blight on an area-by-area basis.

Featured speaker will be Lewis Crutcher, AIA, of Portland, Ore., who is an authority on city beautification and designing. He will present a critical analysis of Long Beach based on slides he will take in the area prior to his appearance.

There is no admission charge and the public is invited, in fact, urged, to attend. Mrs. Marvin Garvin will be the evening's chairman.

Smiths to celebrate anniversary at dinner

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Smith, 315 Third St., will celebrate their 60th wedding anniversary today at a dinner in Welch's Restaurant.

On hand for the celebration will be their daughters, Melva Kidder, Los Altos, and Mrs. Rusty Conaway of Lincoln, Neb., and son, Hilmer Smith of York, Neb.

The Smiths were married Jan. 9, 1907, in Hampton, Neb. They have four grandchildren and 10 great-grandchildren. They have lived in Long Beach since 1944 when they moved from Aurora, Neb.

Temple Beth Shalom readies annual installation program

Israeli entertainers Yehuda Lev and Raasche will be featured personalities at annual installation dinner of Temple Beth Shalom next Sunday.

A 6 p.m. cocktail hour will launch the event, Lev, who fought for the Palmach during Israel's war for independence, is master of ceremonies of Kol Yisrael's English language program.

Maury Cohn is chairman. Rabbi Yosef Miller will be installing officer.

Officers practice

Newly elected officers of Royal Neighbors of America will meet for installation practice at 8 p.m. Tuesday at Machinists Hall, 728 Elm Ave.

'How America can live' unveiled by designers

By JUDY HAZLETT
Home Furnishings Editor

America's leading interior designers will unveil some of the brightest, freshest ideas on furnishing and decorating the home today in Chicago.

The International Home Furnishings Market, titled "How America Will Live," will show more than 50 complete trend-setting rooms created by the professional designers. These rooms will show imaginative solutions to problem areas and utilizing new products for American homes.

Several trends will appear . . . combining the sharp and the soft, the bright and the subdued, the old and the new.

Some of the more striking combinations of furniture and accessories include:

Rooms young at heart . . . with sharp, clear colors, wicker baskets and carpet cubes that convert a game room into a fun room, African artifacts and exotic greenery changing a casual setting into a tropical hideaway.

Crushed white velvet for a sofa; pattern in softened red-white-blue on a champagne beige for draperies; a chevron spare and simple bench; lustrous blue silk velvet on a French lounge chair; brilliant persimmon on a voluptuous sofa of rich, dramatic black velvet for full draperies and bedspread.

A brilliant sculptured wool carpet covering a low ledge runs almost all the way around the room . . . the designer's theory, "It is a good way to add extra seating in front of an expanse of window, without affecting the view."

Pattern correlation of wallpaper and draperies such as plain gold and patterned provincial fabric for bedspread and bonnet canopy; draperies and paper repeat the pattern and in modified form appears again in the border of the area rug. Another setting chooses a fresh, leafy print for the wall and carries it into the sun-controlling panel of drapery.

With design motifs from every age and every corner of the globe as inspiration, homemakers can interpret their imagination and individuality in a thousand ways in 1967.

MULTI-PURPOSE room planned by designer to dimensions of home where quarters are somewhat cramped . . . in addition, it's for the budget-minded. Day bed opens to provide two single sleeping units; window shades in black and white beneath white curtains add accent to tall windows; between windows is white painted chest topped by adjustable storage shelves. Note the rug made of diving board matting, piped in leather.

PLAYROOM with a view combines a strong use of black and white pattern with brush, apple green carpet that spills over window seat and down onto floor. Draperies are an undulating pattern. Same feeling of motion, so much a part of mod look, is repeated in black chair and stool plus glass and chrome table plus patent leather throw pillows.

Meaning and sparkle in LBMA's collection

By VIRGINIA LADDEY

Selections from the Permanent Collection of the Long Beach Museum of Art make up an impressive display which fills the upstairs and downstairs galleries. It will continue through Feb. 26.

Two factors add meaning and sparkle to the present show. First, it is organized into developmental periods of the 1950s and '60s. Secondly, recent acquisitions, made through the generosity of private and organizational donors, enhance the collection significantly.

Five general developments in painting, sculpture, and graphics are detailed in the exhibit. The earliest is "Regional and Transitional." Most of the artists here are local, and worked in modes verging on the abstract from the visually realistic. Among the 22 in this group are Bettina Brendl, Orval Dillingham, Shiro Ikegawa, Vic Smith, Elsa Warner, and Jack Zajac.

THE SECOND grouping, "Abstract Expressionism," reflects the international movement which began in New York after World War II and became the prevailing style all over the world. There is no reference to subject-matter; the subject is the artist's emotional experience with the material itself. Artists here include Jack Hooper, the Gerd and Irene Koch, Hilda Levy, Florence Philleo, and Fran Soldini. There is a small grouping which includes Conner Everts, Douglas McClellan and Ben Sakaguchi which are termed "Individualistic."

AMONG RECENT acquisitions shown are a large Richards Reuben, contributed anonymously; Lorser Feitelson's abstraction given by Realtors' Wives; David Elder's steel sculpture and Karl Benjamin's hard-edge painting donated by the Museum Association; and five important graphics donated by Dr. and Mrs. Maurice Rosenbaum.

The collection is developing well, both in representation of current styles and in impressive "name" artists. Perhaps some of those viewing the collection will be moved to participate in the excitement of developing the Permanent Collection further. The museum is located at 2300 E. Ocean Blvd., is closed Mondays and open from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. on weekdays, and 1 to 5 p.m. on Sunday.

For the first time in the Southland, and for five days only, the public may see selections of Impressionist sculpture and painting owned by Mr. and Mrs. William Goetz.

The exhibit celebrates the opening of new offices of City National Bank, fronting on Pershing Square, at Sixth and Olive Streets, Los Angeles. Hours are from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Thirty-three works by such artists as Manet, Picasso, Van Gogh, Toulouse-Lautrec, Modigliani, Renoir, Degas and others are on view.

In the accompanying catalog, William Inge writes, "The Impressionist movement in painting, considered with all its ramifications, constitutes a body of work that represents . . . the highest achievement in the plastic arts since the Renaissance. There are probably as many great names in one era as in the other."

"The paintings and sculptures of Mr. and Mrs. Goetz of Los Angeles constitute a worthy collection of Impressionist paintings that give us something of the range and variety of one of the most adored group of painters in the history of art."

AN EXHIBIT that promises some intriguing objects, "New Media—New Directions" will open with a reception today from 7 to 9 p.m. in the Main Gallery of California State College, Long Beach, and will continue through Jan. 27.

About 55 paintings, drawings, sculpture and photographic experiments utilize plastics, metals, rubber and artificially manufactured materials. Designed to show what is happening in art that the public is not familiar with, the show combines modern and old materials with new techniques.

Among the 37 artists represented are Robert Creman, Craig Kaufman, Frank Gallo, Tony Delap, Jack Stuck, John Chamberlain, Tony Berlant and Lynn Foulkes.

Gallery hours are Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., Tuesdays and Thursdays from 9 a.m. to noon, 1 to 5 p.m. and 6 to 9 p.m.

ANOTHER EXHIBIT of experimental work may be seen from Monday through Jan. 26 at Long Beach City College art gallery, Faculty Avenue and Harvey Way.

"Constructions 67" involves both sculptural and painting techniques which have been hybridized by a number of Southern California artists and collected by the Orlando Gallery.

Visiting hours are 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. and 7 to 10 p.m. Mondays through Thursdays and from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Fridays.

RICHARD VOGELER, assistant curator of the Grunwald Graphic Arts Foundation at UCLA, will discuss "A Few Great Prints" Tuesday at 10:30 a.m. in Long Beach Museum of Art.

A specialist in the field of prints, Vogeler will use slides to illustrate his lecture on the creation and significance of great prints.

The museum series of art lectures, given the second Tuesday of each month from October through May, is sponsored by the cultural arts section of the American Association of University Women. Coffee is served at 10 a.m. The public is invited without charge.

BEST OF SHOW award in Long Beach Art Association's January exhibition was won by Anita Wolff for her watercolor, "Lotta's Fountain." Second went to Sandra Beebe for a landscape in mixed media and third to Loyce Carhart for a collage, "Aftermath."

Sister Luke, art instructor at St. Anthony's High School selected winners.

FRIENDS of Long Beach Museum of Art will open their winter schedule of art classes for children Tuesday. Two groups will begin, one for youngsters from 3½ to 5 years of age, the second for those 6 to 12 years old. Tuition is $10. For schedules and further information, call the museum.

tion, call the museum.

ACTORS Pat O'Brien and Francis Lederer, artist Val Samuelson, and Oliver Nichols, M.D., coordinator of the March of Dimes Birth Defects Center will judge the second annual March of Dimes art show.

The exhibit will open Monday noon to run through Jan. 27 at Occidental Center, 12th and Olive Streets, Los Angeles. It will feature about 600 drawings by present and former patients of the March of Dimes treatment center at Orthopedic Hospital. Ages of the children range from 3 to 16.

After the other judges have made selections in four age groups, Dr. Nichols will regrade final scores in accordance with each child's handicap.

DIVERSE training and inclination are revealed in "Spectrum," annual exhibition by the art faculty which opened Thursday at Cerritos College, 11110 E. Alondra Blvd., Norwalk.

Exhibitors are Melvin Wood, department chairman; Walter Leather Jones, gallery director; and Rudolph Aguirre, Roland Shutt, Manuel DeLeon, Margaret E. Cannon and Richard Johnson, instructors.

FRAN SOLDINI will begin afternoon classes Tuesday and Wednesday and Monday evening classes Jan. 16 at her House-Boat Atelier, 39 56th Place.

AT A 7:30 P.M. meeting Monday at 2700 E. Pacific Coast Highway, Julian Hiatt will be installed as president of Spectrum Club, succeeding Willis J. Piper. Other new officers are R. Saunders Bagby, Michael LoBue, F.W. Eifert and M. P. Tosso Jr.

JOB CORPS AIDS TEENS Drop-outs get chance to enter working world

By PAT McDONNELL
Staff Writer

The future held very little for Eileen Wilson, 17, six months ago. A 10th grade drop-out from Wilson High the $1.25-an-hour she earned from two part-time jobs as a file clerk. As one of 13 children, she had no hope of receiving financial assistance from her family in order to resume schooling.

That's when she heard about the Job Corps, a training program launched two years ago by Office of Economic Opportunity. More than 76,000 young people of all races, religions and nationalities have entered the project which provides specialized training to drop-outs or youths unable to find work.

Today, Eileen has received four months' training as a draftsman. In all likelihood she will complete the course and be graduated in July with the equivalent of a high school diploma.

Eileen applied to WICS (Women In Community Service) at Long Beach YWCA, 550 Pacific Ave. For the next six weeks she underwent medical examinations, intelligence and aptitude tests and more interviews before being notified of acceptance to receive training at a center for girls in Omaha, Neb.

One of the stipulations in joining the program is that applicants agree to separation from their home environment by living in a Job Corps center several hundred miles from their families.

AIR TRANSPORTATION was provided to the center, a unit comprised of two former Omaha hotels. Up to 800 girls can be accommodated at the center where training and lodging are provided.

"Classes are offered in nursing, graphic arts, PBX, teletype, stenography, child care, hotel management, sewing, retail sales and cashiering," Eileen explained.

The Long Beach teen-ager was enrolled in a mathematics class, a course in practical home-making and a four-hour a day session in drafting. "There are four others in my class," she said. "Our instructors are public school teachers, working draftsmen and even an architect."

Eileen will receive on-the-job training as part of the course. When she graduates, Job Corps authorities will attempt to find her employment as a draftsman.

WHEN SHE arrived at the center, Eileen received new clothing. She learned her roommate (two girls share one room) was a homemaking student from New Orleans, La.

Upon leaving the center, Eileen will receive $50 for each month of satisfactory service in the Corps. (Anyone who does not remain in the Corps at least 90 days is not eligible for the $50 a month readjustment allowance.)

Eileen also is getting her first taste of participating in group projects by serving on the student council, writing for the center's newspaper and singing in its chorus. She also served as a hostess in Omaha's civic arena during the Douglas County hobby show.

"We have dances at the center attended by Job Corps boys," she said. "During the week, we must be in by 9 p.m. and by midnight on Saturdays and Sundays."

Summing it up, Eileen said:

"I don't think everyone could take it—the discipline, so many living together in one place. As for me, I'd never have been able to leave the drop-out stage if I'd have had to worry about holding down two jobs and go to school, too."

Fun fashions—tent dress or pantsuit

mini-bar-shaped envelope worn as a necklace (a la Garbo) or the neon painted pouch.

What goes on the hand is a pantsuit glove. . . a mini-glove pared down to the last eighth of an inch. It can be scooped out on the back right down to the knuckles. No matter how the mini-glove is minied, it's the right look for pants, say the fashion innovators.

For snob appeal, your pantsuit scarf must be signed with a status signature—St. Laurent, Christian Dior, Geoffrey Beene . . . or any of the other names that make a scarf desirable these days.

Where do you wear it? Sashed around the hair, tied at the nape of the neck, casually knotted around a handbag handle or worn as filler for a collarless pantsuit.

WHAT DO the New York couturiers have to say about pants?

He was of Original comments: "I like them. A woman doesn't seem to ask anymore where she can wear them. She just wears them. Women are becoming more independent."

Amen!

To further the American woman's independence, his spring collection includes a short pantsuit with longer jacket in double faced white gabardine.

Victor Joris of cuddlegat says pants are here to stay. He sociological viewpoint: "It's just a matter of evolution from here on in. I see pants getting narrower but still flared, the jackets little smother."

His futuristic pantsuit: Neon pink, fat zipper-closed jacket and tapered, but flaring pants.

Ann Fogarty adores at-homepant. "They're so feminine," says she. "For day, I like the short culotte and think it is going to gain popularity."

(The Fogarty favorite: Clear vinyl tentocat printed in abstract black butterfly and dot, worn over black-dotted, off-white linen culotte dress.)

AND SO, at last, that all-time favorite costume of California's female population—pant! has been elevated to the ivory tower of haute couture.

But, like the New York designers say: pants look best when properly accessorized. Nobody, but nobody, mentioned culottes as the proper headgear!

But back to Mike Nichols. He made the remark of the week. It was about his trip from the West Coast: "The movie they showed on the plane ('The Flintstones') was so bad I almost walked out on it."

And he told this gem about Broadway star Barbara Harris:

"When I was directing the Adam and Eve scene in 'Apple Tree,' I suggested that after taking a bite from the apple, Adam should throw it nonchalantly under a tree."

"Barbara chirped up, 'how nice! The world's first garbage!'"

And that's it for today. More tomorrow—about fashions, not garbage.

Their confidence adds speed to husbands' racing careers

By PAT McDONNELL
Staff Writer

A woman has to have courage if she's going to watch her husband propel an earth-bound missile at speeds over 200 miles an hour.

Ask any race driver's wife.

As the fifth annual 500-mile stock car road race Jan. 22 at Riverside nears, uppermost thought of many a driver's wife is how to prepare her husband for the "Racer's Race."

You can be sure the attractive honey blond in Dan Gurney's pits on race day will be his wife, Arleo.

"My greatest thrill is seeing that car on the starting line," said the wife of the four-time winner of the Riverside 500.

"To qualify and be in a race is a tremendous accomplishment. To me, if Dan were to win the world driving championship, it would just be frosting on the cake," said the Costa Mesa housewife.

Noisy spectators joining Mrs. Gurney watch her husband defend his title will be their children, Johnny, 10, Lyndee, 8, Danny, 4, and Jimmy, 3.

The Gurneys met when both were high school students in Riverside. They were married 15 years ago in Las Vegas.

WOULD SHE prefer her husband to hold a dangerous job, entailing fewer separations?

"A wife should have ambitions for her husband—not just for herself—if she's going to be truly a good wife," she answered.

"I feel that the driver's wife who insists her husband stop racing is wrong. A man must be dedicated to what he's engaged in or he's not going to make it.

"I admit Dan is away a lot because of that devotion, but when he's home it makes the time together all the more precious."

WIFE OF another favorite of the Riverside fans is Mrs. Skip Hudson, whose husband has been a professional driver for 12 years.

"As long as I've known Skip—even before, when I just knew who he was at Riverside Polytechnic High School—he's been interested in cars. Racing is a part of our lives."

Married for 14 years, the Hudsons live in their hometown of Riverside with children, Marta, 13, Jim, 10, and Robert, 9.

A WOMAN who obviously is proud of her husband and his career, Mrs. Hudson says she had no qualms when he resigned from a job as an industrial supervisor to become a driver.

"Granted, you don't become a millionaire in this business, but we make a go of it," she said.

MRS. CHUCK PARSONS of Crimel is a racing wife who grew up in the lesson.

The slender brunette, who has been married four years to the 1966 holder of the U.S. Road Racing Championship, says her father owned racing cars—hardtop and sports cars.

The couple has no children (although Parsons has a married daughter, Linda, from a previous marriage) which allows her to accompany him to Canada and Mexico and throughout the U.S.

Would she like to be behind the wheel of a race car?

"I'd love to, but I'm afraid I'd ruin the transmission," she smiled.

WHAT GOES through the mind of a driver's wife as she watches him career about the track?

"Dan tempts fate every day, but I never think he's going to get hurt, even when he's in an accident," said Mrs. Gurney.

One of her biggest scares was at Zandvoort, Netherlands, where Gurney's brakes failed and he crashed, landing upside down in a horrifying collision.

He walked away with only a broken wrist.

"No, I never worry when Skip starts a race," said Mrs. Hudson. "I trust his judgment, it's the car that puts the fly in the ointment."

Mrs. Parsons, too, shares their stic point of view.

"It's so much different than if your husband were a football or baseball player. Then we would be setting together, rooting for the team. As it is, each is pitted against the other. All you care about is that your husband be first."

HOW DO they accept the separations brought on by racing engagements?

"We were separated for months at a time when Dan was racing in Europe that first year," replied Mrs. Gurney.

"Dan and I agreed the most important thing was to keep the family together. So in 1959, I packed the two oldest children and we spent the season with Dan in Europe."

MRS. HUDSON emphatically agreed, adding:

"One of the advantages of being a driver is that you and your family can travel."

"During the school year it's hard for us to go with Skip, but his absences are a week at most. Last summer, I drove the kids to Seattle to watch Skip in a race, later we traveled by train to Wisconsin for another event."

"The children still are talking about the trips which were an education in themselves."

PUERTO DE ORO'S

Parks should be fun, too

By MARGARET MCKEAN

Wanta buy a turtle? How about a porpoise? They're big, colorful, and won't eat a thing. They're made of plasticized aluminum, and you won't have to find yard room for them because there's a brand new park in San Pedro just waiting to receive them.

Dashing around town inviting service clubs and individuals to fill the park play areas with the fun-inciting menagerie are members of Puerto de Oro Junior Women's Club, represented mostly by Carole (Mrs. Robert) Taylor.

"This month I go to talk to three Lions' Clubs, the Optimists, and some others. I die a little every time I speak, but somehow we're going to get some play equipment in this town for the kids to climb on," she, of the gentle voice and steely determination, averred.

As of now, San Pedro, city of beautiful parks, offers a total of six swing sets, two slides and one grubby sandbox as actual playtime toys for the moppets.

WHILE ALL of the city's parks — Pt. Fermin, Averill, Alma and Peck — are noted for botanic beauty and diversity, none offers the imaginative playtime equipment now in use in other cities.

With the new San Pedro park, high on a bluff bordering Cumbre Drive in the city's picturesque SouthShores area, ready to open in a few months, the attractive young women (most of them mothers) are eagerly seeking funds for fun.

Their citizen-sponsored drive is unprecedented in the harbor area, says Park Commissioner Stan Brummel. "To my knowledge, no group of taxpayers has ever before in this area offered to help equip a park."

The response from Carole Taylor is, "We can provide a welcome example of community self-help to offset the sit-ins, pickets, and self-immolation of our era."

Park building is expensive. San Pedro Park is the beneficiary of $165,000 from the Peck Fund. (The fund was the gift equip a park playground. The children and chairmanship belong to Mrs. Robert Taylor, background.

to San Pedro and its children from noted philanthropist and San Pedro pioneer, George Peck).

"LAND VALUES rise, lands available diminish, subsidence in the area has been experienced, so numerous engineering restrictions have been imposed by the Building and Safety Department," Brummel explained. "Without a big assist from the Peck Fund, the Recreation and Parks Department couldn't have completed the project. There isn't any money left over for equipment, so we were delighted when the Puerto de Oro Junior Women's Club came to us to ask if they could help. Could they?"

Months of research went into the brochure which the Junior Women's Club now presents to every civic, fraternal and philanthropic group in town.

"We've got Rotary, Kiwanis, Junior Chamber of Commerce Auxiliary, Yugoslav-American Club Auxiliary, and the American Association of University Women committed to helping," Mrs. Taylor summed up.

"We've given them price lists so they can choose what they'd like to buy — the Jack & Jill Playhouse, with slide, is $598; the Playweb Magic Carpet is $325, the Cactus Climber is $410. About that porpoise and that turtle — they come in blue and green — and the catalog says, $185. We really could use several of each, and I'll make speeches any place to say so," said the Taylor maid.

PRIME RIB CAPITOL

Yes, it's hard to believe... included in this delicious Prime Rib Dinner at $1.95 is your choice of soup or salad... baked potato with either sour cream, cheese sauce or whipped butter with chives, hot garlic and cheese toast and our famous string beans... a vegetable creation that is unforgettable. In all honesty, we feel THE TENDERLOIN, 4363 Atlantic, has earned the title... "Prime Rib Capitol!" GA 6-5533

THROUGH THE ANDEAN PASSES Tourism burgeons in La Paz

LA PAZ, BOLIVIA — This landlocked republic, once the reserve of the llama and the Inca, is now a target for tourists in South America. A steady stream of travelers from Peru, Argentina and Chile — many of them from the United States — is flowing through the Andean passes to La Paz, the highest city in the world at an altitude of over 12,000 feet.

An Indian and Spanish Colonial town, founded in 1548, La Paz was a late-comer to the 20th Century. Today, however, the main thoroughfare glows with neon signs and new fluorescent street lights. There are three hotels catering to international tourists with rates running $5 a day for room and bath, reports the South American Travel Organization. Hotel dining rooms serve European as well as local dishes, and there are several good restaurants. Notable among them is the Daiquiri, known far and wide for its "parillada," a tasty mixed grill cooked over charcoal.

NESTLED in a circular valley and ringed by the snowy peaks of Cordillera Real, La Paz is a city of hills on top of hills. Avenida Buenos Aires, the Indian quarters on the heights, where any day of the week is the occasion for a fiesta, is one of the most exotic streets in all of South America.

The Indians of La Paz with their own language, dress, customs and superstitions give the city its color and vitality. On the Quechuas and Aymaras trace their roots back to 600 A. D., long before the Inca Empire and Pizarro. Everywhere are Indian men striding up and down steep slopes with incredible packs on their backs. Everywhere, too, are the Indian women in gaudy full skirts, embroidered blouses and derby hats atop their black braided hair.

Squatting on the sidewalk in the Central Market, the women preside over stalls piled high with fruits, candies and household wares. Tourists flock to the six Indian markets around the San Francisco Plaza on Sunday mornings. There are bargains galore in silver, alpaca, jewelry, rugs, blankets, shawls, ponchos and handicrafts. The Indian magic shops, by the way, offer many a souvenir, notably silver and plaster statues of Ekeko, the god of good luck who carries a pack on his back and wears a brightly knitted cap.

CITY TOURS of La Paz take in San Francisco Church, a gem of 16th Century Colonial with a fine facade and bell tower, and Tiawanaco Museum, an outdoor show of Aymara Indian relics. The showplace of the city is Plaza Murillo with landscaped gardens around the Presidential Palace. Here copper-skinned soldiers in bulky uniforms stand guard, and vendors hawk hot dogs and sandwiches to passers-by.

Tourists can combine the two-hour city tour with a trip to Moon Valley, an Andean Fantasia with pink volcanic rocks resembling fairy-tale castles and cottages. This drive, incidentally, takes in Rio Abajo, where the Indians still farm with the primitive tools used by the Inca.

La Paz has a good deal to appeal to the sportsman. There is a tennis club and two golf courses including Los Pinos, reputed to be the highest course in the world. The great attraction, however, is the ski resort at the summit of 18,000-foot Mount Chacaltaya 30 miles north of La Paz.

This highest of all ski resorts permits skiing any month of the year, although snow conditions are best between October and May. There is now a ski lodge, a rope tow and a choice of six half-mile slopes, and a giant slalom run and several downhill runs across the glacier. Although the altitude is almost always spoken of in superlatives, the prices are down in the valley. Hot meals from the lodge cafeteria cost less than $1, and a day ticket on the rope tow runs 80 cents. Skis, boots and poles rent for about $3. Anyone who joins the Club Andino Boliviano for a fee of about $1.50 can stay in the lodge for a few cents a night. Heating units, incidentally, have now been installed in the dormitories in place of vents from the kitchen stoves below.

AN HOUR by air from La Paz is Cochabamba, another resort city with a mild dry climate. A popular playground for foreigners and Bolivians, Cochabamba has its share of handsome Spanish homes and gay street markets. The University Museum, former mansion of the Patino family, boasts a solid copper roof. There is a fine hotel on the edge of town with a swimming pool and tennis courts.

A new road links Cochabamba with Santa Cruz, Bolivia's boom town on the eastern edge of the Andes at a mere 1,400 feet above sea level. Isolated for centuries,

Lion loose in Honolulu

HONOLULU — That lion's on the loose again! In Hawaii, it's time for that delightful sequined lion dancing the streets to usher in the moon Year of the Lamb and officially welcome the 18th annual Narcissus Festival in Chinatown Jan. 14-Feb. 12.

The frisky cloth lion manipulated by relays of Chinese athletes will cavort in front of downtown Chinese shops, restaurants and business establishments, spurred on by oriental gongs, exploding firecrackers and thousands of Island merry-makers.

CHINATOWN shops will set up special displays of Chinese merchandise, food delicacies and fragrant narcissi, the traditional good-luck flower, on Feb. 3.

A brilliantly costumed Narcissus Queen, chosen from dozens of competing Chinese-American beauties, appears at all major festival events. They include a gala Narcissus Ball at the Royal Hawaiian Hotel, a nine-course Chinese dinner, classic Chinese entertainments, elaborate oriental fashion show and exhibits of ancient Chinese art and culture.

The sponsoring Chinese Chamber of Commerce also is inviting visitors to a Symphony Concert, a fireworks display, Home and Garden tour, a cooking demonstration and Narcissus Flower Show as part of the festival.

Ancient, yet modern

A small residential hotel, Haus zur roten Rose, in the 13th century walled Swiss town of Regensberg, has been renovated for 20th century comfort. In addition, it has precious antique furnishings and a permanent art exhibit. Regensberg is 12 miles from Zurich.

Giant cave discovered near Tecate

A cave "with chambers connected by seemingly endless passages" has been discovered about 30 miles south of the U.S.-Mexican border, 43 miles north of Ensenada on the road to Tecate in Baja California, the Mexican National Tourist Council has revealed.

About 500 feet underground, the cave could eventually rank with the best-known caverns in Mexico as a tourist attraction, the Council believes. Only the first chambers have been explored, and no one yet knows how big the cave really is.

The chambers are filled with stalactites and stalagmites, and are located in an area of white marble rock, with many nearby hot springs.

Kungsholm to make long Fall cruise

The New Kungsholm, largest Scandinavian passenger vessel, will make a Cruise Around South America next fall, it is announced by John M. Fraser, Jr., senior vice president of the Swedish American Line. The gleaming white cruise liner sails from New York on Oct. 19 and from Port Everglades, Fla. on Oct. 22 on a 44-day cruise which will include 12 ports and the transit of the Panama Canal.

About 450 guests will bask in the sun aboard the fully air-conditioned, 26,677-ton ship designed for the ultimate in luxurious ocean travel. Fun-packed shipboard entertainment will be provided by a skilled cruise staff, and a special shore trip staff will see to it that the ultimate in worthwhile experiences is derived from visits to all ports of call. Life on board is made comfortable by the fact that the ship usually accommodates 750 passengers. Thus the 17 public rooms, the decks, the outdoor and indoor swimming pools as well as all the other facilities will be reserved for a relatively small group of guests.

After sailing through the Panama Canal, the New Kungsholm will head south to springtime in South America across the equator to Callao, Peru and Valparaiso, Chile, then pass Cape Pillar on her way through the Strait of Magellan and call at Punta Arenas in Chile.

A unique port of call, the Falkland Islands, will follow next. A few days later the liner will glide up the mouth of the Rio de la Plata to Buenos Aires for a three-day stay. Montevideo, Uruguay, and Santos in Brazil are also on the itinerary and then comes a stop at Rio de Janeiro in Brazil and in Bahia. After recrossing the equator, the Kungsholm will call at Bridgetown, Barbados, Soufriere and Castries, St. Lucia, before returning to New York on Dec. 2.

Arctic dogs to compete

Fifteen minutes away from her swimming pools and golf courses, Palm Springs will hold Arctic Dog Sled Races beginning Saturday in the snow at the top of the already famous Palm Springs Tramway.

Described by the area's All-Year Club as perhaps the biggest event of its kind in the world, about 50 dog teams will compete, beginning at 11 a.m., Saturday and next Sunday, Jan. 14-15, 21-22 and 28-29. An added attraction will be free sled rides for children. Opening Jan. 11 and continuing through Jan. 15 will be the San Diego Open Golf Tournament. Top golfers will compete for a $60,000 added purse at the Stardust Country Club, plus a $5,000 purse for the pro-amateur competition on Jan. 11.

Las Posadas, the colorful drama of Christmas in Old Mexico, will continue through next Sunday at the Pauda Hills Theater north of Claremont. The Mexican Players will then present Dona Mercadia's Cure All, a rollicking play with songs and dances, Jan. 12 through Feb. 26.

LAND OF ULYSSES Italy's scenic Amalfi Drive

Italy's Amalfi Drive, from Sorrento to Salerno, is surely one of the most spectacular scenic routes in the world. Californians have compared it with their own magnificent coastal scenery from Santa Barbara to San Francisco; in both stretches the dominating mountains stretch their limbs into the sea itself; the craggy heights seem to bar human habitation but offer vistas of pure delight—the sea is always most ex-hilarating when approached from a height.

There, however, the resemblance ends. The Amalfi Drive has no white fringe of surf, no Big Sur redwoods, no wild country they found Amalfi a place well worth fight-at its back. Where there is a foot of soil for the town has a rich history of wars it is cultivated, and where the slope per-and splendors for so small a place, and it mits, and even when it seems not to, it is still attracts invaders, who in this day are painstakingly terraced—it is no uncommon pleasure-loving tourists, armed only with sight to see a peasant woman bearing a basket full of dirt, for patient replenishment of what has been lost by erosion.

BEAUTIFUL as is the scenery along the Amalfi Drive, it is not the natural attractions that strike the eye with force but the resourceful and artistic creations of man. The open-air belvederes, or summer houses, perched on every mountain crag; the hand-some villas and palazzos, and above all the white towns and villages appearing almost to be carved into the mountain side. How could man build on these precarious slopes, and with such rococo magnificence, where even a mountain hut would be an achievement!

Amalfi, almost literally bored into volcanic tufa, was once a seaport rivaling Venice and Genoa—was one of the queens of the Mediterranean. Its one-time population of 50,000 has dwindled to a mere 7,000 and it has lost three-fourths of its area to the sea, but its former glory lingers in its Duomo, the Cathedral Sant' Andrea, whose bronze doors were fashioned in Constantinople, and whose polychrome marble exterior reflects the period when it was ruled by artistic Pisa.

Before the Pisans were the Saracens, and before them the Normans and even earlier the Romans, who supplanted the Greeks. These last were probably from the Greek colony of Sybaris, whose name has become a synonym for high and self-in-

CATHEDRAL sant' andrea, a relic of Amalfi's former splendor.

AWAY-FROM-IT-ALL ISLAND Rockefeller British Virgins resort reopens on Nov. 18

VIRGIN GORDA, British Virgin Islands—Little Dix Bay, luxurious away-from-it-all resort developed by Laurance S. Rockefeller in the British Virgin Islands, reopens Nov. 18.

Since its opening in 1964 Little Dix has gained a special reputation as a resort that combines luxury and the life of a beachcomber in a setting that is duplicated nowhere else. Virgin Gorda, only 20 square miles in size, is an island where beaches and pools lurk among house-sized boulders that are tumbled together as though flung there by the gods. In this setting, the dramatic architecture of Little Dix Bay enhances the visitor's "out-of-this-world" feeling. Curling around a great beach, the resort features a dining terrace with shingled roofs at varying heights and hexagonal cottages on stilts like tree-houses.

BLENDING the primitive with the luxurious, Little Dix Bay offers accommodations and service that make each guest feel that a personal tropical paradise has been designed just for him.

Guest rooms are decorated with a flair for casual comfort, and furnishings have been imported from India, Malta, Mexico, England, Germany, Denmark, Italy and the United States. Dining on the terrace overlooking the beach is an experience—some days the chef prepares succulent roast beef and Yorkshire pudding; other times he offers the best continental cuisine with native specialties like conch cocktails and turtle steaks.

The island of Virgin Gorda invites exploration, by foot, jeep or bicycle. On the southwest shore fantastic piles of granite have formed such scenic wonders as Spring Bay, a British national park area, and The Baths, a watery labyrinth of grottoes; on the southeastern tip are abandoned copper mines that were originally worked by the Spaniards in the 16th century.

THE REMOTE atmosphere of a world apart makes Little Dix Bay especially attractive to honeymooners, and a Honeymoon Special is offered to newlyweds, including a champagne supper, breakfast in the cottage or terrace on the first morning, picnic day trip to a very private beach and a day sail in the Trimaran. Rates for two, during the fall and spring seasons, are $110 for 3 days, 2 nights; $330 for 7 days, 6 nights; and $550 for 11 days, 10 nights.

Sailing, water skiing, snorkeling, guided trips to other beaches on Virgin Gorda and to other islands, and bicycling, in addition to all meals, are to be included in one general rate of $55 to $60 per day double until Dec. 9 and in the spring from April 1 to May 1; Winter rates (Dec. 20 to April 1) will be $75 and $80. The resort will be closed next summer.

Little Dix Bay lies about 30 miles northeast of St. Thomas, U.S. Virgin Islands. Two-engine air service connects with jets at San Juan, Puerto Rico, and St. Thomas and St. Croix, U.S. Virgins, airports. The resort's stateside offices are at 30 Rockefeller Plaza West, New York.

Waikiki has rival: Kaanapali Beach

Waikiki, Hawaii's famed resort for almost half a century at last has a rival. Kaanapali Beach on the island of Maui has already established itself as the fastest growing resort in the Aloha State.

Its future seems assured as development is to a meticulously prepared plan. Five years ago Kaanapali already being dubbed "The Golden Coast"—was virgin coast covered by scrub trees. Today Hawaii's first pre-planned destination resort area boasts four international hotels set around a 7,200-yard surfside championship golf course already attracting many major national and international tournaments including the Canada Cup.

THE ISLAND of Maui is 70 miles southeast of Honolulu and Kaanapali is less than an hour's traveling from the Hawaiian capital—20 minutes in a jet to Kahului airport than a 40-minute drive across the island's isthmus through sugar cane fields.

Kaanapali, like much of the Hawaiian Islands has been bestowed with much beauty from nature which tourists love. There's a climate that varies little throughout the year; there's deep-sea fishing a few miles away and spear fishing and high diving from a rock to the almost bottomless depths of the Pacific below.

Despite all these attractions, perhaps the most popular is the link with the past at nearby Lahaina, once the capital of Captain Cook's famed Sandwich Islands.

IT WAS TO Lahaina that the Congregationalist missionaries from the New England States came almost a century and a half ago bringing the Gospel and a western education to the receptive natives; and it was to this deep seaport soon after that whalers from many countries came to replenish their food during their five-year sojourns in the South Pacific.

At present there are four hotels—Sheraton-Maui, Royal Lahaina, Kaanapali and International Colony Club—all drawing visitors from throughout the world. A fifth, Hilton's Hale Kaanapali, is under construction and is due for completion early this year.

Even though Waikiki has a rival it is unlikely to replace it. On the contrary the two will work harmoniously together as more and more tourists explore the wonders of the Hawaii group. And where better to begin this exploring than at Kaanapali and Lahaina—where the Hawaii of today really began.

Ski styles to be shown CWC meet

Opening the winter resort season for the skier and non-skier will be a fashion show presented by a sporting goods store at the Tuesday meeting of Long Beach Christian Womens Club.

Current trends in sporting fashions will be seen by interested members and guests at noon luncheon in the Elks Club, 4101 E. Willow St. Musical entertainment will be by Christie Soderwall, violinist.

DEAR ABBY

Divorcee should have right to begin dating

DEAR ABBY: Our daughter ran away to get married when she was 17. Two years later her husband left her and their small baby. The court awarded her sufficient support so that she could maintain her own apartment which she did, until recently. She decided she wanted to take a practical nursing course at the vocational school, so I agreed to take care of her baby. It simplified matters by having her move in with dad and me.

Before she moved in I made a few rules. One was that she was not to entertain any male guests unless dad or I were home. The other night she had a male friend here, knowing we wouldn't be home. This upset me. Her father claims she is 21 and we should trust her. It is a matter of principle with me. Do you think a 21-year-old divorcee should be allowed to entertain male friends alone?

AGAINST IT
DEAR AGAINST: Yes. She was wrong for having violated a "rule" she agreed to accept. But you were wrong for having made such a rule in the first place. Why offer your daughter a roof over her head and then raise it just because she wants to entertain her friends at home?

Where else should a respectable woman entertain? Either change that rule, mother, or tell daughter to change her address. You'll both be much happier.

DEAR ABBY: My mother has been sickly ever since I can remember. It's either a "splitting headache," a backache, a pain in the stomach, dizziness, or something else. She eats "pain-killers" like popcorn. She buys every kind on the market she can get without a prescription. If the directions say to take two, she takes four. I am afraid that one of these days she is going to take too many and never wake up. I can't convince her that this is dangerous to her health. Maybe you can. She reads your column everyday and thinks you have good sense. By the way, I am not a child who is imagining things or exaggerating. I am a 31-year-old married woman.

CONCERNED
DEAR CONCERNED: A "pain" is nature's way of telling us that something is wrong. To suppress the "pain" is nature's way of pain and ignore the warning, instead of going to a doctor to try to find out what is wrong and how to remedy it, is foolish, dangerous, and short-sighted.

DEAR ABBY: I go to the barber shop once a week. I am bald on top and all I ever need is a little trim around the ears and a bit of clipping on the back of my neck, so it takes my barber exactly six minutes to give me a haircut. I pay the standard price, of course.

Now the man who has a full head of hair and has saved up a month's growth takes about five times as much of the barber's time as I do, yet we both pay the same price for a haircut. I think barbers should charge according to the amount of time they spend with each customer. I would appreciate your opinion, and the opinion of others.

BALD, BOTHERED, AND BEWILDERED

DEAR BALD: Considering how much a haircut (even a little trim around the ears) does for a man's morale, it's a bargain at any price. Don't split hairs.

When "Chef" Hap Davidson decided to climb down off the roof, today's Chef of the Week, James Reid, ascended the ladder. In fact, he bought out Davidson Roofs, lock, stock and shingle.

That he knew "upper level" business is evidenced by the fact he had been a roofing engineer with Johns-Mansville Company for 14 years, the last 5 in the Long Beach area.

Born in Price, Utah, Reid arrived in Long Beach in time to enroll in the fourth grade at Horace Mann Elementary School. Jefferson Junior High and St. Anthony High preceded his enrolling at USC from which he graduated with a degree in business administration.

Reid started immediately in the building products field.

A member of the football teams at both St. Anthony and USC, Reid's interest in sports has continued and is shared by his family. His wife, Shirley, and their children, Scott, 10, Joe, 7 and Molly, 4, are all fine swimmers. Molly is even a member of the kiddie group known as "The Tadpoles." They enjoy, with equal enthusiasm, sailing their Sabot. In fact, our "Chef" is well known for his year 'round tan.

Reid is a member of the Long Beach Rotary Club and active in the Chamber of Commerce.

Contrary to precedent set by previous "chefs," he loves to cook. His specialty is whipping up a salad topped with Fleur De Lis Dressing.

When "The Reids" receive an invitation to a potluck supper, it always reads, "Come and bring your salad." He always complies.

FLEUR DE LIS SALAD DRESSING

1 cup salad oil
1/4 cup Tarragon vinegar
1 large, OR small, clove garlic
1 tsp. Dijon mustard
1/2 tsp. sugar
2 tsp. anchovy paste OR blue cheese OR both
1-tsp. salt
1/4 tsp. coarsely ground pepper
Mix thoroughly. Excellent as-is on Boston, or red lettuce; or, if you prefer a larger salad, tear butter lettuce, top with artichoke hearts and crab meat, and surround with avocado slices. Then top lightly with Fleur De Lis dressing.

Miss Putnam to be bride

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Putnam have announced the engagement of their daughter, Diana Lynn, to Ronald David Gehling, son of Mr. and Mrs. Hugo Gehling. Both families reside in Downey.

The bride-elect is the granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry NeCasek and Mr. and Mrs. Fred Putnam, all of Long Beach.

Both young persons are graduates of Downey High School. She was graduated in June from UCLA where she was affiliated with Delta Gamma, and is studying for her master's degree at California State College, Long Beach, to qualify for her secondary teaching credential.

Her fiance graduated in June from USC with a biology major and will do graduate work in the fall.

Nellie Foulk heads DUV

Rachel Steel, department senior vice president, will install Nellie Foulk as president of Anna Etheridge Tent 58, Daughters of the Union Veterans of the Civil War, at 1 p.m. Monday in Veterans Memorial Building.

Also assuming leadership posts will be Edna Bivens, Margaret Forhan, Mabel Fischer, Elsie Chase, Tyne Richardson, Pearl Adams, Elzora Nistrath, Ruth Kelley and Meriam Hamm.

Beauty Advice

... I have never yet seen a finer method of improving the complexion. Wrinkles are smoothed, dryness is checked, blemishes vanish and the skin takes on a healthy, youthful look... (Extract from a report by Margaret Merrill suggesting the use of the moist tropical oil of Olaj as a powder base.) Most druggists are now able to obtain supplies of this oil which gives glorious loveliness to the skin.

WHY SOME HOMEOWNERS, STILL, ARE ABLE TO OBTAIN A LOW 5½% HOME IMPROVEMENT LOAN

A TIMELY MESSAGE FROM PACIFIC'S PRESIDENT, MR. S. M. WEEKS

No doubt you've either read or heard many conflicting reports regarding tight money, frozen equity, and high interest rates. Briefly, this is the situation.

Interest rates quoted by most lenders on real estate loans have risen to an all time high. Many lenders are making 7½% commitments and higher. Indeed, a number of lenders have pulled off the market and have stopped lending completely.

With today's extremely tight money market, the reliable 5½% Home Improvement Loan is almost a thing of the past. But, being a volume builder with an enviable record through the years of excellent credit, Pacific Builders is still in a position to offer this low 5½% interest rate to qualified home owners for property improvement.

What is a qualified homeowner? Well, basically, he's one who managed to live within his means—worked in one place for a reasonable length of time and shows stability of location.

As for Home Improvement now, financial experts agree your biggest safeguard against inflation is the ownership of Real Estate. Unlike most consumer products which steadily depreciate in value, Real Estate appreciates, year after year.

Property Improvement at this time gives the home owner a two-fold advantage against rising inflation:

(1) He is able to avail himself of the low 5½% interest rate—a figure surely to rise in the near future. And (2) he is taking advantage of today's labor and material prices which most certainly are undergoing a steady rise.

Further advantages to property improvement now are:

(A) In an inflationary period it is a proven economic factor that income increases as living costs rise—the home owner who borrowed a dollar to pay for a dollar's worth of improvement, now, finds himself in the enviable position of paying this money back with a dollar value of 80¢. He has now saved 20% on his entire remodeling project.

(B) He is also the owner of a piece of property that is worth far more than his original investment in both property and improvements.

A well planned improvement to your home creates a growing asset which fights inflation, putting you dollars ahead, year after year—a veritable nest egg for all your tomorrows.

But time is running out—the longer you procrastinate, the less your dollars will return. Safeguard your tomorrows with a call to Pacific today. A courteous, bonded, Pacific building expert is available to answer your questions with no obligation.

Sincerely,

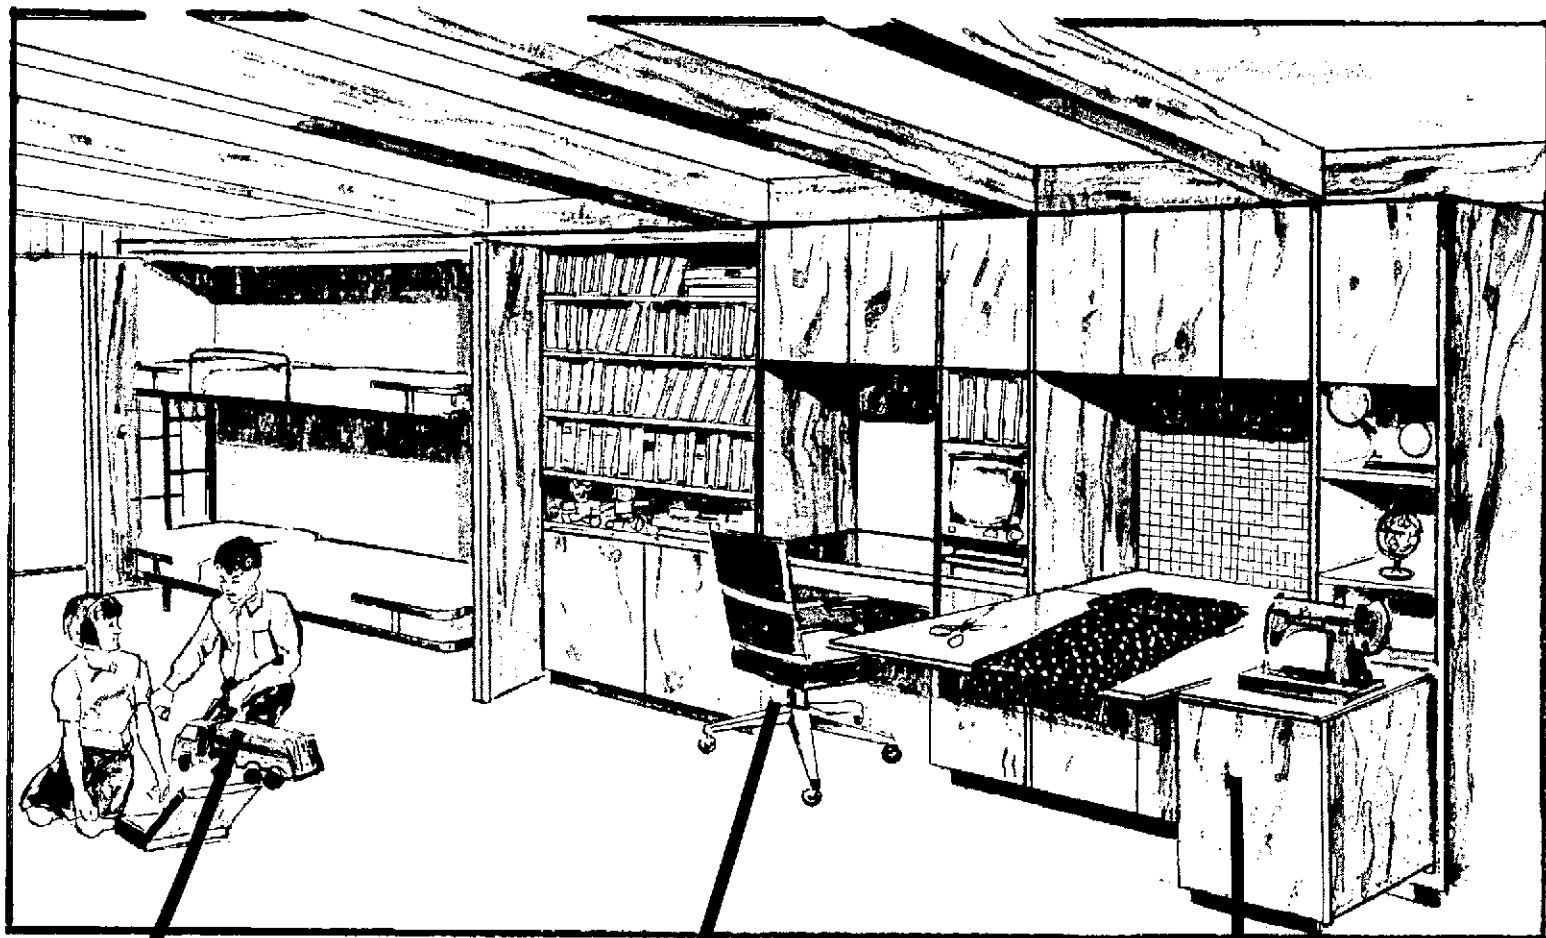

S. M. Weeks

THIS IS THE CITY THAT PACIFIC BUILT

You can't find it on a map. It doesn't even have a name. In fact, such a city doesn't even exist. But if it did have a name, it would more than equal the population of South Pasadena. That's right — 21,544 homeowners — plus — have added to, or overhauled their old houses into happier homes, dedicated to fuller living — the Pacific way! Scores upon scores are friends and neighbors who referred us to one another. In fact, on one street alone, we completed 5 room additions in a row! Recently, we built an addition for a third generation customer.

Stop a moment, and ask yourself, "Why do so many people prefer Pacific Builders?"

To remain a leader in the Home Improvement field as long as we have, quality is a prime requisite. But there's more to it — much more.

Take, as an example, a craftsman who is a part of the Pacific family. He's a typical family man — been in his trade for a good 18 years, a skilled journeyman who keeps abreast of the latest in building techniques, he goes out of his way to be more helpful because he has a knack of knowing how to please. This is the attitude that makes for quality building — plus! — and one more reason why a Pacific addition never has that "add-on look." A satisfied remodeling has a way of advertising itself. Yes, people have come to expect more from Pacific, because at Pacific, QUALITY COMES FIRST. So, you see, we're proud of our "phantom city" and all it represents.

A little over a century ago, no one really knew. The universal belief was that all living creatures began when "certain elemental atoms were suddenly commanded to flash into living tissue."

THE BOOK THAT CHANGED HISTORY

Then an English biologist, Charles Darwin, published one of the most important books in history. The first 1,250 copies of his The Origin Of Species sold out in a single day, and a storm of controversy broke which has never entirely died.

Now—in the style that LIFE has made famous, so clear that it makes perfect sense even to children—here is the remarkable story of evolution in this beautiful introductory volume of the LIFE Nature Library.

You retrace the historic voyage that young Darwin made on H.M.S. Beagle, and see the very same phenomena that set his mind ablaze. You see the primitive Indians of Tierra del Fuego, at the bottom of the world, so tough they sleep naked on icy ground. You tour the Galapagos Islands, nature's own laboratory of evolution, where complete isolation from the rest of the world has resulted in startling species never seen anywhere else: the world's only scraggy lizards, 500-pound tortoises a hundred years old, male frigate birds who puff out their bright red throats to the size of cantaloupes to attract females, thirteen varieties of Galapagos finch, a phenomenon which helped convince Darwin of the evolutionary process. In one stunning color photograph after another, you see the "beautiful adaptations" animal life has made to the harsh demands of nature.

Here are the clues to bygone life—shells, bones, tracks, eggs, imprints, or entire mummies—that have been preserved by nature in tar, wax, coal, ice and stone; the cave cemetery in the Pyrenees where 350 ancient human skeletons were found; a frozen baby mammoth perfectly preserved in ice for 22,000 years.

In EVOLUTION you can share the thrill of the couple in Tanganyika, as they uncover, after more than 20 years of digging, the bones of the world's earliest known man—over a million years old. And genetic scientists take you into their laboratories to explain the mysteries of the microscopic genes and chromosomes that determine the inheritance of characteristics. You see a human egg magnified 2,000 times, how a living cell divides.

Obviously a book of such scope cannot be adequately described here. So we invite you to borrow a copy from us and browse through it freely for ten days with your family. Then if you wish, you may return it and owe nothing. But if you do want to make it part of your library and your family life, you may own it for much less than such a handsomely printed and bound book would ordinarily cost. Thanks to TIME-LIFE's vast facilities and an unusually large print order for each volume, substantial savings are realized and passed along to you. You pay only $3.95 (plus shipping and handling). Then you will be entitled to receive another volume of the LIFE Nature Library for free examination every two months, and to keep it, if you wish, at the same low price.

NO COMMITMENT TO BUY BOOKS

But you promise to buy nothing. And you may cancel this arrangement any time you wish. However, most families, especially those with children, do want to continue with the series. For it makes a cohesive encyclopedia of natural history that your family will increasingly treasure—an impressive reference shelf and study aid used in thousands of classrooms from elementary school through college. To examine the first volume without obligation, all you have to do is mail the attached postpaid order form or use the coupon on the last page of this section.

Man and his genes

MONGOLOID

CAPOID

Man's striking diversity of racial forms depends on the combined action of tiny genetic differences. A number of these variations have been helpful to man and are now part of his legacy; other dangerous ones may create lethal handicaps whenever they arise. Man is united in one species, but is racially divided into more than 30 subgroupings which are distinct from each other in genetic type and in details of physical appearance. While individuals differ within groups, what sets a group apart is that the majority inherit genetic characteristics peculiar to the group. Genetic traits which are not helpful, or in some cases actually harmful, tend to be selected against, although they keep cropping up.

HORSE AND MAN exhibit in their skeletons similar bones in similar positions, but altered to perform different functions. In such relationships Darwin saw echoes of a primeval pattern, modified by evolution.

SHOWING OFF. A male frigate bird displays its bright gular pouch to attract female attention during courtship and nest building.

A MONSTER ON THE MOVE can travel some 360 yards per hour. These great reptiles weigh as much as a quarter of a ton. Before man discovered how delicious they are, they had a life expectancy of well over a century.

SEX APPEAL...and the vital part it plays in evolution

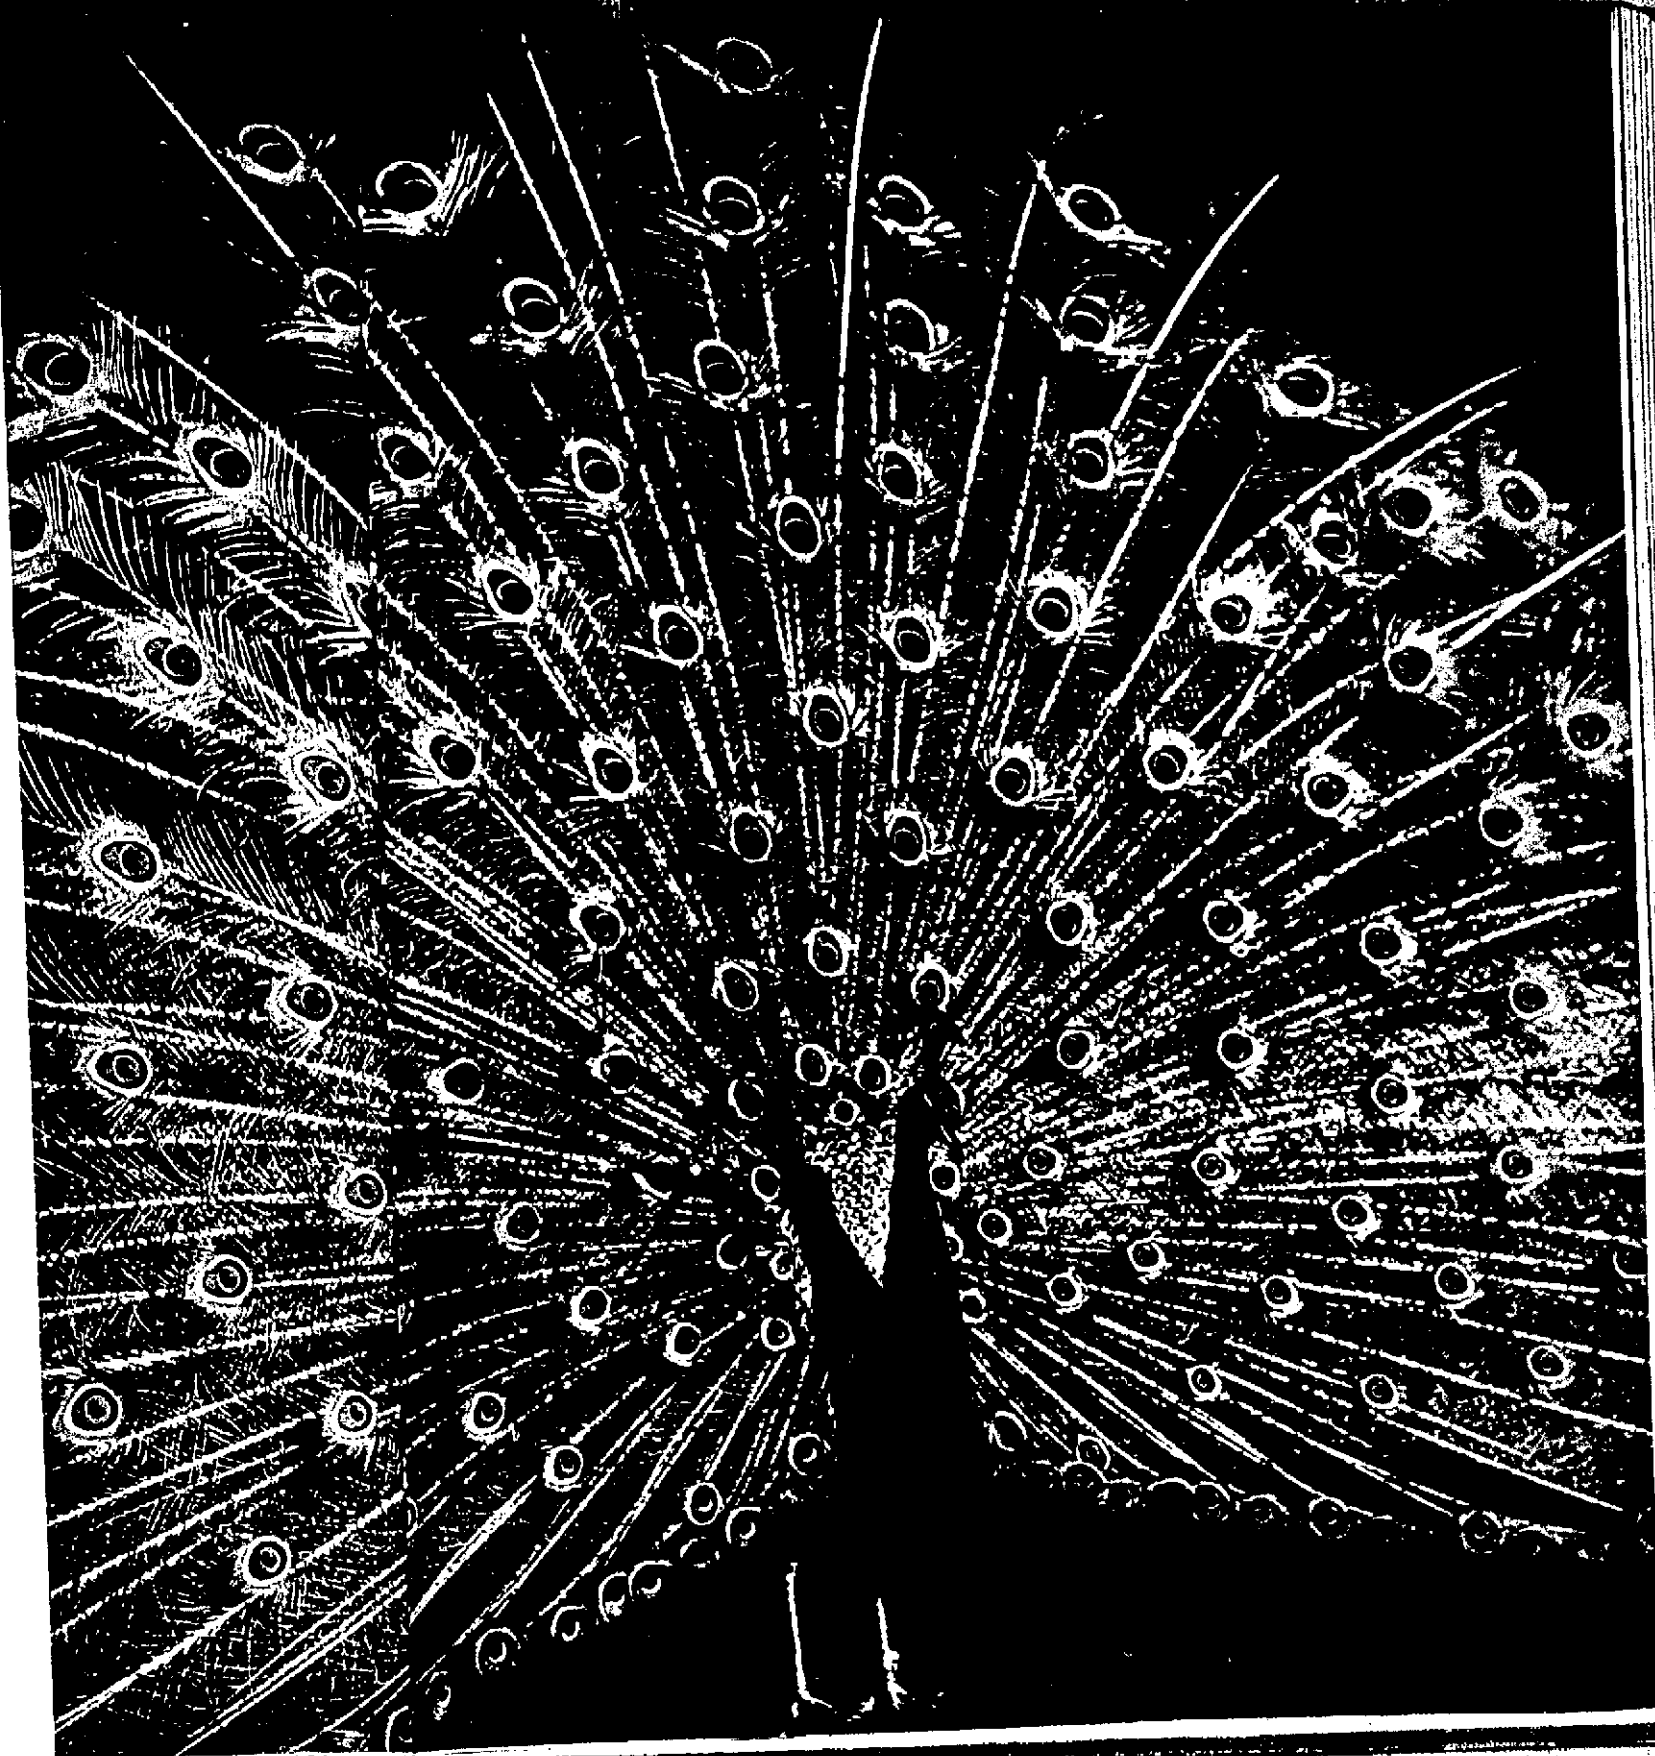

THE MULTICOLORED FACE of the male mandrill baboon, as well as its purplish-blue and red rump, exerts an irresistible attraction for the female. These characteristics began to be fixed in the species as brilliantly marked males won more of the females.

The Importance of Being Attractive

The attraction of one living thing for another is a mighty influence on evolution. Darwin found that "beauty is sometimes even more important than success in battle," and the male most likely to succeed in leaving progeny is the one most capable of capturing the female's attention. Thus by sexual selection—the preference for one mate over another—have come about such secondary sexual characteristics as the mandrill's face above and the tail of the peacock at right. But though man may see the peacock's tail as something beautiful, the peahen sees it only as a flag that stimulates her responses to the male.

THE IRIDESCENT TAIL of the male peacock is the emblem with which it attracts its harem of two to five females. According to Darwin, the preference of the females "for the most beautiful males, rendered the peacock the most splendid of living birds."

A gorilla toys with her newborn baby. Like humans, gorillas have a long, close mother-child relationship.

Why does the baboon have a shiny red nose? ... and what's the peacock's tail for? To attract the opposite sex, of course. Even among the lower orders, personal appearance is crucial in natural selection. To win—or steal—more mates, millions of living species have adopted strange habits, brilliant markings, exquisite colorings, marvelous disguises—thus adding to what Darwin called life's "ever-branching and beautiful ramifications."

In effect, many animals "dress for the occasion." Just another example of behavior which we consider exclusively human to be found flowering among the lower orders—as you'll discover in the fascinating pages of EVOLUTION. You'll read how the baby baboon practices social behavior while part of a play-group of other juvenile baboons. You'll learn why chimpanzees follow and venerate their patriarchs—and you'll examine compelling evidence that races of super-apes, now extinct, not only improvised weapons for the hunt, but actually manufactured them.

EVOLUTION covers a vast canvas of which simian development culminating in man is only a small part. From first, all-but-formless life to fish, to amphibians, to reptiles, birds and mammals, the whole main line of free-living organisms, and all its major by-paths are fully and freely discussed.

Like all the volumes in the LIFE Nature Library, EVOLUTION is so interestingly written that even the average junior high school student is entertained, as well as informed, from first page to last. The LIFE Nature Library clarifies ideas without oversimplification. Logic, organization, clear writing, stunning photography and brilliant art work are the tools the editors use in making two billion years of evolution come alive.

Why not examine a copy of EVOLUTION free for 10 days? We'd be happy to lend it to you.

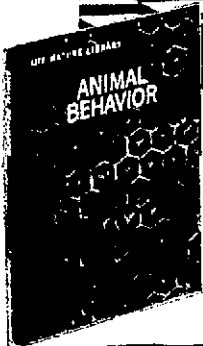

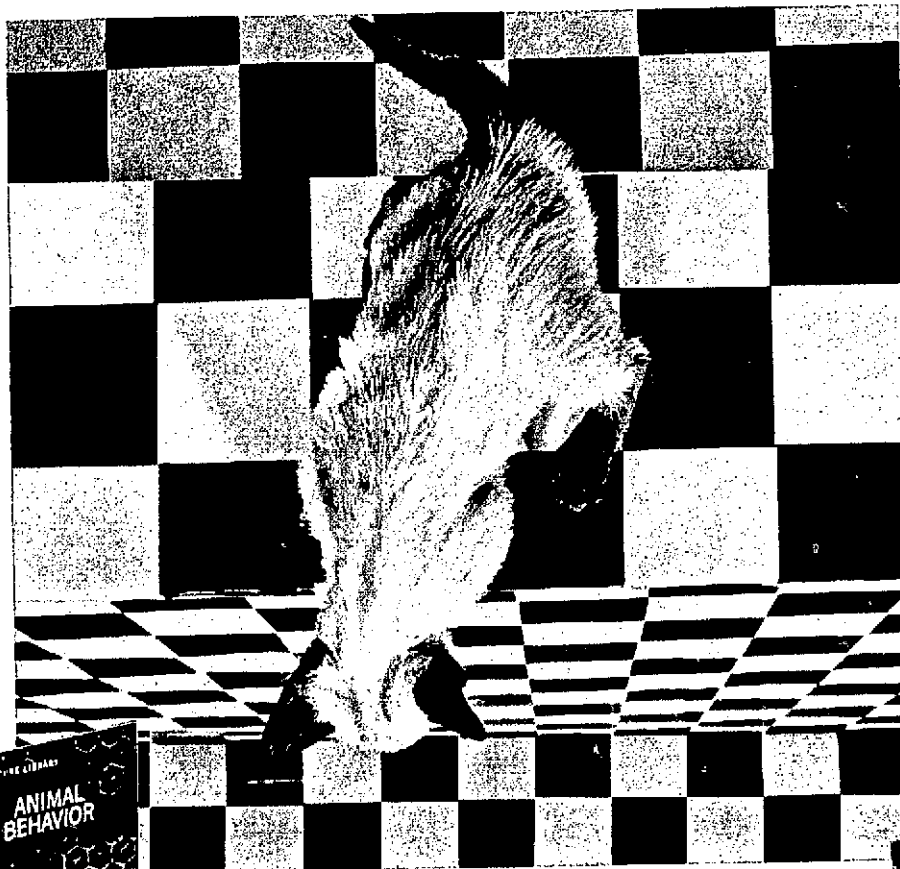

A bloody duel occurs between two male iguanas. Such fights are rare, most quarrels between iguanas are bluffing matches. The dispute is over territory.

Other Nature Library volumes will show you—

world around us

It's the oldest of all studies—yet it's still an infant science. ANIMAL BEHAVIOR attempts to discover what the first hunter was trying to figure out: what makes the animal tick? What's he going to do next? When the Stone Age hunter turned farmer, the questions became: how can I train him? How much can he learn? How far can he be trusted? Today the same questions, in the laboratory, assume different forms and promise more clear-cut answers: in given behavior how much is learning? How much is instinct? From Pavlov's dogs to the motivation behind the hypnotized crowds cheering Hitler, here is a book which collects and evaluates an engrossing share of what is known about the facts of animal behavior.

In this fascinating volume you'll enjoy them all—from thumb-sized hummingbirds to African ostriches eight feet tall—from golden plover that fly 2400 miles nonstop to flightless Galápagos penguins—from fossilized prehistoric Archaeopteryx to egg-a-day chickens of the space age. You'll discover pictures of running ostriches carved by a Stone Age artist some 10,000 years ago—and learn why, as late as the 18th century, some people of "learning and piety" insisted that birds migrated to the moon. Out of the vast accumulated treasury of birdlore, Roger Tory Peterson and the Editors of TIME-LIFE Books have created a vivid and unforgettable experience for you and your family.

Let THE SEA weave its spell over you. You plunge into the depths of an extraordinary world where there are "plants" that move and "rocks" that live—where babies may be born from the body of the male. Water is the source of all life and the principal substance of all living things. 70.8% of the earth's surface is water, yet the depths of the sea have until recently been an almost total mystery. Only in the last two decades have we been able to begin unlocking the sea's secrets. And never before has this new—and rapidly accumulating—knowledge been available in a single volume. In THE SEA you take part in a hunt for the origins of life itself.

The exciting work of discovering, collecting, and classifying the marvelous flora and fauna of our continent! The material of this remarkable book is the world we live in—THE LAND AND WILDLIFE OF NORTH AMERICA. It travels in, under, and over the ground, from the Bering Strait where the first man crossed into North America to the Isthmus of Panama where nature draws the line. Our writers, artists, naturalists and photographers have captured that which they love about our land and turned it into a fascinating book.

if you wish—many other natural wonders of the as only the resources of LIFE can reveal them.

EVOLUTION is but the first of many fascinating tours of the secret world of nature that you may take. If you decide to accept this volume after your free examination, you will be entitled to review another volume in the LIFE Nature Library once every two months.

All volumes are sent on a 10-day free examination basis. You make no commitments. You promise to buy nothing. You may reject any or all future volumes. And, you may cancel the arrangement any time you wish.

Every one of these beautiful volumes is complete in itself and can be enjoyed without referral to another. Students at all levels will find these books particularly rewarding. Together, the entire series makes a uniquely handsome encyclopedia of nature that your family will treasure increasingly.

To examine the first volume free for 10 days, simply mail the postpaid order form enclosed or use the coupon on the reverse side of this page. You may return it and owe nothing, if you are not delighted.

The infinite adaptability of living things is the message of THE DESERT. For example, the tiny kangaroo mice have solved the problem of living without ever taking a drink of water. Caught between an exploding population and a contracting world, science is now turning its attention to the world's eight million square miles of arid land. The findings—so full of both wonder and promise—have now been collected in a single volume. The desert is mankind's future land bank. Rich in everything but water, it may turn green once we distill the waters of the sea for irrigation. The possibilities of the desert are enormous. They will feed your sense of wonder—as the desert itself may one day help feed the world.

THE MAMMALS explores our cousins once removed—who are not so different from us as some would like to believe. This book tells of caribou that migrate and moles that stay in their holes, of gorillas who build new nests nightly and beavers whose lodges last for years, of moose that rip off tree bark and prairie dogs (above) who daintily dissect dandelions. In the cooperative hunting of wolves and killer whales, the careful nurturing of the young, the social behavior of chimpanzees, baboons, and other apes, you'll be fascinated to follow the development of the mammalian brain to its present power in Homo sapiens. Some animals, especially the higher apes, do at times display intelligent behavior as we know it in man, clearly showing some understanding of cause and effect, and also the ability to solve problems which are entirely new in their experience.

STEPHEN STRIMPELL, STARRING IN 'MR. TERRIFIC'

BERT'S EYE VIEW

Pill Makes 'Superman' of 'Mr. Peepers' Type

By BERT RESNIK
TV and Radio Editor

PICTURE "Mr. Peepers" playing "Superman" and you have a fairly good mental snapshot of Stephen Strimpell in "Mr. Terrific."

The situation comedy premieres at 8 p.m. Monday in color on channel 2.

I watched a rehearsal of the series and Strimpell comes across as the kind of a man who could get lost in a crowd but doesn't.

There is a naturalness about him that evokes instant identification in other males and I think most women will want to mother him.

I won't make any prediction about the success of the series because watching one brief rehearsal doesn't provide enough material for judgement.

Nevertheless, limited material to the contrary, I emphatically believe that Strimpell personally will be a hit.

A SUPER-PILL, much like Popeye's can of spinach, is the gimmick around which the series revolves.

It is a pill that is only super, however, when it is taken by one man, Strimpell in his role as Stanley Beamish, "Mr. Terrific." The government uses him as a secret agent.

While the role may be that of a comedy "Superman," Strimpell doesn't feel it's accurate to completely categorize it that way.

"It's more than that and I don't mean in terms of art," he said. "What we have is a warm, loving, generous, innocent man who is up against the evil forces of the world."

"He is a man totally miscast for the part fate has assigned him because he has absolutely no sense of evil."

STRIMPELL HIMSELF might have had some miscasting compunctions at the beginning of taping the series.

For as a "Superman"—comedy or not—he does a lot of flying without the benefit of airplanes. And Strimpell has acrophobia, a fear of heights.

It was a fear that began when he was a child in Brooklyn and climbed up to a high-diving board in a swimming pool. Someone pushed him off and he struck the water the wrong way.

He was hurt, but more frightened than injured. What he must do, he was convinced, was immediately climb up and dive off that board again, the right way.

So he immediately climbed back up, took one look down at the water below, then retreated to the ladder and slowly made his way back down.

He's been afraid of heights ever since.

IT WAS A FEAR that was heightened the first day of shooting scenes from "Mr. Terrific." With the use of belts, wires and T-bars, the producers had Strimpell flying for nine hours in order to get stock shots that could be utilized throughout the series' various episodes.

They couldn't use a stuntman because too many close-up shots were necessary.

It wasn't too bad after he got used to it. "Once the wind machine begins and I flap my arms, I really feel like I'm flying," said Strimpell. "And I kind of enjoy it."

He also enjoys the idea of being cast in the role of a man who seldom does the right thing.

"In my personal life, I'm always doing the wrong things," Strimpell said.

There was, for example, the time he took a very sophisticated girl to a swank Japanese restaurant in New York and he was trying to be a Cary Grant.

So when he ate his bird's-nest soup, or whatever it was, a piece of seaweed hung out of the corner of his mouth and dripped all over his tie.

There was, for another example, the time he studiously mastered a British accent so he could try out for the role of an English nobleman. The accent was perfect but Strimpell, when he was getting ready to leave the casting director's office, accidentally put his hand in an ash-tray.

The ash-tray stuck to his hand and he walked out with it—but not the role.

'DRAGNET' RETURNS

★ ★ ★ ★ ★

Nothing but the Facts, Mam

By RICK DU BROW

HOLLYWOOD (UPI — Jack Webb is probably as surprised as anyone that NBC-TV is bringing back his popular "Dragnet" series for at least 13 weekly half-hours.

How did it happen? A couple of bigwigs at Universal Studios had the idea, says Webb, to do at least a two-hour show for one of the "original" productions that NBC-TV alternates with its dwindling supply of movies. And the option was picked up.

"I didn't think it would be possible," the producer-star said in his office on the Universal lot. "I wasn't terribly enamored with the idea of doing the show again. But I'm pleased now."

Webb will appear in his former role as Detective Sgt. Joe Friday and Harry Morgan, cast as officer Bill Gannon, will join him as his partner when the series returns at 9:30 p.m. Thursday, channel 4 in color.

ALTHOUGH Webb says he has no idea why his splendidly-done police series is being renewed, there is a strong feeling that the current public interest in law enforcement is a large factor. And if you're going to have a show on such a subject, why not revive one of television's all-time hits?

"It'll be interesting to see if the show goes again," says the businesslike Webb. "Our mores have changed. But if we do make it, I hope it will bring about the reprise of some other favorites. Look at how well Jackie Gleason and Art Carney are doing in the revival of 'The Honeymooners.'"

Will "Dragnet" be the same as in its hey-day? Yes, says Webb — except that since the series has always stressed authenticity, "we must employ all the new laws police have to work with because we work very closely with them. It is as much their show as ours."

DISCUSSING the new court rulings on persons held, Webb said this would be one of the items updated. For example, he added, in one program there is advising of rights two or three times. He showed a copy of the exact wording:

"It is my duty to advise you of your constitutional rights. You have the right to remain silent and any statement you make may be used against you in a court of law. You have the right to the presence of an attorney. If you cannot afford one, one will be appointed before any questioning."

How will this approach affect the new "Dragnet"? Webb feels it will be no problem because his program "is not historically an action show." In fact, he adds, "it may make it better from a drama viewpoint because it's an obstacle."

"Dragnet," in short, will stick close to the law. And no one in television knows the enforcement view from the inside better than Jack Webb.

'Mr. Peepers' Type Really Lawyer

On the other hand, there have been some things he has done right in his life.

A fully accredited lawyer, a member of the New York bar and an Army veteran of the judge advocate general's office, he feels he was right to give up law for acting.

"For me," he said, "law was overbearing from the standpoint of rigid discipline. I always had to do things required of me. It left me with very little sense of living my life."

"So I simply decided to do what I preferred above all else—act—and I've never regretted it."

His talent matched his enthusiasm and Strimpell, after an initial period of summer-stock had little difficulty in being cast in numerous Broadway and off-Broadway stage productions.

On the stage, he appeared in almost ever kind of production ranging from "Romeo and Juliet" to "A Thousand Clowns".

Public acclaim and critics awards accumulated and Strimpell, between roles, was signed as an acting instructor for the Uta Hagen-Herbert Berghof Studio.

CLASSES were over last year on June 15 and Strimpell left New York for the West Coast the next day "to escape the heat."

"ONE GOOD THING ABOUT TELEVISION—IT FORCED MY HUSBAND TO DISCOVER BOOKS!"

rival here, an agent contacted him to make his television debut in a guest shot on "Run, Buddy, Run," the series which, ironically, is being replaced by "Mr. Terrific."

On the basis of that guest appearance, he was signed for the "Mr. Terrific" lead and parts in two upcoming movies, "Garden of Cucumbers" and "The Escalator."

His current experiences in making his first television series are "singularly different" and "an adventure."

And they have their lighter side.

"On the stage," said Strimpell, "I'd have to remember three hours of dialogue."

"In television, when you have five lines, the director asks you if you think you can manage to remember them long enough for a take."

"I always answer, 'I'll sure give it a try.'"

Marriage is something he has yet to give a try.

"But I've been refused three times."

Cite Wood

Robert D. Wood, who recently was promoted from general manager of KNXT to executive vice president for the CBS-TV stations division, has been honored by the Los Angeles County Board of Supervisors and the Los Angeles City Council.

Twin resolutions commended Wood for contributing to the "enlightenment of the community" by his initiative in pioneering editorials on important community issues.

SPECIAL

PETER JENNINGS—ABC expands its nightly news to 30-min. today, as series, together with KABC's preceding Baxter Ward-headed segment, belatedly adds color. Howard K. Smith joins Jennings as the 5:30 p.m. news, ch. 7, adds in-depth commentary, a new ultra-modern set and extensive use of Early Bird and Lani Bird satellites. Edward P. Morgan also will be a regular contributor.

MR. TERRIFIC—Premiere. Move over Clark Kent, Burt Ward and Britt Reid! Stanley Beamish (and, later tonight, Carter Nash) is joining your ranks as a dual-personality crime fighter, this one as a mild filling-station attendant, picked by a secret bureau's computers to use its "power pill" (whose effect lasts only one hour during a 24-hr. period). Newcomer Steve Strimpell has the title role, with John McGiver (Many Happy Returns) and Dick Gaultier ("Get Smart's" favorite robot) featured. The 8 p.m. color opener, ch. 2, guests Luciana Paluzzi and Harold J. Stone as enemy agents, as our superhero is sent to overtake a speeding train and recover a secret power paralyzer from a defecting inventor on board. Holy spoof!

LUCY SHOW—Lucy's reunited with her sidekick of 14 years when Vivian Vance returns for a 2-part episode at 8:30 p.m., in color, ch. 2. When the girls learn that a friend's son (Les Brown Jr.) has become a Sunset Stripnik, the two adopt the guise and mannerisms of the mod crowd to rescue the young man. (Another old regular returns to the home stand for a 2-part next week as Don Knott tries for his annual Emmy by guesting as Andy Griffith's Barney.)

CAPTAIN NICE—Premiere. If you survive "Mr. Terrific," try this 8:30 p.m., ch. 4 color series in the same vein. This one, a Buck Henry (of "Get Smart") creation, deals with a mother-dominated police department chemist who discovers a secret liquid which transforms him into a mother-dominated super-human protector of Big Town. Another newcomer, William Daniels, plays the title role, with Alice Ghostly, Ann Prentiss and Byron Foulger featured. Our hero discovers his chemical formula in the opener, testing it first on a mouse which promptly beats up a cat, and then drinking it himself when hoods in a park drag off his pretty police sergeant date.

CRITICS' CORNER

Excerpted Reviews on Recent TV Programs

Program: "The Trap of Solid Gold," an "ABC Stage 67" presentation aired last Wednesday night on channel 7.

That widely condemned and popular occupation, status-seeking, was the subject. It was interesting, despite flaws in the story and a trite approach.

The performances of Cliff Robertson and Dina Merrill as the couple were almost enough to make one overlook the basic silliness of the story and the big holes in the logic of the premise.

Critic Cynthia Lowry of AP

SUNDAY

THE TALL Men — 10:30 p.m. in color on channel 9. A 1955 movie with Clark Gable, Robert Ryan and Jane Russell. About a pair of Texas gunslings.

MONDAY

JAMES TONT: Operation Goldfinger — 7:30 p.m. in color on channel 9. Same time Wednesday and Thursday. A 1966 West German film spoofing secret agency.

TUESDAY

LOVE Me Tender — 6 p.m. on channel 7. A 1956 movie with Elvis Presley, Debra Paget and Neville Brand. Younger brother marries Confederate trooper's sweetheart while the latter is away fighting.

THE UGLY American — 8:30 p.m. in color on channel 4. A 1962 movie starring Marlon Brando in the role of a new ambassador to an Asian nation. Adapted from best-seller novel by Eugene Burdick and William J. Lederer.

WEDNESDAY

ULYSSES — 9 p.m. in color on channel 7. A 1955 production with Kirk Douglas, Silvana Mangano and Anthony Quinn. About Ulysses' voyage home after the Trojan war.

FRIDAY

PT 109 — 9 p.m. in color on channel 2. A 1962 movie about the late President John F. Kennedy when he was a Navy lieutenant in charge of a patrol-torpedo boat. Stars Cliff Robertson.

"ABC Stage 67," an experimental series, proved that it is not necessary to be wild or exotic to be exceptional on television. The proof was a simple yet almost terrifying contemporary drama about a rising young business executive and his family who are trapped financially, despite his good salary, by the status requirements of his career.

Critic Rick Du Brow of UPI

A first for ABC-TV. It can now claim to be the only network to take what might have made a year's supply of daily soap-opera serials and present it in one episode.

Critic Bert Resnik of "Tele Vues"

Program: Varied ones aired on Monday.

Parades are peerless — as occasional treats. Football is fine — in moderation.

But Monday, after three parades and three football games for a total of more than 12 continuous hours of broadcasting — even the most devoted television viewer must feel that he has seen enough drum majorettes, end runs and incomplete passes to last him for a while.

It is that old problem of satiety, and the broadcasters and the viewers alike have to guard against it.

The television networks spoil the viewer. When he indicates he likes something, he is likely to get it in such quantity that he quickly tires of it.

Critic Cynthia Lowry of AP

Program: Swearing-in of Gov. Ronald Reagan, aired by various stations early Monday morning.

While the record of Ronald Reagan as an administrative executive remains for the future to write, the new state executive has demonstrated from the start that handling himself in public will be no problem.

It was a demonstration — on a solemn occasion — that included evidence the just-installed governor has a sense of humor.

It was shortly after midnight when Gov. Reagan officially took his oath of office.

Stepping to the microphone, he smiled at Sen. George Murphy and said: "Well, George, here we are on the late show again."

His timing was perfect. An atmosphere of ultra-formality, through his humorous remark, was brought back to reality.

With that accomplished, the governor next proceeded to emphasize the philosophy of the Prince of Peace and hope that his administration, to a large degree, could accomplish objectives on this scale.

With dignity and sincerity, he concluded by saying: "I'll try hard."

Television did a capable job of covering the event quately presenting background material prior to the actual ceremony.

SPECIAL

GEORGIA LEGISLATURE — In a joint session at Atlanta, the state legislature's 259 members answer roll call to cast their vote for either Lester Maddox (D) or Howard (Bo) Calloway, neither of whom polled a majority in the November elections. Coverage of the tabulation will be by interruptions starting at 8:30 a.m., ch. 4.

THE BEATLES at Shea Stadium — More than 60,000 frantic fans turned out last August to see the four mop-tops from Liverpool! The concert, featuring also Sounds Inc., Brenda Holloway, King Curtis and the Discotheque Dancers, was filmed by 12 color cameras. And during a special color hour at 7:30 p.m., ch. 7, you'll hear a dozen or so numbers, plus informal visits with John, Paul, George and Ringo as they drive to Shea, hover above New York in a helicopter and talk informally in their dressing room.

THE INVADERS — Premiere. Quinn Martin, who created "The FBI," "12 o'clock High," "The Fugitive" and "The Untouchables," has what should be another hit on his hands. Silent agreement is made by rival networks who bring in Bob Crane-John Banner guestings, and an early-starting Marlon Brando movie to buck the 8:30 p.m. color opener, ch. 7. Roy Thinnes stars as an architect whose normal way of life is shattered when on a back road shortcut he sees a flying saucer land, and nobody will listen to his story of an advance guard of alien beings from a doomed planet, able to assume human form, and plotting to eventually enslave our people. Diane Baker, J. D. Cannon, James Daly, John Milford, Ellen Corby and Vaughn Taylor are featured in premiere segment.

POISONED AIR — Daniel Schorr looks at the worldwide menace of air pollution during a "CBS Reports" repeat color hour at 10 p.m., ch. 2. HEW Sec. John W. Gardner, Sen. Edmund S. Muskie (D-Me.) and New York Mayor John V. Lindsay point out the need to control pollution-producing industries, joining meteorologists, an airline pilot, pollution experts, other mayors and automobile officials. Show was filmed in L.A., Tucson, Pittsburgh, Detroit, New York City, Lebanon, Rume, the Ruhr Valley Great Britain and Tokyo.

BATMAN—Series celebrates its first anniversary on the air with its only 3-parter, starring Cesar Romero as The Joker, Burgess Meredith as The Penguin and Terry Moore as the deluded Venus. First stealing the police department's new rare art map, The Joker announces that he will commit 12 crimes, one for each sign of the zodiac, then sweeps off to nab his first victims—the rock 'n' roll rage, the Twins. Launched at 7:30 p.m., ch. 7, in color, the zodiac crimes continue both tomorrow and next Wednesday.

ABC MOVIES—Premiere. Wednesday, one of only two nights without a prime-time network movie, now makes up for that lack. By dropping "Man Who Never Was" and shifting both "Peyton Place" and "ABC Stage 67" to other nights, ABC clears the 9 p.m. bloc for films from 20th Century-Fox, Paramount and Columbia, plus such foreign imports as tonight's "Ulysses," starring Kirk Douglas, Silvana Mangano, Anthony Quinn and Rossano Podesta, recounting the Greek sailor's adventures from the destruction of Troy and his battle with the one-eyed Cyclops to his imprisonment in Circe's cave and his brush with the deadly sirens. (Upcoming later this year, Otto Preminger's "Man with the Golden Gun" plus Sam Goldwyn's Feb. 8 "Guys & Dolls.")

Pan and Fan

I would like to know if the Monkees series on channel 4 is going to be cancelled.

Dorothy Ullsa, Long Beach

I would like to know where I could write to the Monkees and if they have a fan club. I am 12 years old and in the sixth grade and I am an avid admirer of the Monkees.

Grace Grimes, Paramount

I would like to know if one of the guards in the "Monkees," which was aired Dec. 26th, was Elvis Presley? The scene where I noticed it was when the song "I'm a Believer" was playing.

Also, how come the "Monkees" are being taken off the air?

Malindo Beck, Long Beach

The "Monkees" are not being taken off the air. NBC-TV is very happy with the show if not exactly delighted with mediocre ratings. There was no Elvis Presley or Elvis Presley in the Dec. 20th segment. Mail for principals in the show may be sent to Screen Gems, Inc., 1334 Beachwood Dr., Hollywood, Calif. 90028. The studio has information about fan clubs.

Who is the voice of the robot on Lost in Space?

Ricardo Rodriguez, Lakewood

It's an out-of-this-world secret. The studio will only say that it's a computer voice originating from within the robot.

ABC's Stage Sixty-Seven "A Christmas Memory" was wonderful. It is marvelous what a fine actress such as Geraldine Page can do to a simple story.

It was a pleasure for me to see this heart-warming tale and I only wish all television shows could be so down-to-earth and non-commercialized.

K. Nodler, Seal Beach

Always a pleasure to hear from individuals with warm hearts.

One of the most exciting and entertaining films we have seen on TV recently was "Harbor Holiday" on channel 13 which covered a tour of the bustling operations of the Long Beach Harbor.

Many of the scenes were spectacular, even to one pretty familiar with the harbor operations.

This was on "The Roving Kind" program by Milas Hinshaw and Buddy Noonan, a Bill Burrud production, who are coming up with some stuff well worth viewing.

J. Paul Gleason, Long Beach

Don't get in too deep, J. Paul.

Dr. ROWAN Says:

You're better off

...taking a little longer to pay, and buying better

DENTAL PLATES

Dental Plates are so important to you . . . can make such a difference in how you feel and how you look . . . you should take advantage of the best materials that modern dental science has developed. Every plate fitted in my office receives the same high standard of close professional attention. Prices vary, depending on the type and quality of the artificial teeth you prefer. For the slight difference in cost, you're better off choosing the best . . . and my Liberal Credit Plan makes it easy for you. On approval of your credit, you can spread the small monthly payments over any reasonable time.

NO CASH DOWN

NO CHARGE FOR CREDIT

No interest, no carrying charges, no bank or finance company to deal with. IT'S AN EXTRA SAVING FOR YOU, because my prices stay low, regardless of how much credit you need. On approval of your credit, you can spread the small monthly payments over any reasonable length of time, without extra charges of any kind. So don't let lack of cash keep you — or anyone in your family — from getting needed dental work completed right now.

UNION DENTAL PLAN SERVICE

My office provides all types of dental work under Union or California Dental Service Programs. Where part of the payment is made by the patient, credit is available.

O.A.S. PENSIONERS WELCOME

Bring your O.A.S. Identification Card for immediate service for X-rays, plate repairs, emergency work. New plates on approval of the O.A.S. We also provide Dental Care under other California Welfare programs. (A.B. — A.F.D.C. — A.T.D. — A.P.S.B.)

SPECIAL

JUDY GARLAND—Judy's back in a weekly series of off-network reprises of her former CBS hours, shown at 8 p.m., ch. 9, without her former "Bonanza" competition. Premiere show features guests Barbra Streisand, Jerry Van Dyke and the Smothers Brothers (who'll soon get Judy's old jinxed time slot).
RANGO—Premiere. Binghamton's inept Ensign Parker becomes Texas' Rango, who sees himself as Wild Bill Hickok but is the most bungling non-hero ever to wear a Ranger's badge (his uncle's a commandant). Tim Conway stars in the western spoof, with Guy Marks (veteran of Joey Bishop and John Forsythe shows) as his "chicken" Indian sidekick, and Norman Alden as the Ranger captain. The 9 p.m. color opener, ch. 7, finds Rango joining the outlaw gang he's supposed to trap, and leading them on to bigger and better crimes.
PHYLLIS DILLER—There's a new name, new address and new residents in the Southampton home of Phyllis and Uncle Ned Pruitt. Retitled "The Phyllis Diller Show" and switched to Fridays at 9:30 p.m., ch. 7, in color, show tonight introduces John Astin in a 2-week role as Phyllis' brother-in-law, with his former Dickens-Fenster partner Marty Ingels in a regular role as the owner of a neighborhood repair shop who gets inveigled into doing all kinds of repairs in return for a permanent house-guest status.
ISLAND CALLED ELLIS—Jose Ferrer is on-and-off-camera storyteller for a "Project 20" special documenting the story of immigration and its impact on America, as seen from the now-deserted place where the flood tide of immigration took place. The Donald B. Hyatt production at 10 p.m., in color, utilizes a combination of historic still-pictures-in-motion, plus footage newly filmed at Ellis Island.

What Your Name Means

Send your name to La Reina Rule in care of Southland Magazine, 604 Pine Ave., Long Beach, Calif. 90801, for origin, meaning and brief genealogy, for reply only in this column.

MISS RULE: What is the origin of CIPOLLA? — T.R., Lakewood.

CIPOLLA from Italy designated the progenitor of this lineage as "grower of onions," a staple food product native to almost every country in the world. The Cipolla armorial shield from Verona, Italy, is silver, emblazoned with a symbolic red onion having green leaves.

MISS RULE: Please explain the origin of HANSON—A.H., Long Beach.

HANSON originated in Holland, Belgium and England, separately. The source was the given-name Johann (John) meaning "God is gracious." Johann was shortened to "Han" and coupled with "son" to produce "Han-son." The unique Belgian Hanson armorial shield is silver, decorated with a red eagle above a branch of grapevine.

MISS RULE: Please give brief genealogy data on PRICE—R. W., Long Beach.

PRICE, a Welsh surname from western England, was shortened from "Ap-Rhys," meaning "Son of the ardent one" in old Cymric-Welsh. Rhys was used by descendants of the famous ruler Rhys-Atudor-Mawr who gained the Welsh throne in A.D. 1077. The Price armorial shield is red, emblazoned with a rampant silver lion within a gold border.

MISS RULE: Please give brief genealogy on ROSE—J.R., Downey W.R., Lakewood; M.R., Garden Grove.

ROSE's English sources were the Welsh term "Rhose," meaning "from the moor or wasteland," and from an inn-sign depicting a rose as the trademark. Robert and John de la Rose were 13th Century Oxford taxpayers in Britain. The English Rose shield of 1299 is black, with three red roses on a vertical silver stripe down the center. The alternate source name De Rose originated in Artois, north France, and meant "sons of the ruddy complexioned one." Descendants settled in Belgium, Holland and Prussia. Their shield is covered with six alternating red and silver cross-stripes. Six roses overlie the stripes.

MISS RULE: Would like the story of SILVA—M. W., Long Beach.

SILVA or Spain evolved from the ancient Roman-Latin word "Silva" meaning "from the grove of trees," an ancient landmark description. The Silva armorial shield has a gold-crowned red rampant lion centered on a silver background. Descendants include the renowned painter Diego de Silva y Velasquez, 1599-1660.

MISS RULE: May we have data on SAMPLE, SAMPLES?—M. S., Long Beach; B. S., Paramount.

SAMPLE and SAMPLES, of English origin, are "samples" of centuries of strange, non-standard spelling alterations. These names began as the Norman-French village name "Saint-Paul" where the family founder once lived. In the 1100s a descendant migrated to Britain where later records list ancestors, William de Sainpol, 1272, and William de Sayndepaul of Yorkshire, recorded in 1379. By the 1500s Sainpol became Sample, Semple, Samples and even Semphill. The Sample-Samples armorial shield is silver, decorated with a chevron formed of checkered red and silver squares, lying between three black bugles.

MISS RULE: Have you the meaning of AULICINO?—V. A., Long Beach.

AULICINO began many centuries ago in Italy and spread later to many other nations. The archaic Latin root-source syllable for this name, "Aulici" when coupled with the Italian suffix

NEXT WEEK

When you flip on the light switch one evening next month you may be drawing current generated by atom splitting. The Southern California Edison Company shortly expects to put into use the San Onofre Nuclear Generating Station that will feed more than 400,000 kilowatts of electrical power into Southern California residences and businesses. This is but a small portion of the total power consumed in the megalopolis, but it's an important step in the stride toward modern America of the future and the story will be told next week in Southland Magazine.

LARGE SELECTION OF CARPET

THAT spring day a boy's longing for a dog and a beagle's sober persuasion marked the beginning of our relationship with Chico. We thought we had welcomed into our family an ordinary beagle.

It was Brian, my son, who found the want ad in the morning paper.

"Mom!" he yelled. "A beagle's for sale—male—four years old—and a dog house, too!" Yes, of course he would feed him every day . . . and water him . . . and groom him. "Just call the number, Mom. Please—before someone else gets my dog."

AFTER SCHOOL that afternoon we drove across town to investigate the ad. And boy and dog met. Chico sat in the kitchen, awaiting inspection. A beautiful dog . . . black, brown, and white markings; husky body; short legs; pensive look. He did not advance from the spot designated to him so Brian closed the gap between the two. For Chico a cursory sniff sufficed; he wagged his tail, then sat up. His unspoken words to Brian were "I like you." Brian's spoken words were "Can I have him, please?"

What other answer but "yes."

We were told that Chico always slept outdoors in his one house, got along well with children, and was very friendly.

Friendly indeed! For the first day or so with us he seemed so well adjusted we wondered how it could matter so little to him that he had been transferred from one family to another. It was some time before we realized it did matter to him.

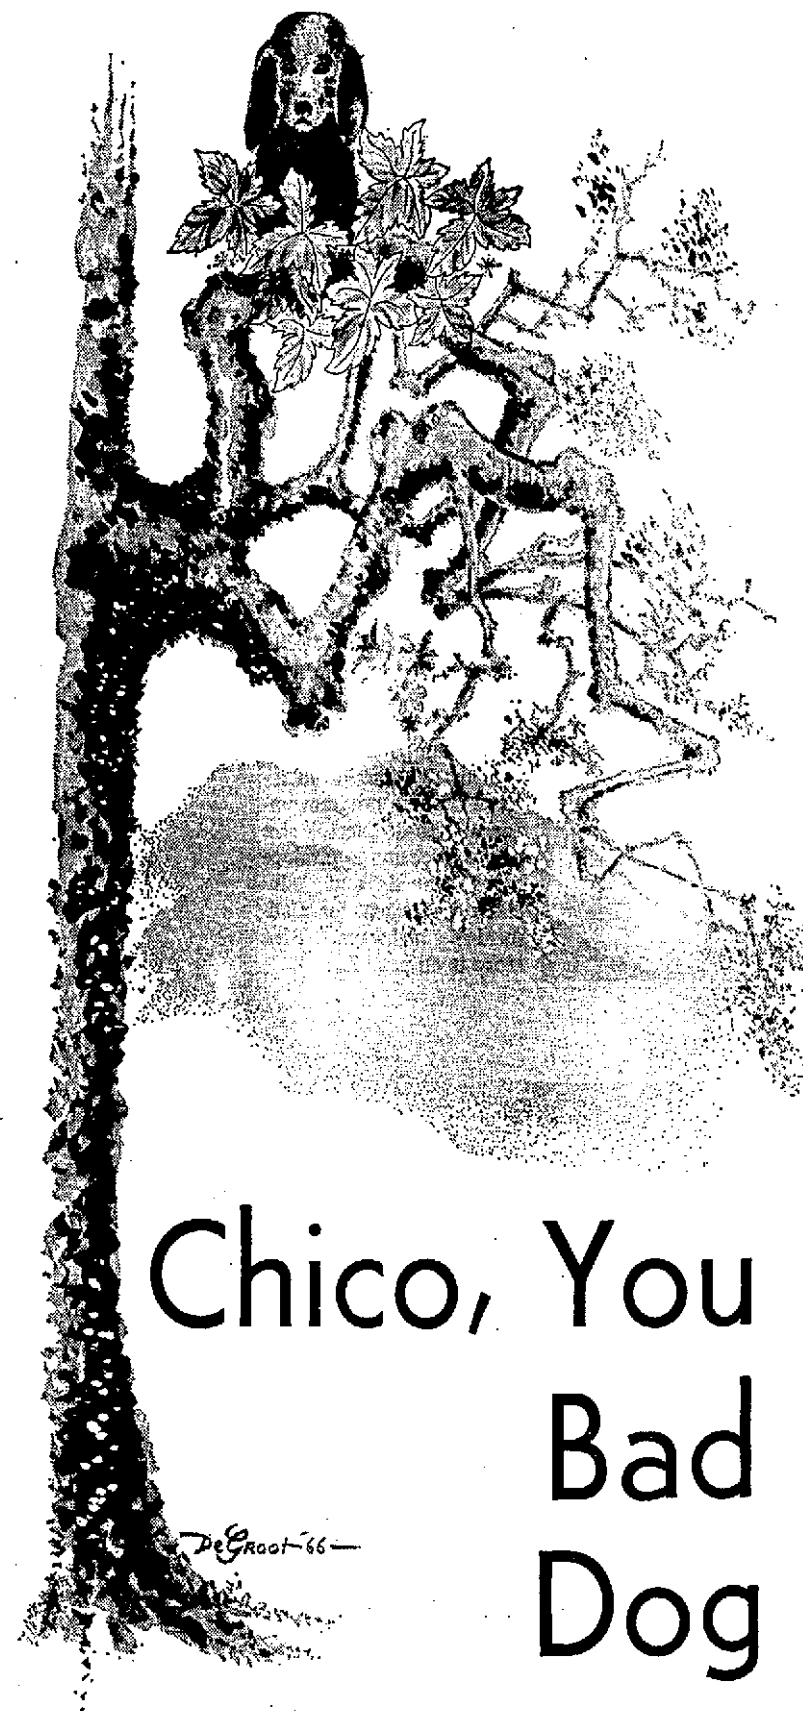

Very quickly we discovered that Chico expected lots of attention. He could sit up almost indefinitely, begging for food, a pat on the head, to be scratched, or just to be looked at.

It was evident Chico had never been allowed to go beyond the kitchen. We had to coax him into the living room. He cowed. Strange family, this. A fellow could get away with almost anything.

Anything? Well, doesn't any dog like to explore his new neighborhood?

A few days later Dave, my husband, found a hole under the back yard fence. The next-door neighbor told us she had found Chico on her front porch the night before. We were proud of Chico for he had executed the means of escape but had returned to his new home. He knew he was to live with us.

Dave filled in the hole under the fence. Chico scooped it out again. Dave nailed a board to the bottom of the fence and refilled. The next morning a hole once again; the board was pulled loose. Dave excavated deeper, used a bigger board, more nails. That fixed Chico. The next morning we found a new hole. Another engineering job. Another hole. Another board. It was the same thing every morning. Before long our fence line became an underground fortress, and Dave's supply of scrap lumber was exhausted.

Some mornings Chico would have already returned from his nightly wanderings. Many other mornings Brian would report tearfully, "Chico's gone again." Breakfasts would grow cold, tempers short, while we hunted Chico.

Like a determined, naughty child, Chico repeatedly defied us. Confronted with the evidence—a new hole under the fence—he would slink into his house. We scolded; we spanked. But Chico still dug out.

One morning as we were sadly eating a cold breakfast—Chico was gone and we had failed to find him—I looked out the dining room window for what must have been the 10th time and saw Chico trotting across the front walk. All three of us rushed outside. "Chico! Come here!"

He turned his head,

"I come to you with only Karate, empty hands. I have no weapons, but should I be forced to defend myself, my principles or my honor, should it be a matter of life or death, of right or wrong, then here are my weapons. Karate, my empty hands."—Credo.

IT WAS A CHILL EVE as, at 7:20, they began to file through the door—a couple of high school girls, a secretary, three college girls, a housewife, two schoolteachers. They were pink-cheeked, their eyes sparkled from the cold. They chattered in small groups for a few minutes and made fun of each other's baggy garb.

Then, at 7:30, a hush fell over the room. They began their weekly karate lesson.

They were part of a growing army of females who are taking up the ancient martial art as an insurance policy, for a lass with a few weeks of training in karate is well capable of handling herself if accosted by a masher, or worse.

While the Japanese martial arts—judo, karate and aikido—are rapidly gaining in popularity in the Western world among young men and not-so-young businessmen who feel the need for exercise that is both interesting and healthful, karate is gaining female adherents at perhaps a faster rate, proportionately, in Southern California. This is because an enterprising group of young men has revolutionized the ancient art, dressed it in a new garb of brightly-lit "studios" instead of dank gymnasiums and wrapped the package in a tinsel of total respectability. Today there are judo and karate studios sprinkled throughout Southern California that have the social respectability of tap dance studios.

ONE SUCH STUDIO is in Los Alamitos, operated by Mike Stone, a transplanted Hawaiian who was one of karate's foremost exponents before he retired from competition recently at the tender age of 24. Another studio is in Westminster, operated by another transplanted Hawaiian, Ron Maury. Most any evening at either studio there will be eager young (and not-so-young) students lined up across the mat-covered floor, taking peculiar stances, flicking arms, fists, elbows, feet in all directions with loud grunts.

"No, no," says the instructor, "let that kick spring out . . . like a left jab of the fist . . . jab, jab, jab with the foot."

Mike Stone, who earned the coveted black belt in two years of instruction (it almost always takes the best of students four or five years), explains to the writer as the young ladies continue their instruction: "Women really have many weapons at their disposal if they need to defend themselves and a bit of karate instruction is of great value. A woman walking down the street can use her pointed-toe shoes to great advantage if she just knows how. That's one of the things we teach her here. Also she has her handbag to use as a weapon of self defense. And her fingernails. Actually, women are pretty well equipped."

"Feet straight, keep the feet straight . . . stretch, stretch, stretch those leg muscles."

The guiding force behind the surge of interest in the Oriental art is a gentleman, also from Hawaii, named Ed Parker. He has developed the Kenpo Karate system, which is an Americanization of the art that was exported by Japan. Parker has, you might say, streamlined karate, for the popular conception of karate is a fellow splitting a wooden plank with his bare hand. Though Parker and his chief followers are fully capable of such tricks, they are quick to point out that such antics are mostly examples of showoffishness and add little value to the sport.

"No girls, don't be petite during karate practice. You should go bam, bam, wham, not ping, ping, ping. Hold the wrist rigid, rigid, rigid."

While Parker's refined version of karate has made him financially successful, it has not made him popular with the Japanese meditationists who treat karate as something of a religion. Parker's version of the ancient art retains a strong philosophical approach but discards much of the formality and ritual of the Japanese style. Parker's kind of karate makes the traditional variety look like slow motion. The new Kenpo style teaches that blows should not be delivered one at a time, with a return to the exaggerated knee-bend stance after each blow, but in rapid-fire combinations of four, five and six rips of the fist, flatted hand, elbow, knee and foot, all delivered so quickly that the victim's normal reaction to a blow gives greater force to the delivery of the next one.

THIS KIND OF KARATE has made the annual international championships, held in the Long Beach Arena, highly successful and immensely popular with casual observers as well as dedicated students. The fourth annual international championships will be held in Long Beach next July.

"Not that way, dear, make the punch go straight out. Don't waste the move . . . punch, punch, whip that punch."

Though Mike Stone is retired from competition—he was a whirlwind success, perhaps the most outstanding success story in the sport that this country has known—he is far from retired from karate. He has a half a hundred youngsters taking lessons each week at his studio. They were sent by their parents. After a few lessons, the parents don't worry about their kids getting beat up on the way home from school.

"Karate is a philosophy as much as it is a sport or a means of self defense," says Stone. "The power that it gives them will be used responsibly." It is widely agreed that karate in the wrong hands is a dangerous weapon. A self-taught karate student in England recently was given a life prison term after he killed a man with a half dozen blows. There was a loud outcry to outlaw karate, but it has since quieted.

With proper understanding of the spirit of karate, with an assimilation of the philosophy, the serious student acquires a genuine passivity, which is fortunate, indeed, for the general public. Also fortunate is the fact that the concentration and dedication required to become expert usually dissuades the hoodlum element.

"Those knees aren't high enough, girls, not nearly high enough. Stretch. Feel those leg muscles start to burn? That's better."

But the young ladies in the 7:30 class at Mike Stone's or Ron Maury's studio are not planning to be lifelong, dedicated students of the martial arts. They are there merely to learn the side heel kick and the elbow chop. During a basic three-month program, which will cost them about $60, they'll learn a swift way to lay low anyone who might accost them on a dark street or while crossing an isolated parking lot.

"Most young women take quickly to the teaching," says Stone. "They have a natural ability to kick and scratch. They start out ahead of men students."

Though karate is an Oriental art, it had its origin in

India some 5000 years ago, according to generally accepted legend. Though there is a high code in the sport today, its early use was totally barbaric. An Indian prince who started the whole thing developed the science of capitalizing on the body's weak points by piercing slaves with long needles.

This form of karate understandably had limited appeal, so there was little development of karate until the 15th century on the island of Okinawa where Japanese overlords forbade natives the use of the sword. So the islanders developed an ingenious self-defense art developed in which the forearm replaced the shaft of the sword. Various blocks with the arm were the foil and the fingers were substituted as the sword's tip. This version of the unarmed war game was later blended with ideals imported from China and Korea and adopted by the Japanese. Until recent years it was retained almost exclusively by the Japanese but today karate is gaining followings all over the world.

THE COMBINATIONS OF BLOWS are infinitely various. Knifehands, the blow used in splitting a block or a brick, is the best known. But there are diabolical blows such as the sokuto, used to dislocate knee caps. The myerigi is a kick that can dislocate almost anything. The advanced karate men sometimes kick their own hats off just for practice. Advanced students can leap so high that they might be good candidates for our Olympic team as track-and-field high jumpers. After they cleared the bar they could wipe out the opposition on the way down.

Another nifty blow is the dragon's head fist to the opponent's throat, wherein the blow is delivered with clenched fist but the toughened middle knuckle protruding. This one ends most fights.

But these are blows that would be delivered only in genuine self defense and when karate is practiced as a sport all blows are stopped barely short of landing and points are declared by judges, who, at the flick of a wrist, can tell how effective the maneuver would have been had the fight been for real.

'I Had a Dream the Other Night That Someone Broke Into Our House...'

"All right girls, one more exercise. Stand on one foot with your eyes closed for three minutes." (One girl, in the back row, giggles: "I can't even stand on two feet with my eyes closed.")

"There are a couple of girls in this class who have a definite talent for karate," says Ron Maury in a whisper as the lasses teeter from one foot to the other, eyes tightly closed. "But it doesn't matter which gender, it doesn't matter how heavy or how slight and age isn't really an important factor either; anyone can achieve a surprisingly high degree of proficiency in Kenpo karate. The children gain an early respect for physical proficiency and they learn self restraint and self control."

As the class ends the mother of one of the students offers: "I had a dream the other night that someone broke into the house. I whispered to my husband not to move and I yelled for my daughter."

A young lady student, petite, with tall hairdo, pulled a coat over her shoulders and headed for the door, remarking "I've had six months of instruction now and sometimes I wonder if it wouldn't be fun to meet up with a masher."

SGT. ROBERT DAVENPORT WAS finishing a lecture at the California Highway Patrol Academy in Sacramento on the importance of interviewing witnesses when suddenly the classroom door burst open and a grotesque figure raced toward the lectern and fired three shots at Sgt. Davenport from a revolver at point blank range. The intruder turned and ran from the room. The whole incident happened in a few seconds.

After the initial shock the class of highway patrol cadets realized it was staged and laughed it off as a classroom tension breaker. If the students dismissed the incident entirely, they were in trouble the next day. Sgt. Davenport, in a written examination, required the students to give a detailed description of the man, the clothing he wore, the caliber of weapon he carried and how many shots he fired.

Why the shock treatment?

"To make them think and to let them see how unreliable some eye witnesses are — in this case themselves," explained Sgt. Davenport.

This is part of the new method of training used to prepare highway patrol cadets to face the real thing when they graduate from California's cop college. By 1970, California will graduate 3,000 cadets from the academy to join frontline forces in the battle to slow down the most mobile society in the world—California's.

Speed, statistics reveal, is the most dominant cause of traffic accidents and led to 841 California traffic deaths last year.

SINCE THE CALIFORNIA legislature ordered in 1965 that the Highway Patrol be doubled in size, 551 cadets have graduated from the academy to California's highways.

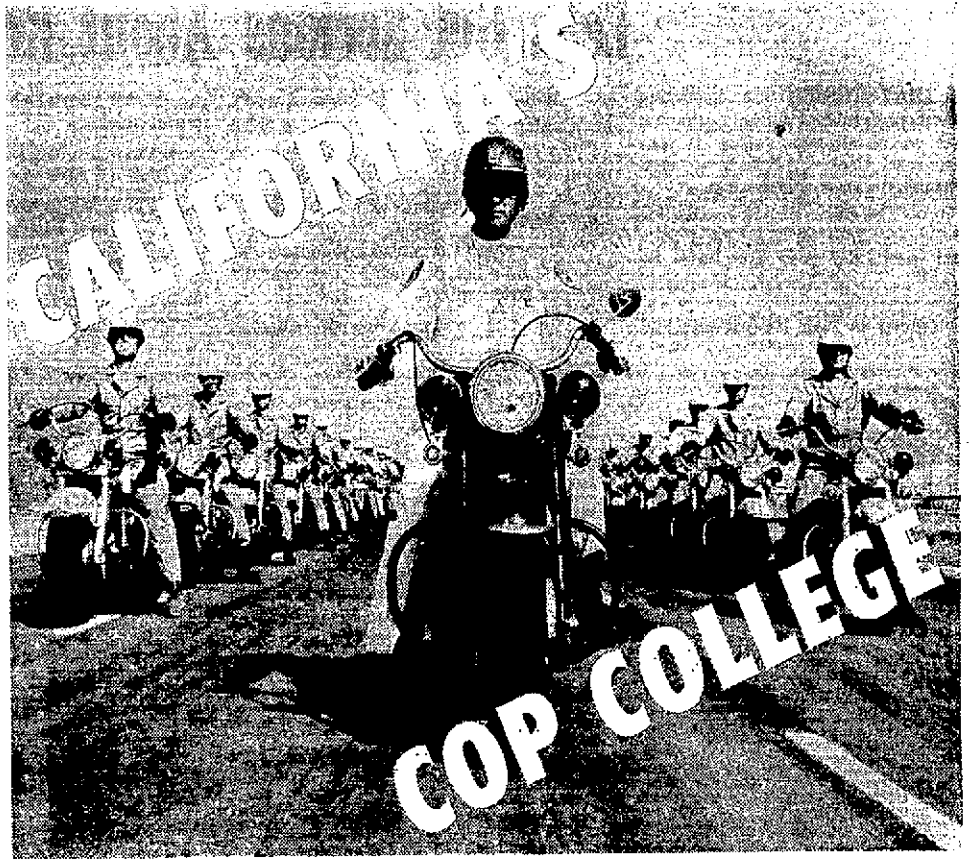

The increase in patrol manpower is being financed by a $1 additional fee in vehicle registration fees.

Added to the cost of the increase in manpower is the additional expense of training the new officers. Today, a peace officer must be an educated cop. Decisions of the United States Supreme Court in relation to police dealings in search and seizure, interrogation of suspects and obtaining criminal confessions, have drastically altered the requirements of police work.

The California Highway Patrol Academy, located in a cluster of barrack-like buildings on the southern edge of Sacramento, is turning out that new breed of educated policemen. Cadets are taking an accelerated training course — equal to two years of college police science work — in 16 weeks.

At the academy, concurrent classes of 120 men each are undergoing what appears to be a cross between a military boot camp and a training session for a pro-football team.

THE COURSE IS NOT all book learning. Cadets must master weapons and motorcycles and learn all over again how to drive an automobile. In addition, they undergo a rugged physical training during cadet life. Training is done on a 10-hour, seven-day-a-week schedule.

The cadets are an unusual lot; it's not unusual to see a bald or graying head among them. They are being molded into our state's elite patrol corps.

The cadets for the new program are thoroughly screened before being accepted to the academy. They take written examinations, physicals and oral interviews. Because of this strenuous background information and high qualification standards less than four per cent fail to graduate.

The cadets themselves are an unusual lot. The average cadet is 26 years old, six feet tall, 183 pounds, is married with one or two children and has at least two years of college. A bald or graying head is not unusual among the cadets.

Forty per cent have prior law enforcement experience, mostly on small, low-paying police departments. However, some have given up sergeant ratings and higher pay to join the highway patrol.

The starting salary of a cadet is the same as a traffic officer, $500 a month. There are four pay hikes up to $717 before he becomes a sergeant. Top ranking officer in the Highway Patrol is supervising inspector at $1,515 a month.

An officer gets $3.19 more per day for riding a motorcycle, but must spend a year in the field as a patrolman in a radio car and return to the academy for another 32 hours of training before he can qualify as a motor officer.

Because of their age most of the cadets are usually out of physical condition when they arrive at the academy. When the cadets leave they must have mastered muscle-aching calisthenics and a tough obstacle course. They must be able to run the mile in less than 8 minutes and the 220 yard dash in 33 seconds.

Cadets spend 59 hours in weapons training, 32 hours in learning to ride a motorcycle and 16 hours learning to drive a radio car in pursuit. The cadets spend 900 hours in the classroom, most of which are devoted to mastering the legal and clerical aspects of their work in policing California's thousands of miles of roads. Class time takes up 56 hours weekly.

"The curriculum for cadet training is extended to develop graduates who can handle the complex enforcement of California's laws governing highways," explained Inspector R. C. Blossom, who commands the academy. "As part of the training, the cadet is placed in a problem solving situation which requires him to apply his academic knowledge as he will have to do when the real thing faces him in the field."

ROBERT D. WILTSE of Garden Grove, who graduated from the academy Dec. 30, is typical of the cadets who are selected by the California Highway Patrol. Although the 27-year-old patrolman had no prior police experience, he is gung-ho over his new assignment.

"I learned about the academy and the highway patrol opportunities through a friend. I was interested in police work, but dislike the element of people a policeman usually deals with in general police work. In the highway patrol I think you meet a better class of people," the young officer said.

Wiltse put four years in the Coast Guard and then worked as a telephone repairman and a plumber's apprentice before taking the examination for the academy.

Thorough instruction in courtroom procedure is part of intense training program under way at State Highway Patrol college. CHP is being doubled in size, turning out "the educated cop."

Let's Get Serious About Resolutions

NOW THAT THINGS are beginning to settle back toward normal again, and now that you've already broken all your New Year resolutions, it's time to get serious about this turn-a-new-leaf business.

You probably didn't pay any attention to all those stories about New Year resolutions last week, did you? Too busy. So here's my list, now that you've got time to listen:

1. I'm going to take the scissors and just put them away in a drawer so I won't be tempted during January clearance sales . . . no, on third thought I firmly resolve to place all my charge account cards in the small compartment of my purse and zip the zipper tightly.

2. I'm going to organize my housework. If I don't do a lick of work . . . at least it's going to be organized.

3. I'm going to stop taking coffee breaks

. . . even if I have to buy a brand that's not re-heat-able.

4. I'm going to go for a walk every day . . . even if I have to carry that stupid dog.

5. I'm going to see my dentist twice a year . . . even if I have to take up golf.

6. I'm going to limit my calls to 5 minutes . . . even if I have to hang up in the middle of a sentence and call again.

7. I'm going to stop trying to hide those ten pounds. . . I'm going to find them, face them and lose them.

8. I'm going to read one book a month . . . even if I've already seen the movie.

9. I'm going to be sweet, smiling and cheerful . . . even if I have to take a dramatic course to do it.

10. And I'm going to work out a budget . . . even if it never balances. Well if President Johnson can do it, so can I!

A Home Project

A LEISURE-TIME activity that produces clever, attractive home decorations is the current product of a company that has begun manufacture of primitives-on-wood kits for the hobbyist.

The finished product is an attractive array of wall hangings.

These kits are made up of two to four design-stamped pine boards, a selection of paints in authentic early American earth colors, accompanied by paint brush, antiquing fluid, sandpaper, hangers, step-by-step instructions as well as a color photograph of the finished product.

Because of the nature of the item, mistakes are impossible and every piece becomes an original. Museum-adapted subjects on working clocks, sconces, weathervanes and plaques are the current kit offerings and all items are also offered completed, in an individual gift box. Available in leading department stores throughout the country, the kits retail from $13.95 to $29.95.

IN SPITE OF TRAFFIC fatality rates you still cannot officially get a James Bond-type license to kill at California Department of Motor Vehicles. But this month the state will sell 40 other kinds of licenses plus that little sticker for '67 that must be pasted on the corner of the auto plate.

In recent years the variety of license plates for Californians has been growing, but there's one big change that has taken effect in many states that's still just in the talking stages in this state.

Sixty-two legislators—more than half the 120-man Legislature—last year co-authored a bill which would have made available personalized license plates to any autoist who wanted to pay special fees totalling some $15.

Under the measure, you could reserve such license numbers as EDMUND, RONALD OR UR SEXY—any combination of six letters and-or numerals. A Senate committee killed the bill after it was opposed by California Highway Patrol. However, the proposal is expected to be revived in 1967.

Though there is objection to such a plan from law enforcement agencies who claim the special plates would make their job of tracing vehicles more difficult, a recent nationwide survey of states using personalized plates indicates the program is a success.

It's been a fine source of additional revenue, in the opinion of most states' officials.

Too, it has become a method for the ordinary citizen to obtain a status symbol that hitherto was afforded only to politicians or close friends or relatives of important politicians.

IF THE LEGISLATION is passed, it's likely that the effective date would be in the autumn of 1967, giving motorists ample time to file applications for custom-made plates to be delivered a year from now.

Again presuming that the law is passed, only those ordering custom plates—and paying the larger license fee—would be issued new metal plates next year, for the next general issue of new plates is not scheduled until 1972 or '73. Until then, motorists get only yearly paste-on tabs.

Meanwhile, there are a good many special plates issued or in use.

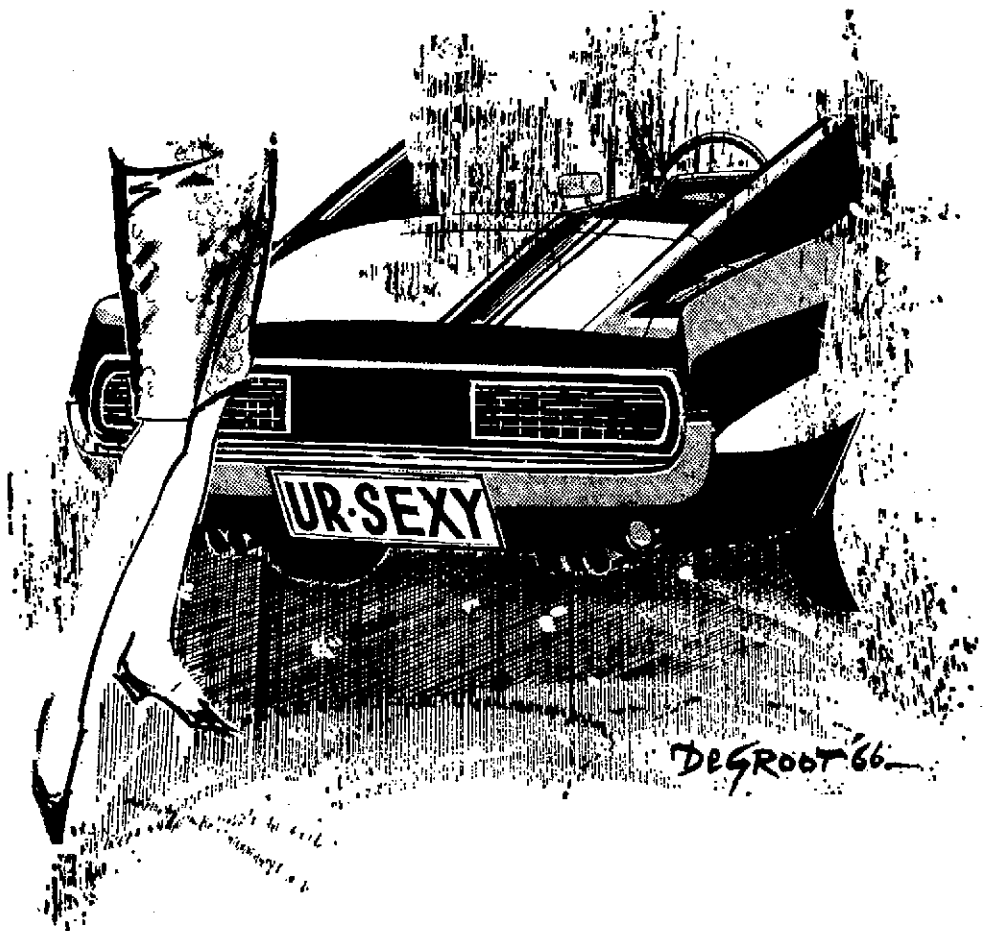

The plate "S7" has been assigned to Sen. George Miller, D-Contra Costa, the legislator who presided over the committee which killed the "personalized plates" bill for ordinary citizens.

Miller and other legislators are assigned special plates which pinpoint their districts. "533" is the number on the car of State Sen. Joseph Kennick, D-Long Beach. Sen. George Deukmejian, R-Long Beach, has "537."

Similar VIP plates go to Congressmen, the consular corps from foreign nations and others. California taxpayers pick up the tab for the bulk of the handling costs.

Radio hams who have been assigned call letters by the Federal Communications Commission can obtain special plates with their radio call letters as the license number. They apply for the call-letter plate and pay a special $3 handling fee.

For a similar $3 special handling fee, press photographers also are entitled to special plates with "PP" designation.

California's Numbers Game

—License Plates

If your car is old enough, a $25 fee will give you a permanent antique-car license plate. Plates for the "horseless carriage" set are available for vehicles manufactured prior to 1923.

Certain disabled veterans, including paraplegics, are entitled to fee-exempt VET-prefix plates. Other special plates are available to any disabled person, entitling them to special parking privileges.

Some resourceful Californians still win the prefixes they want without becoming politicians, a foreign diplomat, a ham radio operator, a press photographer or an antique-car owner.

William K. Sheringan of Los Angeles wanted to have the No. 1 plate in the state when the last general DMV issue of plates occurred in 1963.

To inquiries, DMV makes public how prefixes have been assigned statewide. Sheringan journeyed to distant Alturas near the Oregon line. He lined up at 3 a.m. the morning plates were to go on sale, and wound up with the number AAA000.

A group of members of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, known as LDS, also determined on what day LDS prefixes were likely to be handed out. They drove up to the DMV office in Sacramento in time to apply for most of the LDS-numbered plates. Executives of the Los Angeles professional football team have plates beginning RAM.

In 1956, radio-television networks pressured the state to reserve for them all the CBS, NBC and ABC sequences. Then-Gov. Goodwin Knight refused. And since then, DMV has stuck to its no-reservations policy for California autoists, though often business concerns are told when and where certain-lettered plates will be available to the general public.

Six states, including New York and Texas, make available personalized plates to autoists who want certain numbers.

THE PERSONALIZED PLATE plan has had few hitches in most states, according to Richard Lemos. Lemos is a legislative consultant who recently researched the question.

However, Lemos conceded that in Texas the number of applications for special plates hadn't justified the cost of the program.

"I guess all the Texans care about is having the word Texas on the plate," says Lemos.

But for Californians, a special plate is a prestige symbol. Some 16,000 radio operators have taken out "ham" plates. The "PP" designation for press photographer is on 1300 vehicles. More than three thousand older vehicles are licensed as horseless carriages in California.

"I CAN'T STAND these vines another minute!" cried Claribel Dennis, and seizing the kitchen cleaver she whacked and slashed until the bougainvillea that clambered over her patio lay in a scarlet heap on the ground. "I felt all walled-in," she told her neighbor. "I could hardly breathe." Mrs. Dennis suffers from pnigerophobia.

A charming hostess at her ocean-view home smilingly said good-bye to departing guests, then hastened to scour the ashtrays, cups, glasses, even the doorknobs the guests had touched. Strange behavior? Not for a victim of rypophobia or misophobia—fear of contamination.

You and I—everyone, psychologists tell us—can claim at least one MMA. This means the presence of some form of phobia.

Everyone, Psychologists Say, Can Claim at Least One MMA

OF THEM all, perhaps the most commonly known is claustrophobia, fear of closed places. Some people walk endless stairs to avoid the closed-in feeling of an elevator. Others can't bear to draw the drapes at night.

Switching to the opposite agorophobia is the fear of open spaces. It isn't everyone who sings of "a home where the buffalo roam..."

Do you fear to be alone? Dislike solitude? You are afflicted with eremophobia. Or monophobia. Or autophobia. Take your pick, or choose the easiest spelling.

Are you afraid of thunder-and-lightning storms? It is pathetic to see a seemingly well-balanced adult turn into a cringing, helpless child at the clap of thunder. Here, again, there is a choice of phobia applications: keraunophobia, ceruonophobia, astrophobia,

By Martha B. Lusk

tonitrophobia. Any one is apropos. History carries a story of the great Caesar Augustus becoming convulsed at the sound of thunder and the flash of lightning.

If you fear work, you have ergophobia or ponophobia. Which does the boss call it? Probably neither.

Fear of running water means you have potamophobia, while bathophobia is fear of deep water; and thalassophobia is fear of the sea. There's a difference there somewhere.

IF YOU fear to be in crowds, you have demophobia, while anthropophobia is the term if you fear people in general. So now you know what ails hermits.

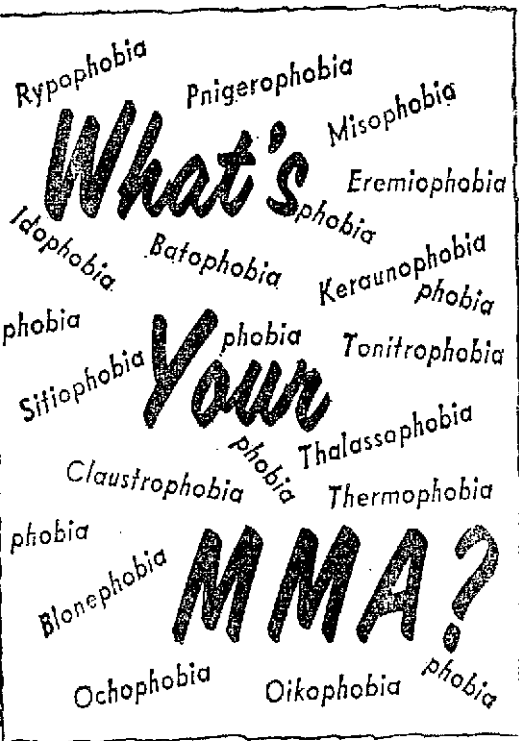

Maybe you find yourself avoiding children. Look out—pediophobia could be creeping up on you!

Does rain give you shudders? You're a victim of ombrophobia. Some folks apply a simple, old-fashioned term, "the blues."

Many persons, without realizing it, are victims of astraphobia, fear of airplanes. Some of the top movie actors and actresses refuse to fly for any reason.

Acrophobia is fear of high places, and this embraces everything from a step-ladder to a mountain.

You're not likely to frequent a zoo if you're afraid of animals. You have zoo-phobia, as many before you had. Tycho Brahe, the Danish astronomer who contributed so much to science through the exactness of his observations, changed color and his legs shook under him at the mere sight of a rabbit. And Dr. Frank Crane, the noted American essayist, was never able to rid himself of a fear of horses.

MANY housewives can't pluck a chicken because they have pteronophobia, a fear of feathers. Nor can they enjoy the ownership of a precious parakeet or the song of a canary in the home.

More than a few housewives have a perfect alibi for not sewing buttons on their husbands' shirts—an affliction known as blonophobia, a fear of needles. If a mother doesn't make her own clothes or the children's, she may have aichmophobia, a fear of scissors and pointed objects.

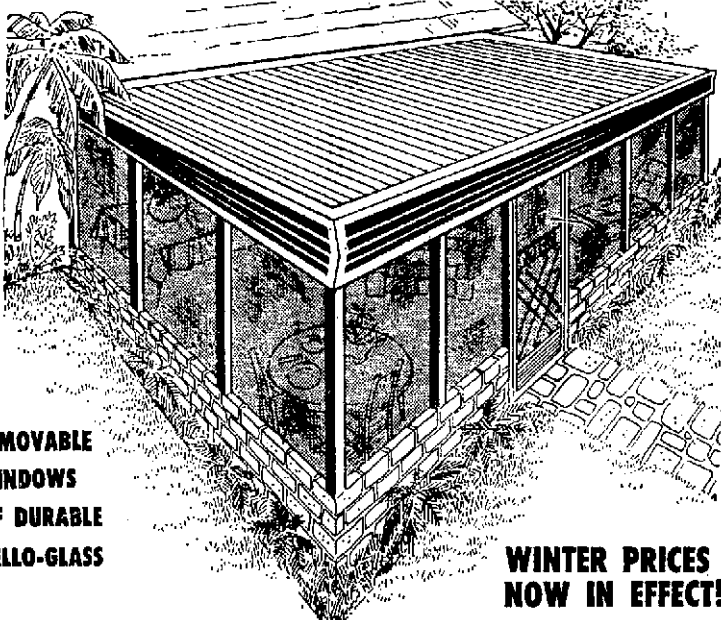

Pyrophobia is no discriminator—everybody is afraid of fire.

The Bells Ring Out

By

Aubrey B. Haines

IT STANDS tall in the saddle of the rich valley, a tower of percussion that rings out a melody of beauty. It is the 48-bell carillon at the University of California campus at Riverside, the only fully operative carillon in Southern California.

Clear and melodious the notes of favored compositions ring out across the city.

A carillon consists of at least 23 cast bells, arranged chromatically and tuned to result in an excellent harmony. Mere chimes cannot qualify for the title carillon, since they are diatonic and preclude the harmonies tuned into a fine carillon bell at time of casting.

Some 2,000 years ago Chinese musicians fell upon the idea of turning bells into a musical instrument. They played on matched sets of small bells, using a hammer.

NOT UNTIL after the 15th century was a genuine carillon constructed.

In Holland, Belgium, and parts of France hung watchtowers were built where sentinels sat. When the people were called to arms, warned of national emergencies or floods, or when peace was proclaimed, the sentinels rang the bells. Finally the Dutch grew tired of the monstrous bell-ringing and began tuning their bells to the notes of the scale. In this manner the carillon came into being.

At first the bells had little range, and methods of playing them differed. Nevertheless, they had pedal keyboards, and as time went on, their size and importance rapidly increased. Towns and cities became rivals in trying to provide the best carillon. The installa-

Chico, You Bad Dog

looked at us, then darted into the street, into the path of an approaching car. Brakes screeched. The car swerved. A wheel sideswiped Chico and knocked him clear. He yelped and ran. But he ran away from us.

Several blocks away we finally found him, frightened and limping.

This incident was the turning point. He recovered with no ill effects and much less desire to dig out of the yard. After this, we noticed a difference . . . subtle at first, then more pronounced. We realized that finally he had truly accepted us.

Gradually we discovered many other things about Chico. For instance, he loved music. He was never content to stay in the house long unless the stereo was on.

During vacation we took Chico with us to the mountains. He went fishing with Brian, trekked over the mountains with us, and perhaps for the first time in his life was content to sleep indoors at night. One day we left him on a screened-in porch while we were gone for several hours. When we returned, Chico met us outdoors, Wagging his tail, he looked at us as if to say, "I got tired of waiting." Getting out wasn't much of a feat for a canine Houdini; he had simply pulled loose a little strip of molding on the screen door.

Later in the summer, we left Chico in a boarding kennel for a weekend. From this we had one minor repercussion. Maybe it seemed logical to him, the idea that what was good enough in a kennel was good enough in the house. He substituted a bookcase for a tree! His punishment hurt him deeply.

Chico still had a surprise for us.

It had been almost a year since we got him. Early one afternoon I returned home, parked the car and got out. Chico usually met me at the gate, but this time I didn't hear the tinkling of his collar tags. I walked closer, leaned over the fence. Still no sight of Chico. An old, unforgotten pattern came to mind. I opened the gate. Where had he dug out? I glanced up.

There, at the back of the yard, high up in the fork of an elm tree, sat Chico.

A dog in a tree?

Chico jumped down, ran to me, then sat up to be scratched. He didn't seem to realize the odd picture he'd just made. How did he get up there?

A few days later we found out. When we heard Chico barking furiously we rushed to the window. He was racing back and forth across the yard, quarreling with a strange dog in the alley. Suddenly Chico dashed toward the elm tree. One giant leap and he was up.

The tree is a perfect vantage point from which to survey his domain. He even takes an occasional nap while up there.

I doubt if he understands what we're saying, but he does look a little chagrined when we teasingly call him "kitty cat." Even though it can be quite a shock to visitors, we've become accustomed to the sight of our tree-climbing beagle.

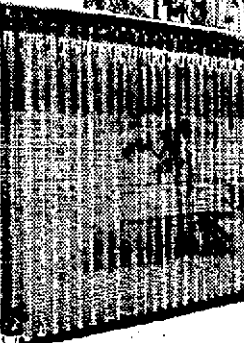

In fact, we've adjusted to a number of things concerning Chico, such as well-worn paths in the lawn . . . a few ruined plants that just happened to be in bone burying sites . . . baying at the moon . . . scratches on the back door. In spite of the trouble, a few tears, and some laughs, he has given us an abundance of love and companionship.

And we're inclined to believe Chico isn't through yet. He could be holding back one more surprise. As to what it might be, we wouldn't dare guess.

CARPETS & DRAPERIES
1879 Freeman Ave., Signal Hill GE 4-0901

By Ellen Krec

A HOUSE FOR two seasons — "in" and "out" season.

The Henry L. Shamburgs live near their huge pool-patio during the out season, and in a brightly formal home during the inside season.

When the Shamburgs purchased the Golden Estates model home in Rossmore more than seven years ago, they knew this would be "the" home. Even though career transfers have become part of the scheme of things for the employed couple, each would rather commute than change home base.

The contemporary, sand stucco with matching rock roof, house has a red brick fireplace and matching wall lining the entrance.

With landscape plans by William Lamoreaux, Shamburg decided to do the planting personally—as finances and time would allow. To date the landscape includes a long line of flowering pear trees the full length of the home; a T-shaped drive blunted on one end by a palm tree in a V-shaped planter, and a mound, covered with natal plum, bird of paradise, hibiscus and mystery gardenia. The mound lends character to an otherwise flat surface.

A secluded entrance opens on to a narrow foyer. To separate the living room from the direct opening, the Shamburgs added a gold Moorish-design screen above the fixed, white brick banquette. The end of the banquette forms a table for a fern-filled statue.

A change of texture was used on the walls instead of color when the Shamburgs antiqued the paneled wall to match the all-white plaster.

One long wall contains the white brick fireplace and irregularly shaped windows. The windows outline an indoor planter and also allow shafts of light to penetrate unexpected places. Wall windows have double draperies in alabaster silk and synthetic fabric. The one draperies allows light and the other insures complete privacy.

The bronze carpet in flagstone design became the color cue for twin sofas of olive cut-velvet. A serene marine painting dominates the wall, and a baroque gold coffee table, marbelized with a touch of royal blue, provides the same accent of color used on the quilted pouffe and the velvet banquette cushions.

A piano is illuminated by a wall sconce of white metal hydrangeas with bronze stems. Fifteen mirrored squares were mounted, then framed in ornate gold.

The chain lamp over the coffee table ties the colors together in blocks of the accent shades alternating with white silk panels.

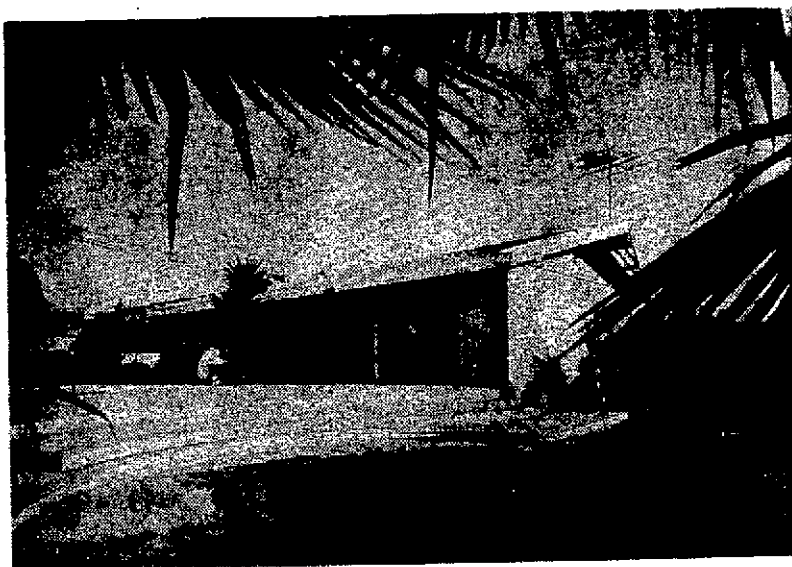

Helen Kerns and Mrs. Shamburg shared the responsibility for the decorating and Mrs. Shamburg says: "I depended on the decorator to say 'no' when she felt it wasn't right, and she did!"

The dining room is separated from the living room by one of the sofas. The dining area is simply formal and secluded from the kitchen by the birch cabinet divider although Mrs. Shamburg likes an open feeling when she is in the kitchen.

A circular pedestal table is burlled pecan and the matching caneback chairs have cinnamon and gold striped cushions. A Spanish chest serves as a buffet with a contemporary version of a William and Mary mirror on the wall. A tall crystal and gold chandelier was placed on the end of the chest to balance the mirror. The chandelier and the table accessories are a mixture of gold with crystal.

The cabinet-lined kitchen is the U-shaped hub between the dining room and the family room. One large window over the sink allows a perfect view of the patio. The same black-and-white block vinyl was used in the kitchen, family room and foyer.

A striped area rug gives warmth and color to the family room with two button-back chairs in gold velvet and a white vinyl sofa providing adequate seating. This could be considered the "Trophy Room," since the wall-hung shelves contain Shamburg's duplicate bridge trophies. Convenient marble-topped tables for ash trays and television complete the livable room.

The same antique white paneling leads from the foyer into the family room, with the ceiling dropped to give a break in an otherwise square room.

One bedroom serves as a large storage area; another, in cotton candy pink, is for 12-year-old Stephanie. All-white provincial furniture includes a chest, desk and headboard with matching bonnet. Two-length pink draperies were used with window length on one wall and floor-length on the other. Both share the same pink and soft chocolate plaid valance.

The master bedroom in the front of the home looks out on a curved driveway. Plisse shades are used for privacy.

White carpeting covers the floor of the bedroom and adjoining bath. The same Medici gold-foil wall-paper was used to back the bed and on the dressing room wall and door. The open-paneled headboard is the same Italian provincial as the matching commodes and double chest. A blue and green quilted bedspread allows the only vivid accent color.

For the "out" season the rear yard provides a garden, a concrete patio large enough for several dining units, separate space for a game of table tennis and a pool curving around a corner of the home to utilize an otherwise wasted space.

Preventing a monotonous look to the large space, some of the concrete was poured in circles separated by aggregate with that material used to form pool

A triple yucca frames the window with planters filled with podocarpus, bamboo and aralia to outline the patio perimeter. An up-and-down effect continues with a raised palm-and-cactus garden in the lower pool section.

COFFEE CAKE

PINEAPPLE WIKI WIKI

- 1/4 cup butter
- 1/2 cup brown sugar (packed)
- 2 tbsps. dark corn syrup
- 1/4 cup sliced almonds
- 7 canned pineapple slices
- 7 maraschino cherries
- 1 package or cake yeast, active, dry or compressed
- 7 cups warm water
- 1/4 cup sugar
- 1 tsp salt
- 3/4 tps. grated lemon peel
- 1/4 tsp. cinnamon (optional)
- 2 eggs.
- 2 1/4 cups sifted flour
- 1/4 cup soft shortening...

Melt butter in deep 9-inch round layer cake pan. Sprinkle with brown sugar; add syrup and almonds. Heat gently until sugar dissolves. Remove from heat and smooth out mixture. Arrange drained pineapple slices in syrup; center each with well drained cherry; set aside. Soften yeast in warm water in warm bowl. Add sugar, salt, lemon peel, cinnamon, eggs and half of flour. Beat with electric mixer until smooth. Add remaining flour and shortening; beat 3 or 4 minutes. Scrape down beaters and bowl. Spoon batter carefully in small mounds over pan coating. Cover; let rise in warm place about 45 minutes or until dough is double in size and comes to top of pan. Place on baking sheet. Bake in moderately hot oven (375 degrees F.) 30 to 35 minutes or until baked. Let stand in pan 5 minutes, then turn out, upside down, on serving plate. Serve warm. Makes 1 (9-inch) coffee cake.

PINEAPPLE PARADISE NUT BREAD

- Butter for pan coat
- 1 cup chopped walnuts
- Sugar for pan coat
- 1/2 cup butter

Blend butter and lemon peel until soft. Gradually beat in sugar until fluffy. Beat in egg. Resift flour with baking powder, soda and salt. Combine with first mixture alternately with undrained pineapple and milk, blending after each addition. Stir in remaining walnuts. Spoon batter into prepared pan. Let stand 15 minutes. Bake in moderate oven (350 degrees F.) 50 minutes or until bread tests done in center. Let stand in pan 10 minutes, then turn out and cool on rack. Makes 1 (10-inch) loaf.

Eye Ill From Fiberglass

By Ben Zinser

Southland Magazine Medical Science Editor

GLASS-FIBER DUST in the air may cause eye inflammation, reports an Australian health officer.

Dr. E. O. Longley of Sydney describes the case of the 48-year-old woman who handled fiberglass-insulated cable in a factory that makes electrical appliances. The patient suffered eye irritation from time to time and finally developed an abscess of the cornea, the transparent membrane on the front surface of the eyeball.

Four other employees in the same department wore eyeglasses and were not affected, although all had experienced skin irritation at times.

Dr. Longley, reporting in Archives of Environmental Health, says that protective goggles should be worn if an employee handling fiberglass develops eye soreness.

NEW OCCUPATIONAL HAZARD: palpbeater's palsy.

Dr. N. K. Coni of Cambridge Military Hospital in England tells of two victims in a report in British Medical Journal.

Each was a young man who had transient palsy in the right arm. Cause: sudden transmission of considerable weight to the shoulder while helping to carry a coffin.

One of the patients was injured while rehearsing for a military funeral. The other injured his arm at a military funeral.

Victims had weakness and "pins and needles" sensation in the right arm. Recovery began three weeks after injury and was virtually complete after three months.

EXTREMIST organizations are built on the foundation of "shared resentment," says a famed psychiatrist, Dr. Joost A. M. Meerloo of New York School of Psychiatry.

Many of the people in these groups, he says, have been refused sympathy and warmth in childhood. As a consequence they determine not to allow themselves to receive sympathy any more.

Then along come certain social groups on the lookout for "fellow outcasts and outsiders." These groups, he says, offer these persons "a tiny bit" of reciprocal sympathy in order to better discharge their mutual hatreds.

Says Dr. Meerloo in a report in Archives of General Psychiatry.

"Some S. S. officers I investigated at the end of World War II had behaved outwardly like the vicious criminal persecutors and haters they were. Yet among themselves they showed the utmost sympathy for each other."

BATTERED BABIES—those beaten, starved or otherwise mistreated—have little chance of growing up normally, a new study indicates.

"Only a few give promise of becoming self-sufficient adults," says Dr. Grace S. Gregg, assistant professor of clinical medicine at University of Pittsburgh.

The study involved 20 battered babies, evaluated long after their initial trauma. Only two are normal. At least five will probably become public charges because of mental retardation or serious emotional disturbances, according to Medical World News.

NEW RESEARCH confirms earlier studies attesting to the value of a new drug, propranolol (Inderal), in the treatment of angina pectoris (chest pain associated with heart disease). The drug reduces frequency of anginal pain and cuts down on consumption of nitroglycerin medication.

Phobias

his bedroom, he could have achluophobia, a fear of darkness. And children don't have a monopoly on this affliction—many adults are afraid of darkness.

Napoleon Bonaparte, renowned warrior and emperor, had an unconquerable weakness—a fear of cats. Known as ailourophobia, it is almost as common as claustrophobia. Kaiser Wilhelm was so afraid of cats he was petrified when one came near him. William Shakespeare had a horror of meeting a cat and went to great lengths to avoid it. Then there are:

alophobia, fear of pain arachnophobia, fear of spiders anthophobia, fear of flowers batophobia, fear of falling objects dromophobia, fear of crossing the street elektrophobia, fear of electricity eisoptrophobia, fear of mirrors hematophobia, fear of blood ideophobia, fear of thought mechanophobia, fear of any kind of machinery ochophobia, fear of vehicles oikophobia, fear of home siderodrophobia, fear of railway trains sitiophobia, fear of drinking thermophobia, fear of heat

But, if one has nosophobia, he is truly afflicted: he fears he has all the diseases ever known about. And if he fears he is about to develop a phobia of some kind, he already has phobophobia.

WE ARE told that phobia is fear—call it a sort of subconscious fear, if you like—and that it is all around us in many forms. No one is immune. We're told, too, that fear is a product of the unknown, that it thrives on uncertainty.

To determine the cause of certain fear-obsessions is the business of psychologists. Recognizing the universality of fear is at least a beginning of freedom from fear, and facing up to reality is the greatest step toward conquering fear.

Most fears are acquired during childhood, and some of these impressions are never eradicated.

Dr. Lester L. Goldman, author of Freedom From Fear, says that fears are generated, compounded and multiplied when given no restrictions; and that recognizing cause of initial fear and keeping it in proper proportion is one of the techniques for finding freedom from fear. He says that fear's greatest potency lies in being hidden—that in combat fear we must replace dishonesty with frankness, ignorance with education, and impatience with understanding.

WHICH, OF course, puts the responsibility of doing something about our phobias right in our own laps. There first must be a desire to be rid of fear. Isn't that a phrase from the Alcoholic Anonymous creed?

Dr. William Terhune, of New Canaan, Conn., says a doctor's task in treating neurotic persons is to induce patients to place themselves in the very situations they fear, deliberately exposing one's self to closed places, to storms or fires or open places, to a hopping rabbit, to a cat with an arched back.

So it is possible, psychologists assure us, to apply a "psychologic re-education" to oneself.

'Forgotten' Poet Recalled

THE UNKNOWN EDWIN MARKHAM: HIS MYSTERY AND ITS SIGNIFICANCE, by Louis Filler. Antioch Press, $6.

EDWIN MARKHAM, remembered (chiefly by anthologists) for his poem "The Man With the Hoe," was perpetually A Man With A Cause. He wrote muckraking works long since forgotten; the Utopian communist (and this was a communist with a small "c") Thomas Lake Harris greatly influenced him.

When Maxim Gorky came to the United States in 1906 with a woman not his wife, and a hue and cry ensued to keep him out, Markham was the only litterateur of note to speak up for the Russian. Mark Twain and William Dean Howells, be it noted, begged off, and proved their "liberalism" less than consistent.

Markham was a friend of Eugene Debs and spoke out against unbearable labor conditions.

Markham as poet was somewhat less than great, to put it kindly. Yet no American poet, in his lifetime, received the adulation showered on Markham.

His birthday celebration in 1919, Filler writes, "took on the proportions of a national jubilee." When he became 80 in 1932, his adulators packed Carnegie Hall, and world celebrities attended. And now, few remember Markham, who once filled the lecture halls of the nation.

He was a strange contradiction, vain, a poseur, given to exaggerations, hungry for money even when he had it in abundance. But, Filler insists and proves, he was a dreamer and a seeker for brotherhood, idolized for his poetry when it reeked of corn, but unable to publish such of his work that was socially indignant.

What Filler regards as Markham's best work, "Ballad of a Gallows-Bird," appeared once and was never reprinted, though Filler calls it "the major corridor to anything of Markham which may be immortal." Publishers and public alike demanded only his rhymes about "crickets and rocks and ideal love." And all this pains Filler.

Aside from his writings, Markham is of interest as a human being. Attached too closely to a deranged mother, he was married three times and was a man of many infatuations besides. A shadow of illegitimacy bothered him much of his life but the stigma proved unfounded.

He died at the age of 88, on March 7, 1940, and until his rescue by Dr. Filler, has been in oblivion ever since.—N.H.

President Thomas Jefferson is depicted as a brandy-soaked anarchist tearing down pillars of free government in this Federalist cartoon from early 19th Century. It is one of many illustrations in Roger Butterfield's "The American Past," Simon and Schuster, $8.95, a new, up-to-date edition of a justly acclaimed pictorial history of the United States.

And Try Not to Miss...

BIRDS IN OUR LIVES, edited by Alfred Stefferud; illustrated by Bob Hines. U.S. Department of the Interior, Bureau of Sport Fisheries and Wild Life. $9.

Sixty-one authors in this unique book deal with a wide range of subjects about bird life as related to man.

Birds have influenced the fine arts, the Bible, stamp and coin design and the development of the airplane; this book shows how. The problems birds cause man, and man causes birds; the facts about the much-maligned hawks, owls, fish-eating and carrion-feeding birds; these are among the many topics.

CLIMBING BLIND, by Colette Richard Dutton, $4.50.

A mountaineer and speleologist, blind since infancy, tells of climbing the Alps and exploring prehistoric caves in the Pyrennes. A deeply moving book by a 28-year-old Frenchwoman.

THE TRADITIONAL NEAR EAST, edited by J. Stewart-Robinson. Spectrum Books (Prentice Hall) $1.95.

Such experts on Islam as H.A.R. Gibbs (on interpreting Islamic history) and Reuben Levy (on Persia and the Arabs) are among the essayists who analyze the social, political, legal and cultural aspects of the Islamic peoples. A valuable adjunct for an understanding of the always explosive Near East.

This cookbook by the calendar contains 150 old-time recipes compiled by Beatrice Vaughan from her collection of "heirloom recipes." Apple toot and harvest chowder, baked liver loaf and egger-noggin, Yankee pumpkin pudding and cold chicken pie are among the 150.

CREATIVE PAINTING AND DRAWING, by Anthony Toney. Dover, $2.50.

ANY GOD WILL DO, by Richard Condon. Random House, $5.95.

FRANCIS VOLLMER, an orphan brought up to be a banker, embezzles $450,000 and manages to place the blame on his benefactor when the latter kills himself in his office in America's most powerful bank. The riches enable Vollmer to chase his insane dream of being the son of royalty.

First, though, he learns the French language and all about French cooking and wine from a Gallic native in New York and all about love-making from an accomplished mistress, the Frenchman's niece. Then he is ready to carry his search for his heritage to the drawing rooms and bedrooms of the aristocracy in Paris and London.

The mad Mr. Vollmer had a wife whom he adored, but he was willing to give her up to find his "parents." When she produced documents proving that his mother died giving birth to him at age 47 and his father was a dwarf clown who was killed in a circus fire, he shut her out of his mind forever.

The characters in this book are grotesque, but the reader will want to find out what becomes of them. Condon may be trying to say something of significance about self-delusion, snobbery, false values and the like, but primarily he is an imaginative storyteller, with special appeal for those who like generous helpings of sex in their fiction. Members of the Condon cult (this is his sixth novel) will not be disappointed.—Bob Martin.

On Using Words Correctly

HENRY, IN HIS tale, "The Call of the Tame," jeered at the use of "tenderfoot" as the plural of "tenderfoot." Wilson Follett, in Modern American Usage: A Guide, Hill and Wang, $7.50, makes it two jeers and advises the use of the singular "tenderfoot" as the plural.

(Perhaps that extra jeer came from Jacques Barzun, because Follett died in 1963, before he had finished the book, and Barzun with a corps of collaborators completed it.)

Wilson Follett, wrote Edward Weeks, editor of the Atlantic Monthly, "was a tart and vigorous defender of the English language. He loved words and had a Roman's reverence for clarity and order in a sentence."

H. W. Fowler singlehandedly had lifted England's English out of its morass in his "Modern English Usage" and "The King's English." Follett, in 1958, began to write "Modern American Usage" because he thought it was "time that we had an American book of usage grounded on the philosophy that the best in language—which often is the simplest—is not too good to be aspired to." Wit, erudition and good taste season "Modern American Usage" in equal proportion.

A good example of the Follett style is in his entry "different(ly) than." He points out that prevailing usage in England is divided between "different to" and "different from." The former virtually is nonexistent in this country and sounds awkward when met in British writing. "In both England and the United States there is an increasing tendency to follow different and differently with than. When challenged, than is sometimes defended with the argument that other and otherwise—logically equivalent to different and differently—are idiomatically followed by than. Sometimes the argument is rather that from after different leads to wordiness...

"There is always some acceptable way of saying what is meant, and it is often better to find a way around a linguistic thicket than to bull one's way through. To condone different than because it is sometimes awkward to follow different with the accepted preposition is defeatism. As for differently than, it can often be replaced by otherwise than, which is irreproachable..."

Outlines Workings of Court

OPINION OF THE COURT, by William Woolfolk. Doubleday, $5.95.

JUSTICES OF the Supreme Court of the United States are flesh and blood human beings, author William Woolfolk tells us in "Opinion of the Court."

Woolfolk's protagonist is Paul Lincoln Lowe, who moves from the governor's mansion in Nebraska to the nation's highest court and from his wife of 23 years to an affair and marriage with another woman, with complete aplomb in both cases.

Woolfolk, long associated with the highly acclaimed television series, "The Defenders," attempts to combine a documentary presentation of the workings of the Supreme Court with an engrossing story, and comes quite close to being successful.

Love is too poised, too articulate, too urbane for the reader to identify strongly with him, but Woolfolk's well-researched presentation of the machinery of the court makes interesting reading.

"Opinion of the Court" is neither as dramatic nor as scholarly as Anthony Lewis' brilliant non-fiction work, "Gideon's Trumpet," but it helps make the function of the Supreme Court understandable to more people, it does the job the author obviously intended it to do.—Bob Schmidt.

Comeback for Indians' Horse

By Eleanor Avery Price

FEW HOUSES owned by Indians could outrun the spotted ones that "grazed on the meadows made by the Palouse River," a white man's expression that eventually gave the horses with the distinctive spattering of spots their name, Appaloosa. So their owners, the Nez Perce Indians lived and hunted quite peacefully.

With the coming of the white man, the Nez Perces were found to be friendly and even presented the white man with some of his valued horses. Then came the gold rush of 1860 and also the greedy white man's generals and soldiers. After considerable bloodshed and eventual flight, the Nez Perces went sorrowfully but quietly from their beautiful Wallowa Valley in Oregon to Lapwai Reservation in Idaho. Their "Palouseys" were taken from them and sold, and the breed almost disappeared.

About 30 years ago, interest was revived in the spotted horses and enough were searched out in hide-outs once used by the Indians to start a breeding program. It also is interesting to learn that the breed, in research, was traced from Asia to Spain to Mexico to the Pacific Northwest. China and Persia were probably the first to have this type of spotted horse. Through wars and conquests, the breed apparently became owned almost entirely by the Nez Perce Indians.

The Nez Perces were not entirely forgotten when put onto a reservation. At the National Appaloosa Show, you can sometimes see a young brave riding on a pad supposedly used by the late Chief Thunder Rolling in the Mountains.

The Appaloosa has appeared quite frequently in TV and motion picture films. Robert Horton rode on in "Wagon Train," and Guy Madison in "Wild Bill Hickock." And there is an Appaloosa in "Road West." Walt Disney created the featurette, "Run, Appaloosa, Run." And now there is that fine production, "The Appaloosa," based on Robert MacLeod's novel and starring Marlon Brando.

This $12 million Technicolor and Techniscope film is the story of Osaca, an Appaloosa whose real name is Cojo Rojo. Cojo Rojo was trained for the film by Bobby Davenport. Recently Cojo Rojo has been sold by Jack and Sylvia Martinez of Saugus to Marie Anderson of Lomita. His new trainer is Gary Griffin, owner of Spotorama Ranch off Terminal Island Freeway at Anaheim, Wilmington.

develop his ideas. More than 100 examples of artist Toney's own works illustrate his instructions.

SUPERSTITIOUS? HERE'S WHY, by Julie Forsythe Batchelor and Claudia de Lys. A Voyager Book (Harcourt, Brace) 50c.

We say "God bless you" or "Gesundheit" when somebody sneezes, but in parts of the Near East and the Far West people clasp their hands and bow toward the sneezer. The ancient's believed that evil spirits who had previously entered the body jumped out with every sneeze.

The phrase "three on a match" has ancient roots: when a chieftain died all the tribe's fires except his were put out. Then the witch doctor relit the tribal fires, three at a time, with a firebrand from the chieftain's fire, which was supposed to contain his spirit. Superstitions about three and other numbers form a most fascinating part of this little book.

Coin Center in California

By Maurice M. Gould

AFTER TWO MONTHS in sunny Southern California, I came away convinced that the Golden State now is the coin center for collectors in the United States.

No matter what direction one goes, there are coin shops dotting the streets and highways. They are well advertised, well lighted and in many cases much more modern than coin centers in the East. It is not unusual to find several dealers situated in the same area.

In Hawthorne, there are even five dealers under one roof, and others come in to sell their material on weekends — which makes for a lot of activity. Some shops are open seven days a week, as well as evenings, something unheard of in other areas of the country.

There are many coin clubs in California, ranging in size from the regional and state societies to the smaller local units. I had the pleasure of visiting several and some are run on a highly educational level and are a great asset to all numismatists in their areas; some take care of the needs of the beginner and all are continually growing. There are probably more coin clubs in California than in any other state.

While there I attended the International Coin Show at the International Hotel in Los Angeles. This is the largest foreign coin show of its type in the world and sales of U.S. coins are strictly forbidden.

The show was a huge success, breaking last year's attendance record, with many dealers and collectors coming from every part of the world.

There was a great deal of activity in the coins of Central and South America; in fact this region seems to be a coming thing in the foreign coin market of the future. Many American coin dealers now visit this area regularly and comb it thoroughly for interesting and rare material.

There are many coin shows in California and most of them are run on a lavish scale. They are scheduled for the entire year, which is quite difficult to do in some areas of the country. There are also many specialist groups which are a benefit to any numismatic area.

Older numismatic material is much more difficult to obtain in California than east of Chicago, but, slowly and surely, many fine collections and high-grade Americana are finding their way West.

I noticed that Las Vegas is a good coin town, but of course the entertainment and gambling fields do come first.

While I did not see any silver dollars, there were plenty of half-dollars available, which is something not seen anywhere else. I was told by many people — from cashiers in a restaurant to attendants at the slot machines — that they carefully look through their change at every opportunity. Finds still are made, but rare coins in circulation are just about cleaned out. It takes a great deal of persistence and the scanning through of many thousands of coins to come up with a worthwhile find.

Each gambling house now has its own chips and tokens, and these are sought after by token collectors. They are well struck, and were specially made for the casinos when the shortage of silver dollars developed.

If you want a brand new or uncirculated one for yourself, be sure to go to the head cashier; they always have a few of these pieces set aside.

Robert D. Wiltse, from Garden Grove, is recent graduate of highway patrol's intensified training program, which included extensive physical training; he will patrol state roadways near Anaheim.

"The training is tough, but I didn't mind it. Actually I was treated better than I thought I would be treated. I'm ready for my trainee period," he commented.

Wiltse has been assigned to the Anaheim office. He is married but has no children. He will live in Garden Grove.

Asked whether he would be required to meet a ticket quota Wiltse responded quickly:

"No sir, there is no ticket quota in the highway patrol. Only those who break the law are ticketed."

Among those in the graduating class with Wiltse were James Nixon of Compton, Clifton Williamson of San Pedro and Raymond McKinnon of Lynwood. All will be assigned to Southland Highway Patrol offices.

DESPITE DELIBERATE recruiting efforts, the Highway Patrol still has few Negro applicants. There are only three or four Negroes per 120-man class.

There are several reasons for this, explained CHP officials: College and prior police work are definite aids in making the academy; few Negroes have either. Highway Patrol interviews have shown law enforcement officers have a bad image among many Negroes and peace officer careers are less likely to appeal to a young man.

Today there are less than 4,000 highway patrolmen on duty in California. There are 10 million licensed drivers in the state. That's some odds — even for an educated cop!

world's finest. It had 45 bells, the oldest of which was made in 1480.

When John V. King of Portugal, visited Holland, he was so delighted with the bell music that he ordered two for his new palace. His treasurer remonstrated, for one carillon cost about $43,000. Nevertheless, the king proceeded with the project, and the two carillons of 48 bells each are still in the twin towers of the former palace chapel at Mafra, Portugal.

In Belgium carillon bells are hung in tiers, while in Holland they are often arranged in circles. The carillon is especially suited to the flat countries of Belgium and Holland, for there the bell sounds travel greater distances than in hilly countries. Besides the daily pleasure these carillons give the people, they are especially loved on Sundays. In summer evening recitals frequently are presented, sometimes announced months in advance.

The 48-bell carillon tower on the campus of the University of California at Riverside houses Southern California's only fully-operative carillon, which sends music ringing across wide area.

THE CARILLON is the most democratic of all musical instruments. Rich and poor persons alike share in its enjoyment. In many instances the audience consists of an entire city. The Dutch probably know their folk music better than any other people, for the workman at his labor hears the melodies from the carillon at almost every hour of the day.

As an instrument, the carillon possesses considerable versatility. Suitable music ranges from hymns, carols, and simple folk tunes in single parts to arrangements of classical music in three or more parts. When bells are used in combination, each must be absolutely in tune with itself and with the others.

From 1925 to 1940 the number of full-fledged carillons in America greatly increased. A really fine carillon begins at around $20,000 and may run up to $100,000 in cost, depending upon the number and size of the bells. The world's largest carillon is in the tower of New York's Riverside Church. The only other carillon in California is in the Hoover Tower at Stanford University.

BOTH THE tower and the carillon at the University of California at Riverside were made possible by gifts from private citizens who prefer to remain anonymous. The UCR carillon, by its sheer size and scope, is an impressive musical instrument. Its 48 bronze bells span four octaves and range in weight from 2½ tons to 28 pounds. They were cast in France at the Paccard Foundry, the same firm that cast the bells for Washington's National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception.

Unusual Teriyaki Sauce

SOME gourmets prefer teriyaki steak created from a Japanese recipe which requires marinating for several days, followed by broiling that makes it black as a piece of tire rubber. The result is tasty — and expensive.

Other epicures prefer un-marinated teriyaki steak, the way it's prepared at the Melody Cove restaurant, 1960 Santa Fe Ave., Long Beach. Owner Jerry Reynolds and his tall hostess wife Josephine created this unusual style of steak several years ago and it has been delighting hordes of patrons ever since.

The Cove's chefs start with a tender, juicy sirloin steak which is broiled in a conventional way. It is served with a cup of teriyaki sauce into which the guest dips forkfuls of steak. The exotic sauce is the key to the entire production. It consists of ginger root (grown in Jamaica), soya, corn syrup, other herbs and spices. The sweetish sauce combines marvelously with the hearty beef flavor of the steak, creating a savoriness that is "different" — but not too much so.

The Cove's teriyaki technique is also welcome to diner-outers because it is moderate in cost. The steak is $2.75, including fine soup du jour or large fresh salad with choice of dressing (the Roquefort is particularly impressive); plump, steaming baked potato with cheese sauce and chopped green onions; fresh hot garlic toast and coffee.

The Melody Cove—which is closed Sundays — is an attractive, modern, comfortable restaurant which features numerous top-notch luncheons and dinners. Other specialties are superb roast prime ribs of beef au jus, $2.25 (served Thursday nights only), and such daily treats as top sirloin steak with onion rings, $2.75; unjointed fried chicken, $2.25; grilled halibut, $2.50, and steak-and-lobster combination, $4.75.

SUNDAY TREAT—Beautiful to behold are the salads, roasts, sea foods and desserts displayed on an immaculate, self-service counter at Arnold's Restaurant, 3925 Atlantic Ave., one of Long Beach's more fashionable family restaurants. Perhaps more important, those items taste as good as they look. They are served a la carte or on dinners priced under or slightly over $2. Each dinner includes three fresh salad selections, two vegetables, entree, roll, butter and beverage.

Q. Would you please list the members of President Johnson's "Texas Mafia." Does one have to be a Texan to feel "in" at Washington, D.C., these days? —Ron Hall, New York, N.Y.

A. The following Texans, all intimates of the President, are members of the White House staff: George Christian, press secretary; W. Marvin Watson, appointments secretary; Harry McPherson Jr., special counsel; Elizabeth Carpenter, Mrs. Johnson's press secretary. Bill Moyers and Jake Jacobsen, who have resigned, effective February 1st, also are from Texas. Certainly it is no handicap to be a Texan in Washington.

Q. Is it true that Ernest Hemingway and all the members of the family he came from have committed suicide? —Helen Checkley, Urbana, Ill.

A. To date, three members of the Hemingway family have taken their lives.

Hemingway and his father both died of self-inflicted gunshot wounds. Recently Hemingway's sister, Mrs. Ursula Hemingway Jepson, died of an overdose of medicine in Honolulu. Two of Hemingway's sisters, Mrs. Madeleine Miller of Wolverine, Mich., and Mrs. Carol Gardiner of Garden City, N.Y., are living, as is his brother, Leicester of Key West, Fla.

Q. What's happened to Alger Hiss of the McCarthy era? —Victor Knowles, Baltimore, Md.

A. Hiss works in a New York bookstore, occasionally lectures, recently discussed the New Deal in McCosh Hall, Princeton University.

Q. The colored girl from Detroit who has become the outstanding model in Europe — what is her name? How tall? Where did she go to school? —Lurlene Jameson, Detroit, Mich.

A. Her name is Donyale Luna. She is 5 feet 10, attended the High School of Commerce in Detroit and Cass Technical High School.

Q. Richard Burton's ex-wife, Sybil—is she pregnant? How many children do she and her husband already have? —Anna Fromm, Newark, N.J.

A. Mrs. Sybil Christopher, former wife of actor Richard Burton, is expecting her third child in May. She has two daughters—Kate, 9, and Jessica, 7—by Bur-

A. Romina Power has agreed to marry her prince if he will wait until she is 18. The prince is Stanislas Klossowski de Rola, Baron de Watteville, 23, oldest son of the French painter, Balthus. He plays the guitar, is known in Paris Left Bank circles as "Stash." Miss Christian approves of the match but first would like to see her daughter develop into a film star. Romina has already starred in two Italian films, latest of which is How I Learned to Love Women.

Q. Juan Peron, the ex-dictator of Argentina—is he loaded? I understand he is 75 but lives with a young babe of 18. True or False? —George H., Miami, Fla.

A. Peron, 71, claims to have married Isabel Martinez, 33, an ex-dancer and an ex-secretary, in a secret ceremony. She is his third wife. Peron is a multimillionaire, having invested heavily in Madrid real estate after being kicked out of the Argentine in 1955.

Q. I understand there is a vice lord in Saigon who controls all the bar girls and is earning $1 million a month from the troops. Isn't this guy "Big Cathay"? —R.E.R., Ft. Sill, Okla.

A. No such vice lord has yet been identified. Le Van "Big Cathay" Dai, 24, was recently banished to an island in the Gulf of Siam. The police in Saigon suspected him of blackmail, murder, vice, pornographic film production, etc., but lacked sufficient evidence to convict, whereupon they expelled "Big Cathay" from the city for "long-term reeducation."

Q. After seeing a rerun of the movie, Gypsy, I am interested in the real Gypsy Rose Lee. Was she ever in love with Elizabeth Taylor's third husband, the late Mike Todd? —R.E.P., Culver City, Calif.

Q. It has been said of the late President Kennedy that he suffered from Addison's disease. What is Addison's disease? And did Kennedy suffer from it? —Mrs. Thomas Lincoln, Los Angeles, Calif.

BRINGING UP BABY.® Hints Collected by Mrs. Dan Gerber, Mother of Five

The A-B-C of your baby's appetite

Sure it's exasperating when your baby balks at eating. But babies' appetites have their ups and downs. And the reasons for the downs are understandable if you know what to look for. These are the times when your baby's appetite may taper off:

- (A) When he (or she) starts on solids.
- (B) During the early teething stages.
- (C) At the year-end mark, when growth rate slows down.

Menu mainstay

with long-term nutritional benefits. I'm talking about Gerber Baby Cereals, made to nourish and please lads and lassies from babyhood through toddlerhood. What have Gerber Cereals to say for themselves?

Just this! Each of the 5 Gerber Cereals that you mix with milk or formula is enriched with special nutrients. Iron for its blood-building quality. Important B-vitamins to aid appetite and growth. All five varieties are pleasantly mild in flavor yet make appetite interest come alive. Texture? Smooth at the start...smooth all through the serving.

Terrific Toddler Milk Shake

- 1 cup whole milk
- 1 jar Gerber Strained Fruit
- 2 Tbs. Gerber Strained Egg Yolks
- 2-3 Tbs. any Gerber Cereal

Combine ingredients and blend thoroughly with a rotary beater. Serve immediately. Yield: 2 small servings.

Refreshing sip tips

Gerber Strained Fruit Juices are delightful for any-age baby. Mild, yet fruit-bright in flavor, they're all rich in vitamin C. That, as you probably know, is an important contributor to strong bones and teeth...sound gums and other body tissues. Perennial favorites, of course, are Gerber Orange Juice or Apple Juice. But the brightly distinctive combination juices get smiling approval, too.

For continued appetite interest:

Gerber prepares over 100 baby foods—infant formulas, cereals, strained and junior foods. Comfortable, durable babywear, too. We're proud to say:

...our only business!"

BECAUSE OF VOLUME OF MAIL RECEIVED, PARADE REGRETS IT CANNOT ANSWER QUERIES ABOUT THIS COLUMN.

VENEREAL DISEASE. Each year there are about 1,250,000 cases of syphilis and gonorrhea in the U.S., making them the nation's top infectious diseases. According to Dr. Leslie C. Norins of the Venereal Disease Research Laboratory in Atlanta, an estimated 3000 new cases spring up each day. The highest incidence is among middle-class teenagers.

After a successful postwar campaign to eradicate syphilis and gonorrhea, venereal disease dropped to an alltime low in 1955. But interest in combating V.D. and in preventive education also dropped off, and the rates have been rising since 1959. Doctors at the Atlanta laboratory are working on two medical aspects of the problem: the development of a vaccine for syphilis, and a penicillin substitute for treatment of gonorrhea which is becoming increasingly resistant to the present drug.

LIFESPAN. Last year the average American's lifespan remained at 70.2. In 1950 the lifespan was 68.2 years, up more than five years from the 1940 level.

Insurance statisticians believe the current level will stay just about where it is until medical breakthroughs in heart disease, infant mortality, cancer and stroke reduce the death rate.

AIR POLLUTION. The U.S. is not alone in its problem of air pollution. In Toronto, Canada, 50 tons of dust and pollution settle monthly over each square mile of the downtown area. It is estimated that Toronto air is 12 to 15 times dirtier than Los Angeles air, which is dirty indeed.

An enterprising engineer, Ying Hope, has suggested a novel solution for Toronto's problem: a dozen air-purification towers to be built atop high buildings. The proposed towers would suck in 2 million cubic feet of air per minute. Giant fans would draw the air through water sprays, washing away most of the pollution, and blow it out clean again. Will it work? Inventor Hope agrees it sounds like a crazy idea, but a century ago, he suggests, so did the airplane.

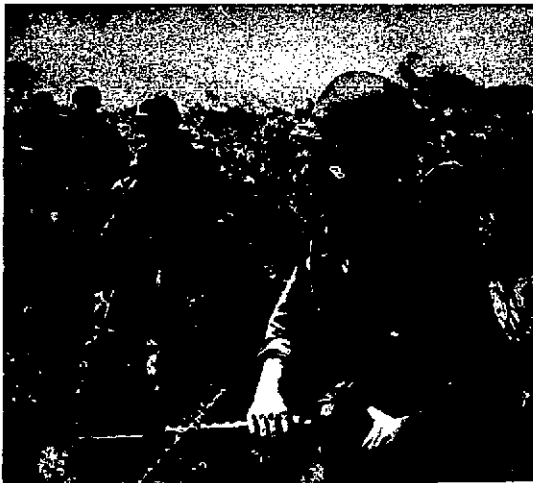

ROCK HUDSON AND DORIS DAY STAR IN "LOVER COME BACK."

TV TERRIBLE. Entertainmentwise, television this season has been a disaster. It has produced not one new big name, not one outstanding new series. What it has produced are old movies (Doris Day and Jerry Lewis films lead the popularity ratings) and spectaculars. Old movies now occupy 13% of the prime time on TV, are in short supply, will be exhausted by 1970.

AMERICAN INFANTRYMEN ON PATROL IN VIETNAM

FACE OF WAR. During World War II and the Korean War, enemy artillery plus mortar fire caused most of the American losses.

In Vietnam, however, it's a different story. An analysis of 3185 Americans wounded in a three-month period, November 1965, through February 1966, shows that 15.7% were wounded by grenade fragments, 18.9% by mortar fire, 34.7% by bullets from enemy small arms. This proves that the U.S. in Vietnam is involved primarily in a guerrilla-type war in which the enemy, owing to the lack of artillery, must close in on his opponent in order to hurt him.

The American infantryman is doing the bulk of the fighting in the present conflict.

TO CATCH A THIEF. For the past several years the invisible camera which films holdups has been part of the equipment in most modern banks. Now a German firm is marketing equipment for even wider use. Siemens has developed a camera which permits tellers to take pictures at their own discretion of suspect clients. If a customer presents a check without proper identification, the teller snaps his picture. If it turns out the check is bad, then the police immediately have a photo of the bad-check passer.

AIRPORT TIME. Since 1948 air time between New York and six of the nation's largest cities, Los Angeles, Chicago, Detroit, Boston, Washington and Miami, has been cut about 50%. Ground travel time between airport and downtown, however, has increased almost by the same percentage because of increasingly congested traffic. It takes twice as long to get from downtown Manhattan to John F. Kennedy Airport as it does to fly from New York to Boston or New York to Washington. What is the point of flying faster if one loses on the ground the time one gains in the air?

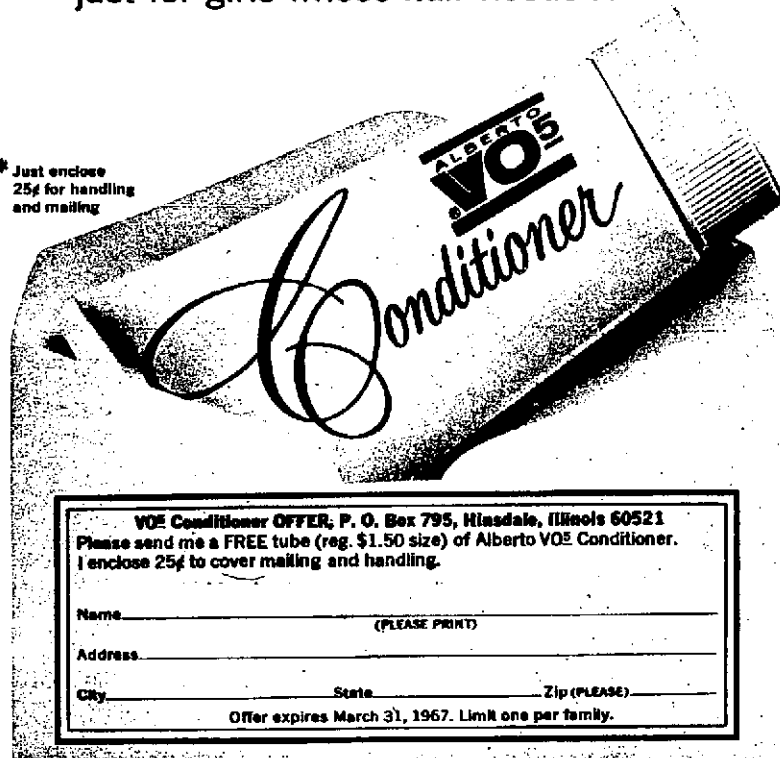

Benton Elliott of General Electric pointed out in a recent paper that the answer may lie in a special helicopter-bus vehicle or a rail-bus vehicle or a mono-rail or automobile lanes for the exclusive use of airline passengers. But something has to be done.

It begins with an egg: Rose Daniels, sex education teacher in Glen Cove (N.Y.) schools, tells the incubation story to kindergartners.

IN THIS PIONEERING NEW YORK SCHOOL:

SEX EDUCATION BEGINS IN KINDERGARTEN

by JOHN G. ROGERS • Photos by Ben Ross

GLEN COVE, N.Y.

*H*ow to teach their children the facts of life has long been a problem for mothers and fathers everywhere.

Here in this small New York city, the public school system has come to the rescue with a bold and far-reaching program to help out. It offers sex education classes beginning in kindergarten.

School system initiative didn't start the sex teaching. Frustrated mothers and fathers asked for it, and now the entire community appears to support the project with enthusiasm.

Says Dr. Albert R. Brinkman, Glen Cove school superintendent: "I've seen many a parent review our program and then say, 'I wish I'd had something like this when I was young.'"

Glen Cove's experience has made crystal clear a grave national need for more public school sex instruction. Such teaching does exist, but it's hit-and-miss, here-and-there. Since this city recently made public its new program, more than 300 U.S. school boards have written, requesting guidance in duplicating the courses.

A LOW-KEY APPROACH

At present Glen Cove's sex curriculum runs from kindergarten through fifth grade. Plans are underway to extend it through high school. It was developed and is taught by Mrs. Rose Daniels, a wise and farsighted nurse-teacher who observes:

"Any school system in the country should be able to adapt our pattern to their local needs. The most important advice we would give is: Don't rush into a public school sex education program. Plan it slowly and carefully at every step, and be sure you have the parents with you right from the start."

To watch Mrs. Daniels in action at Glen Cove's elementary Landing School is to wonder why there should be any problem about sex education.

Her approach is low key, almost subtle. Each year's course is tailored to the age of the pupils and builds slowly on what they absorbed the year before. The start of most classes — she visits each grade about five times a year—is simply a device to launch discussion easily and naturally.

In kindergarten, for example, she's likely to open casually: "Jimmy here tells me there's going to be a new baby at his house. Isn't that nice? Are any of the rest of you expecting a new brother or sister?" Soon she and the class are inspecting a book of tasteful photographs showing a woman at home in various stages of pregnancy and, finally, nursing her infant. Her other children are shown in an interested pose, regarding it all as a family project.

In second grade, Mrs. Daniels may show a movie, and as the birth of kittens appears onscreen, she may ask: "Now who will be the first to spy a baby kitten coming through the special opening that the mother has for her babies?"

In fourth grade, she might explain to the boys, "Here's equipment a baseball catcher needs to avoid injury." And this eases into the importance of the genitals and why they need protection.

THE VOCABULARY

From kindergarten on, a doctor's vocabulary is used for body parts and functions. Says Mrs. Daniels: "Using those little old disquieting words that parents have been inventing for years may be cute and certainly is easy, but it's also quite silly."

Authorities doubt that as many as five percent of U.S. schools are making a significant effort in sex education. And, they add, most of what is taught is merely "reproduction education" and does not reveal total human sexuality.

Mrs. Daniels recognizes that criticism. She attempts to present a rounded education based on her observation: "Sex is something you are, not something you do."

Hence, with her books, charts, films, lectures and classroom discussions, she teaches not only reproduction but wider outlooks. Sex is set forth as one of the many elements in wholesome family life. By fifth grade this has progressed to discussing "the importance of wholesome life attitudes and values" outside the family.

In common with many present-day sex instructors, Mrs. Daniels notes that today's young people are ill-equipped to keep their balance in a society that bombards them with sex. The Glen Cove project does not and will not pose for them as moralist, but, says Mrs. Daniels: "Our goal is to give them knowledge, understanding and attitudes about themselves and their growing bodies that will guide them in making responsible decisions along the way to adulthood."

Landing School's parents, thoroughly consulted at every stage of curriculum planning, seem to be solid in approval of sex teaching.

Says Stanley Roschelle, father of three: "It's such a wholesome, natural course to have in a school that you wonder why we took so long, or why other schools hesitate."

A strong point in Mrs. Daniels' approach is to urge children to discuss all they learn with their parents at home. Hence, parents have no feeling of guilt that they've passed the buck to the school.

Mrs. Shirley Graham, mother of three, comments: "I'm first to admit that what the children learn at school makes continuation of sex talks here at home more natural. But I would never deal myself out of such an important part of my children's life. I would never approve the program if it didn't include the home carryover."

An aspect of sex that terrifies many parents—explaining the physical union of mother and father—is regarded quite casually by Mrs. Daniels.

"Some books," she says, "try to tell everything in 20 pages. We don't want that. We just want to start early, move along naturally at the children's rate of interest and comprehension. Move gradually this way, and by the fifth grade the father's role has been specifically realized and is discussed without any trouble at all."

How does Glen Cove measure the success of its sex education program when it's been underway for only four years and does not yet have full cumulative effect through the fifth grade?

First, there's the almost unanimous parental concession that school sex discussion leads to more meaningful home discussion. Also, some parents offer specific examples:

A pregnant mother reports that her 8-year-old son, a pupil of Mrs. Daniels, is a delighted confidant. An older son at the same age was confused and embarrassed over an earlier pregnancy.

A father relates with satisfaction that recently he overheard his 12-year-old son, who had only one year with Mrs. Daniels, discussing a TV health quiz. Quite naturally the boy was explaining to a friend from another school the evil of venereal disease.

HOW IT BEGAN

Glen Cove's sex education program traces to early 1963, when Mrs. Mary Kellar, Landing School principal, was holding a coffee hour with mothers.

Talk drifted to parents' embarrassment over children's sex questions, and one anguished mother asked: "What did I do wrong in my son's earliest years that now I have no established basis with him to talk about sex?"

Mrs. Kellar offered school help. By autumn parents were meeting regularly with her and Mrs. Daniels—both understanding mothers of grown children—and reviewing suitable material.

Fearing some people might regard sex teaching as too extreme, Landing School explained its plan not only to parent meetings but also community meetings attended by leaders of the three major religious faiths. No serious objection was voiced, and formal teaching started in the fall of 1963. Three trial years passed before Glen Cove announced the program publicly.

Now, parents' voices are loud in calling for extension of sex education through senior high school. Dr. Thomas Kernan, principal of Glen Cove Junior High, is preparing the next step—a sex curriculum for his students.

"As these kids grow older," says Dr. Kernan, "they're going to have an awful lot of important decisions to make. They shouldn't have to make them from a basis of ignorance."

The need for schools to aid the home in teaching sex seems unquestionable. A recent Pennsylvania State University conference was told that a vast majority of freshmen graded their parents "inadequate" or "very inadequate" as instructors in sex.

Authorities say that if a school enters the field, it should do so competently and formally, as Glen Cove is doing. Too many schools, they complain, settle for such gestures as periodic showing of a rented film by an embarrassed teacher who runs it through twice to make sure there'll be no time for discussion.

The potential benefits of sound sex education are of fundamental significance to American families—fewer illegitimate children, less criminal abortion, less venereal disease, fewer unhappy marriages, fewer unwanted legitimate children, less divorce.

The achievement of Glen Cove, population 25,000, carries an implicit challenge to every community in the U.S.: Do you concede a need for sex education in your public schools, and have you the wisdom, patience and initiative to plan an effective program?

The leaders in such an endeavor will find they must "sell" the parents and the community through wise presentations of the goals and methods of instruction. Parents and teachers must work closely together.

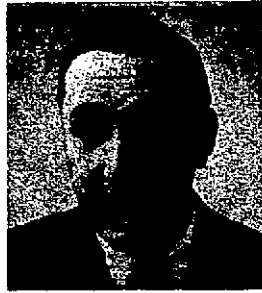

A mimeographed "get started" formula is available by writing to Landing School, McLoughlin Street, Glen Cove, N.Y., 11542. It takes dedication to introduce sex education but it can be done.

Dr. Albert Brinkman, superintendent of schools: "I can see school sex education evolving into a city-wide adult education program in family life."

Mrs. Shirley Graham, mother of three: "I think the school sex education is wonderful. I'm so sorry my older children didn't have the very same advantage."

Stanley Roschelle, father of three: "Sex education must be continued through high school. It's not good to start a child on it, then suddenly drop it."

Mrs. Estelle Anderson, P.T.A. president: "I can recall only one parent who opposed sex education. He seemed to fear it would somehow harm the kids."

Glen Cove's program urges pupils to take their school sex learning home for discussion with parents. John Merrick, 12, is shown here in living room conference with his dad, John, and mother, Pamela.

A Medicated Soap for Healthier Skin

To keep your skin healthy, it must be free of problems. And many minor skin problems can be the result of improper cleansing, or bacteria, or both. In a baby, it might crop up as diaper rash; a teenager might suffer from a broken-out face; a woman may have superficial flaws in her complexion, irritation, or itchy skin.

The one soap to help control all these problems is Cuticura Medicated Soap. Cuticura's special thick lather lifts out dirt, grime, and impurities. Its medications and antiseptic properties fight the germs that can lead to externally-caused skin problems in people of all ages.

So for you and your family, use Cuticura Medicated Soap. Healthy skin protects you better and is the most beautiful of all.

HONEYMOONERS IN A WAR

by BEVERLY DEEPE

QUI NHON, S. VIETNAM.

A general gave away one of the brides. The maids of honor cradled their orchid bouquets in baby coolie hats. The Roman Catholic chaplain-priest wore a gold chasuble on which was embroidered the Latin word pax, meaning peace.

And ten minutes away Americans and Viet Cong were trying to kill each other.

It was, perhaps, the unlikely wedding in military history—staged in the unlikelyst of places. "Even in Korea or World War II, in 30 years of service, I've never seen a wedding take place so close to the frontlines," said Brig. Gen. Charles R. (Monk) Meyer, commanding general for the area, big daddy to 20,000 American troops and cupid to two young nurses and two Army doctors.

I do, I do, I do, I do: The Robert Sweeneys and the Ronald Crowns take time off from war to be united at the Chapel of Peace in Qui Nhon in a medical-military-matrimonial merger.

It was really two weddings, a double nuptial mass that united Lt. Catherine Ward with Capt. Ronald (Royal) Crown and Lt. Marie Bates with Lt. Robert (Sweepie) Sweeney. In other circumstances they could have picked a more romantic place—like almost anywhere. No one could ever confuse Qui Nhon with Camelot or Shangri-la. "The dirtiest hick town in the country," one American civilian official calls it. Bars and brothels thrive. "Even the chairman of the provincial council set up a massage parlor in his own home," the American says. The streets are rutted. Underfed Vietnamese children, nude from the waist down, play tug of war with dangling telephone wires.

Thirty miles to the north, troops of the First Cavalry Division (Airmobile) recently killed more than 1000 Communists and captured 1000 prisoners . . . 12 miles to the northwest, the South Korean Tiger Division killed 1161 Communists and took 1171 prisoners . . . four miles to the west, an American transportation detachment is the target for nightly fire from the V.C.

TIME FOR ROMANCE

It is a half world away from Portsmouth, Va., where Catherine Ward and Marie Bates roomed together during training. They were sent next to the U. S. Army Medical Training School at Fort Sam Houston, Tex., and there they met Lieutenant Sweeney. Marie and Sweepie began dating—"but not exclusively." There was a separation when Sweeney was assigned to Fort Hood, Tex., and the girls were sent to Walter Reed General Hospital, Washington, D. C. But on March 9, 1966, the three found themselves on the same plane to Vietnam. Two days later they arrived here at the 67th Evacuation Hospital, a $4.5 million complex, one of the best of 12 U. S. hospitals in Vietnam. Here, 47 nurses handle 1000 patients a month, two-thirds of them combat casualties. Yet in the middle of a war, Cathy, 22, and Marie, 21, each found time to fall in love.

Marie and Sweepie were temporarily assigned to the same hospital in Pleiku, which helped. Cathy began dating Crown, a carefree 30-year-old bachelor who was a flight surgeon in the U. S. Army Aviation Brigade.

General Meyer, a former West Point football star, circa 1937, became the principal agitator for a Vietnam wedding. "I kidded Sweeney and Marie to get together," he says. "And I told Royal Crown that Cathy was a real sharp girl. Then Cathy talked to me about marrying him. She and I are both Catholic, but Doc wasn't. I asked her what he was. She said Episcopalian. I said that was

367 TEST CASES PROVE "INSTANT EXERCISE" WORKS!

Get the slimmer, healthier body you want with this fabulous new minute-a-day static short-cut...
the most popular exercises ever developed in the U.S.

Imagine! Now just one almost effortless exercise can help shape you up better than 24 push-ups a day! Six seconds of muscle magic can slim down a wasteline by inches in days...and no diet! A single exercise can double strength with miraculous speed!

Now you can tone up and trim down in record time... without moving a muscle, without "working out" more than 1 minute a day. Doctors, nurses, athletes, insurance firms, citizens everywhere are turning to the amazingly simple isometric exercises developed by Alabama Doctor of Education, fitness expert and former coach, Donald J. Salls. The Navy and Marines have adopted this type of exercise, too. Even the astronauts use them!

Why? Simply because isometric exercises, better known to so many as Dr. Salls' "Static Exercises," really do work. They're so effective that fewer than 1% of the thousands who have purchased a set under his personal guarantee have asked for their money back. Less than 1%!

In fact, results have been so spectacular that skeptics asked for special effectiveness studies under independent professional supervision. But in test after test it's been the same dramatic story:

In one group of 253 girls, over 96% improved in physical fitness and over 50% had marked figure improvements... all in just 3 weeks, using Dr. Salls' motionless exercises for 1 minute per day.

Over 92% of another group had wasteline improvements, decreases of up to 3½ inches... thighs, 84%... hips, over 90%. Again in 3 weeks or less!

80% of still another group, measured periodically under the watchful eye of a physician, showed marked measurement improvements in less than 30 days.

A top university had one test group use isometrics for 1 minute daily while another worked on gym equipment for 45 minutes every day. When compared for fitness, the isometric exercisers scored highest in every test!

Here at last is one type of exercise that appeals to card-riding, machine-minded Americans... "weekend athletes," people who hate to exercise or don't have time. Here is the answer for the desk-bound man who wants to look trimmer, more muscular... for the modern woman who knows so well how important a slimmer, more attractive figure can be... for the oldster who seeks to improve fitness, figure and life-span by restoring long-neglected muscles without prolonged exercise.

Each of Dr. Salls' wonderfully simple basic exercises takes 6 seconds. All total just 1 minute per day. Instructions are graded for housewives, executives, teenagers and senior citizens, for superior fitness and prowess in such sports as bowling, swimming, golf. And you can do most of these exercises almost anywhere... at work, waiting for a bus, while shaving. No gadgets are required. There's no extreme exertion, not even heavy breathing!

The revolutionary principle Dr. Salls applies has the impressive support of highly respected educational institutions, leading physiologists, Olympic stars, fashion models, police groups, top pro and college athletes. And Time, Life, Reader's Digest, TV, newspapers, scientific journals have called attention to the exciting concept.

Followers of Dr. Salls' muscle magic report surprising results. For example, the stronger, tighter muscles resulting from his minute-a-day plan can lead quickly to a slimmer figure... even without weight reduction!

Mrs. P. McMorro of White Plains writes, "I reduced my waist 2 inches, my hips 2 inches—all in 2 weeks, a minute a day, with your exercises."

John B. Villano, Denver, reports: "Excellent results! My waist has gone from 36½ to 32—down 4½ inches. My chest increased from 41 to 43 inches."

Mrs. E. V. Smith of Madison writes that with Dr. Salls' exercises she's trimmed down her waist from 33½ to 28½, her hips from 43½ to 39½.

Carlyle Hall, Springfield, 91 years old and "still very active," says: "Your exercises are worth a hundred times their cost. They certainly work for me."

So many users of Dr. Salls' exercises also exclaim: "How much better... more alive, more alert, more youthful... I feel!" But specifically, he offers:

stronger, firmer muscles • slimmer waist, hips, thighs, calves, upper arms and neck • better muscular coordination • stronger back • improved posture.

Results are controlled primarily by the individual's own desires. If a man wants weight-lifter's strength, he can simply concentrate more often on certain of Dr. Salls' exercises. If a housewife seeks a more shapely midriff, a few weeks with several of his 6-second workouts is indicated.

Yes, now you can have a stronger, slimmer, healthier body without the strain or boredom of old-fashioned exercises! Dr. Salls will send a complete set of his instructions, in a large, fully illustrated folder, to interested readers who use the coupon on this page. Remember! These exercises are different: just 6 seconds each!

How to enjoy regularity even during the middle and later years of your life

True Facts About Irregularity

Question: Do I face any special constipation difficulties as I grow older?

Answer: As you enter your middle years, you may find that you are more and more troubled by irregularity.

Question: What can cause this "middle age" irregularity?

Answer: Constipation often results from a lack of enough moisture in the food waste which slows up elimination.

Question: Can I help overcome this problem?

Answer: The fact is, your daily intake of food may lack enough of a gentle laxative ingredient that is known as hydrogel. The addition of an adequate amount of hydrogel to your diet could bring really effective relief from constipation.

Question: How can I get enough hydrogel?

Answer: You could eat more fruits and vegetables . . . probably a great deal more than you do. Or, you can take a hydrogel concentrate like Serutan.

Question: Why should I take Serutan?

Answer: The hydrogel substance found in Serutan holds up to 20 times its volume in water. It is this lack of moisture that may be causing your irregularity.

Question: How does Serutan work?

Answer: Entirely differently from pills, oils or harsh chemical laxatives. Taken daily, gentle Serutan simply provides the hydrogel help you need to get you regular and keep you regular. You must be satisfied or your money back from Serutan. Try Serutan today.

close enough. This is ecumenical week."

The battle of the papers began. They had to get military approval, civilian approval, consular approval, Saigon approval, province approval. "We thought it would be easier to have a Vietnam wedding," said Marie, who originally had wanted to wait until they got home, "but that's a laugh. Oh, the paperwork. We had to go to six different headquarters, and we came back with 11 different signatures for approval to get married. . . . We all collected a stack of papers 1 inch high to show our grandchildren.

"The four of us went to Saigon for what we thought was a Vietnamese civil ceremony, but it was an oath at the American consul office just to say we hadn't been married before. Then we found out that ten days before the wedding we were supposed to go to the Vietnamese province chief's office—but we found out only seven days before. All four of us were in fatigues, and our interpreter did some fast talking. The Vietnamese civilian official said he'd make an exception for us. He stamped some papers, all in Vietnamese, shook our hands and said we were married."

The girls' parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Ward Sr., of Virginia Beach, Va., and Lt. Col. and Mrs. William J. Bates, who were in Iran (Colonel Bates is associated with the Imperial Iranian Gendarmerie), tried to make it for the nuptial mass but couldn't get transportation.

THE CHAPEL OF PEACE

Otherwise, things went smoothly. Marie's grandmother in Boston sent her an ivory silk wedding gown with a long train embroidered with imported lace. Cathy had a gown of white peau de soie, with a pearl-encrusted Swiss-lace train made in Hong Kong.

The double-double-ring ceremony, lasting 55 minutes, was held in the American-built Chapel of Peace, an air-conditioned oasis of tranquility on the edge of a strange war. The chapel has heavy wood pews that were hand-stained by the Vietnamese and floor tiles that were donated by the local leprosarium, where American doctors and nurses do volunteer work. General Meyer gave away Cathy, and Lt. Col. Robert Holsworth, commanding officer of the hospital, gave away Marie.

After a two-hour champagne reception at the officers' club, the Crowns left for a week on Taiwan and the Sweeneys for a week on Okinawa. And a flight surgeon and two helicopter pilots, who were wedding guests, hurried back to war.

During the wedding and reception, 21 American casualties arrived at the hospital from the combat zone.

People who try to lose weight by skipping breakfast

People who skip breakfast feel mean and hungry all morning. And they often get so hungry, they eat twice as much for lunch.

So, do yourself a favor: Get Quaker's new Diet Frosted, the deliciously sweetened cereal that fills you up without fattening you up.

And because it's puffed, a full cup of sweetened Diet Frosted Rice Puffs has only 56 calories; Wheat Puffs, only 51. That's less than any other kind of cereal—even less than a slice of dry toast.

Instant radiator check: Here's a pocket-sized antifreeze tester for your car (above) that works on the specific gravity principle and is said to give you accurate readings whether the engine is warm or cold. It's simple to use: Just insert into radiator liquid, draw up enough liquid to fill the tube, then count the number of floating balls to determine to what temperature you're protected. The unit can be stored in the glove compartment when not in use. With plastic case: $3.50. Rutward, Inc., Dept. PP, 1691 Bryant Road, Columbia Station, O., 44028.

Unstick solution: You'll find many uses for a new liquid that quickly dissolves gums, pastes and glues. Apply just a few drops, and you can cleanly peel off such items as cellophane tape and gummed labels. You can also use the liquid to lift a valuable stamp from an envelope—and it is said to remove paint splatters from fine furniture without damaging the finish. The material is odorless, colorless, nontoxic. 49¢. Yasutomo & Co., Dept. PP, 24 California Street, San Francisco, Calif.

Antiquing foam: With a new aerosol preparation you can produce a soft, antique finish on furniture in a one-step operation. The foam—as thick as shaving cream—clings to vertical surfaces, does not drip or run, automatically deglosses enamel finishes and is water-soluble, so it's easy to clean off hands and work surfaces. You can use it on any existing colored surface or any newly colored one. Just one coat is needed. 7-oz. can $1.98. Illinois Bronze Powder & Paint, Dept. PP, Lake Zurich, Ill., 60047.

My Favorite Jokes

by Pat Cooper

EDITOR'S NOTE: Pat Cooper, born Pasquale Caputo in the Red Hook section of Brooklyn, is the first Italian-American comic to poke understanding fun at his heritage. Cooper claims that in making his own people laugh as they saw themselves reflected in his wit, he also amused non-Italians who identified with the same experiences. Cooper is a high school dropout (Manual Training High in Brooklyn), for 12 years worked as a bricklayer, finally gave it up to become a furrier in the New York garment district. That's when he began telling funny stories and acting out family events from the lives of Italians. Soon he was booked into the State Theatre in Baltimore, signed for the Jackie Gleason TV show in 1963. Ever since he has worked as a professional comic, playing top nite spots in Miami Beach, Las Vegas, San Juan and New York. Herewith some samples of his humor:

My 7-year-old kid is very bright, very inquisitive. "Papa," he asked the other day, "what's the N.A.A.C.P.?" I explained to him it meant the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. "But, Papa," he says, "we're Italian. . . . What have we got?" So I told him, "We got the MAFIA — Mothers And Fathers, Italian Association."

American kids today are spoiled. They expect nothing but the best. When I was a kid, I needed eyeglasses. My father, who was born in Italy, loaned me his glasses. I got lost for seven days.

My own papa is always telling me stories of how poor he was in Italy, how he learned to be thrifty. He doesn't understand why it costs so much just to live today in this country. For instance, wherever you go nowadays, you have to tip someone.

In my apartment house we have a doorman. You give him a quarter, and he opens the door. You give him another quarter, and he closes the door. The other day it cost me $12 just to go in and out of my house.

Let me tell you about this doorman. One night I got home late. I didn't fall asleep until 4 a.m. At 6 a.m. the doorman knocks on my door. "I'm here," he announces, "to walk your dog."

I told him I didn't have a dog.

"Listen," he says, "you're paying $400 rent per month. And that includes having your dog walked."

I finally got rid of the guy by telling him, "Look, if you want, you can walk my wife for an hour."

Language is never a serious barrier to Italians. I remember at my wedding, Papa asked me to make a speech. I said to him, "Papa, what's the use of my making a speech? Most of the guests here are your friends. They can't understand English, and I can't speak Italian."

"Stupid!" he yelled at me. "Stand on top of the table and make a speech with your hands."

One of my big problems is I look like Clark Kent, Superman. I've got a 7-year-old boy. Every time I pass a phone booth he makes me undress. Now, as if that's not bad enough, my wife shouts to the kid, "Tell Superman to take out the garbage," so the kid opens the window, and I've got to jump out. Good thing I live in the basement.

PARADE FOOD EDITOR

What could be more challenging than having a group of ladies over for lunch? Especially when this Seafood Mousse, a literally beautiful dish, provides you with the perfect answer. Scallops and shrimp are folded into a delightfully seasoned mixture of mayonnaise and cream, together with crisp bits of celery. It's luscious—and it's rich, so keep the rest of the menu low in calories. Begin with a clear consommé, and serve thin breadsticks and raw vegetable relishes with the mousse. End with a dessert of fresh fruit.

The new Congress must CRACK DOWN ON CHEATERS

by Jack Anderson

Four years ago, Jack Anderson made the front pages with an exposé (PARADE, March 24, 1963) on "Congressmen Who Cheat." The article precipitated an angry congressional hearing. When Anderson showed up at the hearing with a long statement giving names and details, the congressmen refused to let him testify and quickly adjourned the hearing. Since then, he has written several articles for PARADE about congressional improprieties.

He has now summed up the results of his investigations in a hard-hitting book, Washington Exposé (Public Affairs Press, $5.95), which will be released this month. This article is adapted from one of the most significant chapters in the book.

WASHINGTON, D.C.

As Congress opens this week, 80 newly elected members will take their seats. Most of them will arrive intense and idealistic, still awed by their august environs. But they can expect disillusionment to begin to set in immediately.

More than likely, they already have started their lawmaking careers by breaking the law. For it is almost impossible to get elected to Congress without violating the antiquated Corrupt Practices Act. And probably they already have been taken aside by the old hands and counseled to leave the great decisions to their seniors. The way to get along, they will have been admonished, is to go along.

Next they will discover that congressmen don't always submit to the same code of ethics they demand of others. It is largely left to each member to police his own conduct. Under these circumstances, all too many have been using the public trust for private gain. For the temptations are greater, the opportunities for corruption more abounding, than in any other branch of government.

The newcomers will find that, although the overwhelming majority of their colleagues are honest, many scrupulously so, those who chisel on the taxpayers are protected by a code of condonation and coverup. It is the first commandment of Congress that "Thou shalt not take the name of a colleague in vain." Though the commandment is nowhere recorded, it is as binding as if it were etched on a tablet of stone.

Sen. Joseph Clark (D., Pa.): "All men in our free society face ethical dilemmas. I do not mean to separate members of Congress from the others. But the fact is that the public places all public men on a pedestal and does expect that the standards of public life must be impeccable."

Thus the flagrant abuses of Rep. Adam Clayton Powell (D., N.Y.) were overlooked for years. Not until his defiance of the courts caused a national uproar did his colleagues prepare to move against him. Reps. Lionel Van Deerlin (D., Calif.) and Sam Gibbons (D., Fla.) have announced plans to challenge his right this week to sit in Congress.

Previous articles in PARADE have named names of congressmen who cut corners with the taxpayers' money. [See "Congressmen Who Cheat," March 24, 1963; "Is Congress Protecting Its Members Who Cheat?", May 5, 1963; "Who Owns Your Congressman?", Oct. 27, 1963; "Needed Now: A Code of Ethics for Congressmen," July 10, 1966.] And other articles have called for thoroughgoing reform of congressional ethics. Since then, many bills have been introduced to correct congressional abuses; some have been passed overwhelmingly by both the Senate and House. But, with rare efficiency, the Houses have managed never to act in concert. The House will cast a rousing vote for some improvement, which, unfailingly, will get hung up in the Senate. When the legislative slate is wiped clean at the opening of a new session, it will be the Senate's turn to pass reforms, which the House will carefully ignore. Thus members of both Houses can vote for reforms with full assurance that none will be enacted.

But if reforms get nowhere, members are more diligent about boosting their own benefits. They voted themselves a pay increase, effective in 1965, that pushed their salaries from $22,500 to $30,000 a year. Of this, they set aside $3000 as tax-exempt, thus widening their own tax loophole while the Treasury Department was begging them to close loopholes. They also voted themselves a yearly stationery allowance of $2400 each, another $2400 for field office rental and an indeterminate amount for "clerk hire."

Some members scrounge letterheads from congressional committees so they can pocket their stationery allowance. And a few unscrupulous congressmen have bought liquor, clothes, refrigerators, TV sets and automobiles by putting the salesmen on the congressional payroll until the purchases were paid off.

The legislators have also provided themselves with fringe benefits undreamed of by the most imaginative union leaders. Congressmen who voted against medical benefits for the elderly call regularly at the Capitol dispensary for free flu shots, aspirins, vitamins and tranquilizers. They can also have a tooth filled or an appendix removed cutrate at any military hospital.

Sen. Clifford Case (R., N.J.): "I have long urged adoption of the public disclosure principle. In the coming session I will again introduce my bill to require members and top congressional staff to make an annual report covering their income, gifts, assets and liabilities and all transactions in property."

For a bargain $10.83 a month, members of both houses can buy $20,000 worth of life insurance without a medical examination. They can also qualify for pensions after serving only five years in Congress.

Senators are permitted six, representatives four, round trips a year to their home states at the taxpayers' expense. But for other trips, some big corporation usually has a private plane going the right way. Ling-Temco-Vought often flies Texas congressmen home for the weekend in its $300,000 Learstar. Tennessee Gas Transmission, Armco Steel and a host of other companies also fly the lawmakers around.

Congressmen who pad payrolls and pocket expense money are the penny-ante chiselers. For those with more vision, there are far greater opportunities. A few congressmen have discovered that well-heeled pressure groups in their tireless quest for government benefits are willing to pass around private benefits to the right people. For favors on Capitol Hill, corporations have been known to pay off in stock tips, business franchises and legal fees. Unions offer undercover help and financial support during political campaigns.

The back door to many a congressman's office is through his law firm. Almost two-thirds of the members of Congress are lawyers; few bother to remove their shingles when elected, as a judge is required to do when chosen for the bench. Some congressmen scrupulously disassociate themselves from clients who do business with the government. A few use their power as legislators to help clients. Others conduct their business just inside the law.

I have made spot checks into the clientele of 60 or so congressional law firms. With few exceptions, they represent banks, real-estate firms and other companies that have a vital interest in legislation. Sen. Everett Dirksen (R., Ill.), whose sagging face, woolly hair and organ voice are beloved in the Senate, persuaded the late President Kennedy to appoint his friend Harold Woodward to the Federal Power Commission, which makes billion-dollar decisions affecting the oil and gas industry. Subsequently, Dirksen wheedled President Johnson into naming still another friend, Carl Bagge, to the same body. It is

Sen. Jack Miller (R., Ia.): "I declared at the time of the Bobby Baker investigation that the Senate and House should have a code of ethics. The legislative profession should not stand in contrast to the legal profession and judiciary. I'm hopeful prompt action will be taken."

Rep. Joseph Resnick (D., N.Y.): "Business found a long time ago that improper activity by any one company can cause damage to all companies in the same industry. As a result hundreds of companies band together and police themselves. The system isn't foolproof, but every member knows the rules."

worth recording that faraway in Peoria, Ill., Dirksen's law firm represents Panhandle Eastern Pipe Line, one of the giant gas wholesalers, whose economic well-being depends upon the decisions of the Federal Power Commission.

Some congressmen contend that they need their law firms to return to if the voters send them packing. Others formally divorce themselves from their law partners, but unofficially continue to look out for the same interests.

The outside interests of some congressmen go far beyond law firms. A startling number are directors of companies. More than two dozen own shares in radio and television stations. Others operate farms that benefit from agricultural legislation. Many senators and representatives actively trade on the stock market, buying and selling shares of corporations whose profits they influence. Some legislators conceal their trading by purchasing stock under other names.

In the congressmen's behalf, many note that outside income is often necessary to offset their campaign expenditures. Even the most scrupulously honest, it is said, must turn to those with an ax to grind on Capitol Hill—the great unions and corporations—for financial support, since it is not forthcoming from the public. These congressmen maintain that it is not surprising that members sometimes stand up for special interests who have contributed to their campaigns. What is surprising is that so few of them do.

The last session of Congress passed a new—and controversial—bill to partially finance presidential campaigns from the Federal Treasury. It is possible that the bill will be amended to extend the funds to congressional campaigns as well.

But this would eliminate only one of the sources of congressional conflict of interests. More pressing is the need for reform of the congressional code of ethics.

Sen. Wallace Bennett (R., Utah): "The Ten Commandments and the Sermon on the Mount comprise the greatest code of ethics in history. However, their existence has not eliminated the evils they condemn. Every person makes his own code and has to measure himself against this standard."

Past experience has proven, however, that Congress simply won't overhaul its procedures without strong public pressure. This means you must write your congressman and let him know you are watching his record. Ask what he is doing to establish an effective code of ethics for Congress. The Senate finally got around to forming an Ethics Committee after the Bobby Baker scandals. But Speaker John McCormack has quietly blocked the establishment of a similar committee in the House. Demand of your congressman that the House follow the Senate's example. Let him know you are concerned about the scandals which have become so commonplace on Capitol Hill that public faith in Congress has been undermined.

As an investigative reporter, I have poked into the back-rooms of Congress for two decades seeking out corruption. I am convinced that most members are honest and upright. They probably have higher standards than the people in most other professions. But the time has come for honest congressmen to band together and bring in check their less honest colleagues.

One American answer to foreign film stars is Faye Dunaway, 25, of Bascom, Fla. Tall, sexy, talented, she is in demand by all the major film studios.

FAYE DUNAWAY: STRONG, SOUTHERN, SEXY AND STRIVING FOR STARDOM

by Lloyd Shearer

WHAT'S wrong with American actresses?

Why is it, despite the countless attempts in recent years, Hollywood has been unable to take a beautiful, buxom American girl and develop her into a full-fledged screen star?

The industry has been able to engineer the trick with foreign females like Sophia Loren, an Italian lovely endowed with massive lung equipment; Julie Andrews, a British music hall singer blessed with a phenomenal vocal range, and Julie Christie, a diminutive freewheeling English kook with whom the younger generation identifies. But when it comes to homegrown, native-bred American girls, stalks of provocative pulchritude in the pinup tradition of Betty Grable, Jane Russell, Marilyn Monroe, Ava Gardner, Lana Turner and many others—Hollywood has been unable of late to cut the mustard.

How come? Are American actresses less talented, less sexy, less magnetic, less appealing than the foreign brood?

Dan Polier, vice president of National General Theatres, who came out of Charlotte, N.C., 25 years ago to develop into one of the most astute film buyers in the nation, declares, "American girls are just as talented and well-endowed as any others. It's just that Hollywood has never been able to make a star. It's always the public that makes them."

THE TIDE IS TURNING

"In years gone by," Polier points out, "Hollywood offered the public mostly American actresses to choose from. Occasionally there was an Ingrid Bergman and a Greta Garbo, but 90 percent of the girls were domestic stuff. That's why we had so many American stars. But when TV came in, we had to concentrate on the foreign market, so we've been offering Audrey Hepburn, Rex Harrison, Peter O'Toole, Simone Signoret, Brigitte Bardot, a whole crew of British directors, Italian stars, an international mélange."

"But I believe," he continues, "that with the current disillusionment in TV, the tide is turning. We're going back to American girls. Have you heard of this new kid, Faye Dunaway? She comes from some little town in Florida, Bascom, I think. They say if anyone's got the star magic, she's the one."

Faye Dunaway is a tall (5 feet 7) hazel-eyed, Southern-reared brunette of 25 who's played her first three screen parts (all starring roles) as a blonde. She is well-trained, well-educated, beautifully proportioned in the vital anatomical departments, high cheekboned and therefore immensely photogenic, fanatically motivated, fame hungry, ambition driven but clever enough to assuage the unrelenting drive and appealing enough to arouse a lasting rapport with the public.

Her first three films will be released within the next six months, so you can pass judgment yourself on the star potential of this actress who is so highly in demand that three studios have put her under option.

Her films are: The Happening, produced by Sam Spiegel (Bridge on the River Kwai, Lawrence of Arabia), in which she plays a thrill-seeking Miami youngster opposite Tony Quinn; Hurry Sundown, produced by Otto Preminger (Exodus, The Cardinal, Anatomy of a Murder), in which she plays the sensitive, suffering wife of a Georgia dirt farmer, and Bonnie and Clyde, produced by actor Warren Beatty, opposite whom she stars in the story of Clyde Barrow and Bonnie Parker, famous thieves of the Depression-ridden 1930's.

There are several producers in Hollywood euphemistically known in the trade as "burns." They are out for a quick buck and will cast their films with wives, mistresses and girl friends of financial backers. The producers of Miss Dunaway's pictures are not of that ilk; their opinion of her is based on sound, honest, experienced talent judgment.

Says Otto Preminger, a former actor himself, who frequently wears brass knuckles on his tongue: "Faye Dunaway is remarkably good in my film. I first saw her in an off-Broadway show called Hogan's Goat in which she played a sobbing drunk for two hours every night. She was tremendous, so I made a test of her. And the test was very good. I signed her for Hurry Sundown. Faye has tremendous drive, great talent, much more so than the ordinary American girl. I am convinced she will become a star. I have put her under personal option. I have never seen anyone work so hard. I am not a prophet, but if this girl doesn't make it, then there is no justice in the world."

Listen to Sam Spiegel, who cast the unknown Peter O'Toole in Lawrence of Arabia and Alec Guinness in Bridge on the River Kwai: "In Happening our big star is Tony Quinn. He had cast approval. He talked to Faye Dunaway. He watched her work. He said quickly, 'She's good enough for me.' Tony has worked with the best actresses in the world. When he says a girl is good, you must accept that."

"SHE'S OVERWHELMING"

Arthur Penn, who directed the Florida beauty in Bonnie and Clyde, is a perceptive judge of personalities. "I believe," he says of Faye, "that she is a lonely, complicated, torn, intelligent, ambitious girl. Her talent is crying out for expression, and she herself is crying out for fame."

"In this picture she insisted upon doing her own stunts. Her body is marked with bruises. It's almost a compulsion on her part to feel, to live the character she's playing. We had several scenes in filthy ice-cold water. She turned blue and almost shivered to death, but she wouldn't come out. She suffered physical pain. To look emaciated like the real Bonnie Parker, she wore an eight-pound belt of sand around her waist day and night, lost 25 pounds, refused to eat one full meal."

"There are some girls," Penn told me, "who become incredibly transformed on film. Faye is one of those. She's striking, attractive, very sexy offscreen. But on film, she is absolutely overwhelming. This girl wants to be a star. She should be a star. And the public granting, she's going to be a star or die in the attempt. I tell you this: In all my years I have never seen a more possessed young actress. What drives her, what motivates her, I don't know. But driven she certainly is."

away (her full name), your first impression is that here stands a strong yet sweet, attractive, simple, feminine young woman. Her eyes are soft, her voice is tender, her half-smile ingratiating. She generates none of the killer instinct, no sign of the castrator, none of the masculinity which generally characterizes young actresses who want desperately to become screen stars.

It is only when she warms up in conversation, when she opens the window to her mind, when she gives tongue to thought that her motivation reveals itself.

"I was born in Florida. I come from farmers on both sides of the family, not very rich farmers. My own father is a sergeant in the Army. I was 4 when he came back from service in Japan. We moved around from one Army camp to another. I have a younger brother. We never had very much money. My mother made all our clothes. The South used to be very class-conscious.

On set of Hurry Sundown, Faye gets direction from veteran producer Otto Preminger.

"When I was a sophomore in high school my parents got divorced. The effect it had on me, I'm still finding that out. I go to an analyst in New York City where I have an apartment on 55th Street. That's my home.

"I became an actress because I have a desperately pathetic wish to be loved, to be admired, to be respected. Maybe it's because in school [University of Florida and Boston, University] I waited on tables to stay abreast of the wealthy Pi Phi sorority kids I ran around with. I felt inferior because I didn't have the money, the background they had. But I tried to compensate for that by making good grades. I've always been a driven, self-propelled person.

"I want to be a star, I want to be famous, I want to be rich, but most of all I want to be a healthy human being. I have this need for constant reassurance, constant approval; the constant belief that I am worthy and capable of accomplishment. I want desperately to belong. Maybe it's because my family traveled so much in my formative years, from one Army camp to another. And surely there is nothing more cleanly structured, no society more clearly defined than life in the Army. The great wall between officers and enlisted men. All my life I've come from the other side of the tracks. Maybe that's what's driven me on.

"I used to love my father very much. But as the years went on and he and my mother grew apart, I guess we did, too. Now they've both remarried, and I don't see my father anymore. But I still have this desperate desire to be loved, to excel in everything, to win admiration and respect, especially from men.

"I am 25. I have never been married. I am in the process of trying to find out who and what I really am and why I behave the way I do. There's a theory that girls become actresses because they don't like the world into which they were born and want to escape into a fantasy world. Maybe that was true of me for awhile.

"I have been a very lucky girl in this business. I have never starved or been out of work or had to make it the hard way. At Boston University, Lloyd Richards, a visiting director, recommended me to Gadge Kazan [Elia Kazan] who was casting for the Lincoln Center company in New York. I read for Gadge, selections from Twelfth Night and Orpheus Descending. And he sent me over to Robert Bolt who was doing A Man for All Seasons. It was just a few days after my graduation from Boston, and I stayed with the play for a season. Then I returned to Lincoln Center for Kazan's production of After the Fall. I got a good training in the theater. Then Sam Spiegel caught me in Hogan's Goat and signed me for Happening. I've been in pictures since.

"I got $30,000 for Bonnie and Clyde, $25,000 for Hurry Sundown. People keep telling me all the time, 'You've got it made, Faye. You've got it made.' But deep down I'm always running hard because I'm running scared. The children of the poor, the children of the divorced are not the most secure people in the world."

Faye Dunaway's mother, Mrs. Grace Hartshorn of Columbia, S.C., who works in the Quartermaster Corps at Fort Jackson, S.C., says: "Faye was born with drive. I knew that when I was carrying her. She fought her way out at 7 months, and she's never stopped driving since. She will make it to the top in Hollywood or anyplace else. She's that kind of person. I only hope that somewhere at the end when she finds enough love, enough money, enough status—whatever it is that she needs—I hope then that she finds a little peace of mind."

This is a GM Original:
It can turn 12 volts into 25,000.

This is a GM Replacement:
It performs the same feat.

GM Originals have an act that's tough to follow. But not for GM Replacements. Because they're the same in every way.

Good thing, too. Especially if you ever have to replace anything as important as the ignition coil. That's the rugged part that takes regular battery voltage and steps it up to the voltage necessary for good engine performance. Which could be up to 25,000 volts!

You can get GM Parts, in GM and United Delco packages, just about everywhere. Go where they use them. Good service goes with good parts.

NEVER URGE A CHILD TO EAT

by Edwin F. Patton, M.D.

Happy babies and happy mothers are the result when young children are not forced to eat.

No well child will eat less food than his body requires.

He may want less than you think he should, but if he needs it, he will eat it. If he doesn't eat it, he doesn't need it.

Pressure him and you are just wasting your time, as well as risking his developing into a finicky eater or—worse—a case of juvenile obesity.

Years ago an experiment was conducted with children 2 to 3 years old; they were given free and unassisted choice of food. All kinds of edibles were set before them, and they were turned loose. Of course, it was pretty messy, but records showed that instinctively they fulfilled all needs. They might go on binges of eggs or bananas or something for awhile, but before long they would balance it out without interference.

This scheme would hardly be practical for general use. In our plan of living, children—of all ages—do need guidance to see that they include all the essentials for energy, growth, replacement and prime function at all times. But as to quantity requirements, the child himself knows better than you or I or Grandmother—or even Dr. Spock. He will ingest that much himself if given the chance.

REQUIREMENTS VARY

No two children need exactly the same amount of food. And each child's quantity requirement varies from day to day, month to month, year to year. Most newborn babies are seemingly insatiable, and there is good reason. Do you know that the average infant grows 100 percent in substance during his first four months or so? And do you know that if you and I were to duplicate his intake on a proportionate basis of our body weight compared to his, we would have to drink between three and four gallons of milk a day?

This ravenous state gradually subsides as the baby's rate of growth decreases to about 50 percent the second half of the first year, 25 percent or so the next year, then less and less until about puberty, when it takes another spurt.

At 2 to 3 years a child's appetite usually hits a flat spot, and his needs are satisfied with so relatively little that it becomes obvious.

It is usually Grandma who first notices, becomes alarmed, and rushes to the doctor with the wail, "My grandchild won't eat."

Examination reveals a blooming healthy, normal specimen, perfect in all regards—even as to diet and food intake.

But do you think Grandma can be convinced? Never! She knows better, and goes on coaxing, cajoling, bribing, even forcing poor little Merwin to gulp down what he doesn't need. Vitamins are pushed, and every expedient to increase appetite is tried.

If you get snagged into doing these things, you will get no more into him than he will get into himself if left on his own. All you may succeed in doing is to poke tomorrow's quota down him today and make him dislike many foods. Then he'll get choosy and lose the distribution and balance of nutritional elements.

I have known several children who learned how to counter such force-feeding by learning to vomit at will. And you have never seen such an expression of satisfaction as spread over the faces of these cherubs when their pleasant little purpose had been accomplished. That cured Grandma in a hurry.

I grant you there is nothing more exasperating than a child who dawdles interminably, only playing with his food. But pushing the spoon into his mouth as he keeps turning his head to avoid it will get you nowhere.

The only help for this is to give his needs a chance to catch up with his supply, or even to fall behind a bit. Let him get good and empty, and he'll consume more of his food and less of your time and patience.

It won't hurt him. A little genuine hunger can be a mighty salutary thing. It is a sensation most people in this country have never actually experienced. What they call hunger is not really hunger but simply lack of repletion.

Most American kids have gone through life with stomachs kept stuffed to the limit during all their waking hours. This has led them to the impression that if—heaven forbid—their stomachs ever reach a point where they are not crammed, they are dying of hunger.

The lavishly stocked cupboard and refrigerator take care of that dire situation.

Eating is no longer a matter of three meals a day with perhaps an occasional snack. It is a continuous operation, like breathing and heart action. No matter what else they are doing—watching TV, or sports or movies, visiting friends or the zoo, reading, studying, even playing—children must accompany it with eating. It has become such a habit that they do it unconsciously. They couldn't tell you now what they ate just ten minutes ago.

Many a time I have had a child come into my office about 5:30 p.m. with a fracture or something requiring anesthesia. We don't like to give an anesthetic to anybody unless his stomach is empty because of the danger of vomiting and aspirating vomitus into the windpipe. So I have asked these children—and their parents—if the child has had any food during the last four hours. "Oh, no, not a thing" is the answer. "Since lunch he has been in school, then on the playground. No chance to eat."

Well, the anesthetic is given, and that empty stomach responds by upchucking a load of partially digested apples, grapes, cookies, candy, an ice cream cone—you name it.

JUVENILE OBESITY

It's no wonder that pediatrics is plagued these days by a condition very discouraging and hard to do anything about—juvenile obesity.

When I went into pediatrics 40 years ago, the opposite condition, undernutrition, plagued us, but it did offer some chance of medical correction. Obesity cannot be corrected medically. It requires self-discipline. And where is there any of that today?

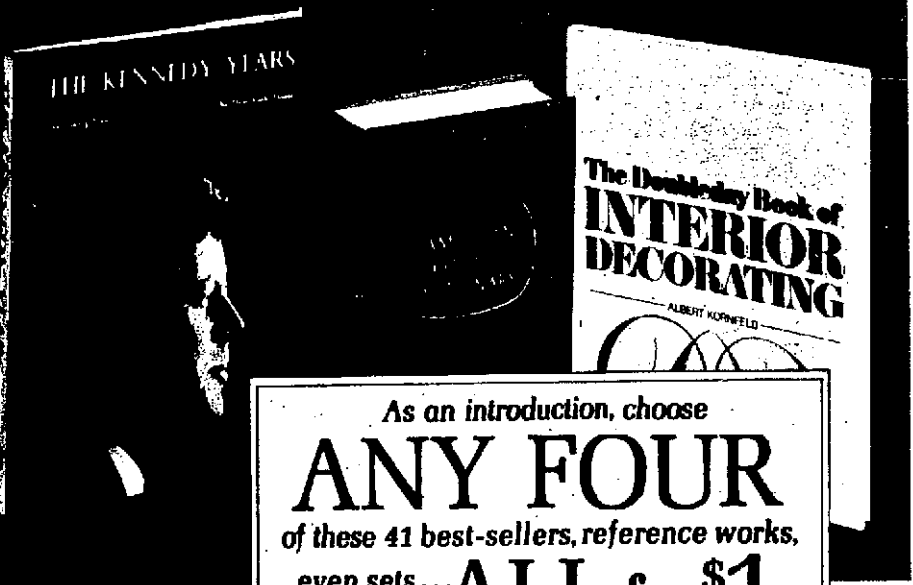

When a child becomes ill, he usually cuts down eating; a good thing, dictated by nature as a prime essential of treatment.

Of course, if illness continues or becomes serious, encouragement to eat may have to be part of the medical management.

For the well child, however, if you adopt the no-pressure approach, mealtime can be not an ordeal, but fun.

That staggering food bill can go down a little, too.

I apply for Accumulative Accident Insurance to become effective day policy is issued and dated. I understand that it takes about 10 days to issue a policy and agree (1) to pay the premium of 65¢ per month; (2) designate person who collects for my newspaper as my messenger to deliver premium to above office; (3) that policy will automatically expire if I fail to pay premium when due. Insurance does not cover persons who have lost both hands and feet, or the sight of both eyes.

☐ FOR FIRST POLICY IN FAMILY—Send no money. Pay carrier 65¢ each month at the same time you pay for paper.
